LIKE SAVING MONEY? SEE THE "BUY OF THE WEEK" AT PETER POLLEN FORD

IS IT $50 OR $450?

Prevue Payoff Puzzle contestants have an added challenge this week.

They won't know whether they are shooting for prize money of $50 or $450 in the current puzzle which appears in today's Times Prevue section.

The correct solution to each week's puzzle is normally received on Wednesday, deadline day for entries. The solution, for security purposes, is sent to the Bank of Nova Scotia's Douglas and Hillside branch and held until after preliminary judging has been completed.

But this week, most likely because of the Christmas mail pile-up, the puzzle solution didn't show up Wednesday, Thursday or today. And since the bank is closed Saturday it will be Monday at the earliest before it is known if there was a winner or winners of last week's contest.

Meanwhile, there are 21 entries which have passed the preliminary judging, which means there could be a nice $400 windfall waiting for some contestant.

Or, on the other hand, maybe this week's puzzle will bring $450 to an entrant.

PRODUCTION BOOST VOWED

Times News Service

DOHA, Quatar — Saudi Arabia broke with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries today and refused to go along with a two-step 15-per-cent price increase decreed by 11 of the 13 OPEC members.

The Saudis said they would hold their price rise to five per cent and increase their production, already OPEC'S largest.

The United Arab Emirates (UAE), fifth-largest producer in the cartel, joined Saudi Arabia in the rebellion.

Oil company executives today began trying to work out the implications of the two-tier price increase.

Spokesmen for the major American oil companies said their executives were studying the OPEC communique and reports from the Persian Gulf sheikdom to work out whether they should be happy or sad.

"It's incredible," one oil company executive said. "At first glance, the big question is what it will do to OPEC."

At an American independent oil company another executive said: "Our guys are in a state of confusion. They're standing around looking at each other, at a loss to say anything. Probably they won't know the true situation until they get the price lists."

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, claimed the others will be unable to get the higher price and told reporters, "We expect the West to show a sign of appreciation" in its policies toward the Arab-Israeli conflict and the so-called North-South economic conference between the industrialized and underdeveloped countries.

Saudi Arabia and the UAE agreed to increase their oil prices five per cent on Jan. 1 and to maintain those prices for the next year.

The other 11 OPEC members — Iran, Iraq, Venezuela, Kuwait, Nigeria, Libya, Indonesia, Algeria, Qatar, Gabon and Ecuador — insisted on a 15-per-cent increase in two stages: 10 per cent on Jan. 1 and five per cent on July 1.

Much of the oil imported by Canada for use in the eastern part of the country comes from Venezuela.

A communique issued by the 11-country majority at the close of OPEC's ministerial conference said the base price of $11.51 U.S. a barrel of crude oil will be raised by $1.19 on Jan. 1 and by another 60 cents on July 1, bringing it then to a total $13.30 a barrel.

In first reaction to the increase, the nine-country European Common Market declared the oil price rise by the OPEC majority will "add to the already existing factors of uncertainty for economic recovery."

It added: "It will strengthen inflationary tendencies, which are still strong, and will worsen the imbalances in international payments."

Britons, already hard-pressed by inflation, groaned at the prospect of higher gasoline and fuel prices certain to follow the OPEC decision.

Officials in Japan, which is practically entirely dependent on imported oil, expressed concern over the price increase, but said the OPEC split made its impact lighter than the government had expected. Much of Japan's oil comes from Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

Yamani said Saudi Arabia will turn its vast production capacity loose to meet the market. He said he expects it will be impossible for the other OPEC members to get the prices they agreed on.

"I don't expect the 10 per cent to be enforced in the market," he told a news conference.

The split was the first crack in the solid front of the international oil cartel since it began pushing up prices in 1973. The development promised confusion for the world oil trade, an uncertain future for OPEC and possibly a break for oil consumers.

CHRISTMAS LOOKS GREEN

Put any thoughts of a white Christmas or skiing and snowshoeing over the holidays around Victoria out of your mind.

The weatherman says at the present time the odds are 10 to 1 that it won't snow over the holidays — a prediction which should please citizens who prefer balmy weather.

There would have to be a complete change in the weather pattern to bring snow and ice to Victoria and there are no indications yet that this will happen, he says.

"As long as the warm westerly flow of air from the Pacific persists, the weather will remain unchanged," he said.

There is always a chance the weather could change. Even if it did, he said, it's doubtful there would be sufficient snow on the lower mountain slopes of Vancouver Island for skiing.

Flu Shots Suspended One Week

British Columbia has suspended its flu immunization program for at least a week, Dr. Kenneth Benson, associate deputy minister of community health services, announced Thursday. It is a precautionary step and there is no evidence of any problem with the provincial program, he said.

The move follows a halt in the U.S. swine flu vaccination program for the second time in two months, this time to investigate reports that some vaccinated people have developed Guillain-Barre syndrome, a disease affecting the nervous system.

American medical spokesmen stressed there is no proven association between the swine flu vaccine and the disease but the suspension is "prudent" until the possibility of such a link is checked.

No cases associated with flu vaccine have been reported in Canada.

In Ottawa, federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde told a news conference Thursday night that he has asked the provinces to suspend immunization of people between 20 and 50 until Jan. 1 by which time he expects to have a detailed report from the U.S.

But B.C., which has only been offering a combination vaccine to older or chronically ill people anyway, decided to suspend its program.

In the Capital district, about 7,000 people over 65 or with a chronic condition which would be aggravated by flu have received shots at clinics last month and this week. Thursday's announcement led to cancellation of the last clinic in Victoria today.

The vaccine given locally is different from the American, protecting against both Swine flu and the Victoria strain, and was not manufactured in the U.S.

Elsewhere in Canada, other provinces and the federal government were also offering monovalent vaccine, providing just Swine flu protection, to all adults. The American move and Lalonde's announcement has resulted in a variety of responses across the country. Manitoba will continue to offer vaccine to the high risk group.

Suspension of the U.S. program followed reports of at least 94 cases of Guillain-Barre syndrome, also known as French polio.

Four of the 94 persons died but health officials stressed there was no evidence of a direct link between swine flu vaccines and the deaths.

All four victims had been given the swine flu vaccine. As many as 50 million U.S. residents have had flu shots.

Symptoms of the syndrome include growing paralysis, loss of limb use and breathing difficulties. The syndrome is first identified by a tingling in the feet. It then works its way up both sides of the body.

6-0 VOTE AGAINST PORT

PORT ANGELES (AP) — Reflecting local criticism of a plan to use this city's port as an oil superport, city council voted 6-0 this week to amend ordinances prohibiting such a development.

Earlier, council voted to amend the city's comprehensive land use plan in order to bar an oil terminal. The zoning action makes the earlier move formal.

NDP Will Sit Out

There'll be no dancing for NDP MLAs at the province's state ball this year, caucus chairman Karen Sanford said today.

Sanford (NDP—Comox) said NDP members will not attend the ball set for Jan. 14, three days after the opening of the legislative session.

Premier Bill Bennett last year cancelled the ball saying that because of the state of the economy there was "nothing to dance about."

But this year Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said there is cause for celebration and the ball would go on at Government House.

However, Sanford said the economy is in a depressed condition because of Socred government policies.

"In the present circumstances, the last thing the people of B.C. want is a state ball to provide free drink and food to politicians at the expense of services to people."

Tory MP Sees Red

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Conservative MP protested in the House of Commons Thursday the "quiet" appointment of a former active member of the Communist Party to a "sensitive" position on the government's commission regulating radio and television broadcasting.

Dan McKenzie (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) stated in the House that Jean-Louis Gagnon, appointed a member of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission this summer, "has a long record of communist affiliation and activity."

Speaker James Jerome cut McKenzie off when he tried to raise the appointment as an emergency issue for debate Thursday, but the MP declared that he will renew his efforts today.

McKenzie said the appointment of Gagnon to the CRTC was made this summer and received little if any publicity.

Plane Rescue Lauded

Quick action by Canadian and U.S. rescuers is credited with averting a tragedy in the forced landing Thursday of an AirWest Airlines Twin Otter in Juan de Fuca Strait. (See also Page 19.)

While praise was coming in for the rescue of all 16 people aboard the plane, the federl Ministry of Transport was launching an investigation into the incident.

So far there has been no explanation for the ditching of the plane in heavy fog about four miles south of Victoria.

Rear Admiral Andrew L. Collier, commander of Canadian Forces in the Pacific, sent a message to rescuers from both countries commending them for the speedy rescue work.

"The continued unselfish co-operation of all agencies, United States and Canadian, only emphasizes the outstanding devotion to duty of those engaged in saving lives," he said.

The admiral conveyed his personal "bravo zulus" to all those involved.

A forces spokesman said the term "bravo zulu" is navalese for "extremely well done."

The investigation is being handled by the MoT's aircraft accident investigation branch.

The 18-passenger, $500,000 Twin Otter was on a scheduled flight from Vancouver to Victoria when the accident occurred.

Pilot Ted Mitchell of Chilliwack radioed a distress signal at 11:20 a.m. after the plane hit the water in heavy fog.

Yule Sales Run At 1975 Levels

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria's unseasonably mild weather has depressed sales of heavy clothing and ski equipment — but otherwise Christmas sales are about the same as last year.

"You can bet I'm dreaming of a white Chirstmas," one department store manager said.

"I would love to see some snow. It doesn't have to snow right in Victoria as long as it falls somewhere on Vancouver Island where there is some skiing."

In addition, a cold snap would be helpful in moving some of the heavier clothing styles that normally sell briskly at this time of year.

Store managers asked not to be identified by name or by store for competitive reasons but they told a remarkably similar story.

If sales are as good as expected in the final week, receipts will be ahead of last December — which was a banner month — by a modest one or two per cent.

"Most stores would be happy to match the sales of last December," one manager said.

There is still evidence of an economic slowdown. Few people are buying deep freezes, stoves or other major appliances as presents.

But there is boom in less expensive frilly items like perfume, jewelry, new kitchen gadgets and the things designed for those people who have everything.

NEWS BRIEFS

BASFORD SIGNS PELTIER ORDER

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford has signed an order calling for the extradition of American Indian Movement (AIM) activist Leonard Peltier, the minister's office said in a news release todayy.

Peltier, a 32-year-old Sioux from the troubled Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota, is wanted in the U.S. on charges of murdering two FBI agents. He was arrested earlier this year in Alberta and sent to Vancouver where he lost a fight against extradition.

AIB Penalty

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board administrator, Donald Tansley, ordered Nordair Ltd. of Montreal Wednesday to pay the federal government $1,500 for compensation overpayments made to four dispatchers and two assistant dispatchers.

Suspect Arrested

MUNICH (AP) — A 31-year-old underworld figure, Detlef Grashei, was arrested early today as a prime suspect in the $8.3-million kidnapping of Richard Oetker, heir to a West German food processing and shipping fortune, police reported. Oetker, 25, was freed Thursday night after his family paid a ransom of $8.3 million, the largest on record for a kidnapping in West Germany.

Aid Conditional

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Investigators for the House select committee on assassinations believe they have uncovered a lead to whether a second gunman was involved in the assassination of John F. Kennedy. House sources said the investigators also feel there are good grounds to further explore other aspects of the Kennedy slaying.

Face of Hunger

Dr. Lotta Can S-t-r-e-t-c-h a Dollar

What can you buy for a dollar, or even two or three or more?

It's an all-too-familiar complaint, especially at this time of year when the budget never seems to cover all those alluring gift ideas and other Christmas goodies.

Although the dollar's purchasing power may seem pretty feeble in self-indulgent Canadian terms, at least one sensible shopper knows how to make it stretch a long way in helping the undernourished and needy of this world.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, has the facts and figures at her fingertips. And to read them is to place our own grumbling about the cost of living in a global perspective.

Did you know, for example, that:

One cent ships two cups of milk to a hungry child in Bangladesh?

—Twenty-two cents (a little less than the price of a cup of coffee) will buy a day's barley ration in Korea?

—Or that $6.86 (about the price of a new set of Christmas tree lights) is enough to send a child for one year to a primary school in Bangladesh?

There are numerous other examples from Dr. Lotta's shopping list of basic necessities; items that are far removed from the frills of a Canadian Christmas. But it's the Christmas spirit of giving she wants to tap in USC's annual fund-raising drive in Victoria.

Her message is simple and direct: "Our USC is an effective and loving channel without any red tape, leading directly toward a great variety of far-reaching, excellent projects in the fields of agriculture, education and training, health and family planning. Please help."

This year's goal in Greater Victoria is $30,000.

Residents wishing to help the USC's work spanning 147 projects in 12 countries can mail their donations to the Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, or bring them directly to the business office at 2621 Douglas.

Contributions are also accepted at any branch fo the Bank of Nava Scotia.

Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

JAPAN PM GIVES UP

TOKYO (AP) — Premier Takeo Miki gave up his struggle to remain in power today, clearing the way for the election of conservative economist Takeo Fukuda.

Miki, 69, announced he would resign to assume responsibility for the governing Liberal-Democratic party's election setback Dec. 5. It was unable to win a majority of the seats in the lower house of the Diet, the Japanese parliament, but got the support of enough independent members to give it a working majority of nine votes.

Liberal-Democratic members of parliament will meet Dec. 23 to elect Miki's successor as party leader, and the next day the Diet will elect the new leader premier.

Although there have been murmurs of opposition to the 71-year-old Fukuda within the faction-ridden party, his biggest obstacles were removed Thursday. Former party secretary-general Yasuhiro Nakasone, the leader of an important faction, said he would throw his votes to him. And Miki's own faction said it would go along with the party majority.

Miki, a progressive who does not have a large personal following within the generally conservative party, was the party elders' compromise choice when Fukuda and Finance Minister Masayoshi Ohira were deadlocked in a power struggle after the resignation of Kakuei Tanaka as premier in December, 1974.

Miki was a victim of the Lockheed scandal although he himself was not involved in the $12.1 million in payoffs by the U.S. aircraft company to promote its sales in Japan. The party turned on him because he pushed the investigation into the scandal with such vigor that Tanaka was indicted, some other leaders of the party were implicated and the election setback resulted.

Plane Rescue Lauded

plane landed nearby and loaded the 16 people and one dog aboard. There was one other dog but it vanished.

About halfway through the rescue operation, the downed plane suddenly listed and one of its wings came in contact with the helicopter's rotors, putting the chopper out of commission.

The survivors were then transferred to a National Harbors Board pilot boat, brought to Victoria and checked out at local hospitals before being released.

The U.S. helicopter was later towed to Port Angeles.

An attempt was made to tow in the Twin Otter but it sank in about 306 feet of water shortly after 4 p.m.

The whole rescue operation, from the time the distress signal went out until the survivors arrived at the Pilotage Authority wharf, took only about two hours.

Norm Gold, spokesman for AirWest, said this was the first time passengers got wet in eight years of regular flights between Vancouver Island.

"We average 50 flights a day back and forth across the pond and there have been no crashes or forced landings before."

Rhodesian Forces Claim 51 Blacks

UMTALI, Rhodesia (Reuter) — Rhodesian troops backed by air support early today ended a day-long action inside Mazambique, said informed sources in this eastern garrison town.

They said the operation began when the army was sent in "hot pursuit" of a group of nationalist guerrillas.

It said that 51 black nationalist guerrillas were killed in this and other recent operations and that a 19-year-old white Rhodesian soldier also died.

It was thought the Rhodesians also clashed with Mozambique Frelimo forces, the sources said.

Security forces headquarters in Salisbury said a "follow-up operation" was launched after a guerrilla base camp was discovered near the eastern border. It did not elaborate.

There have been several "hot-pursuit" operations by the Rhodesians, mainly from this area, in the last four months. Government officials have said that the army reserves the right to chase guerrillas across the border if they are active inside Rhodesia.

Nantucket Tanker Abandoned

BOSTON (AP) — The grounded tanker Argo Merchant, its hold still full of industrial oil, has been abandoned in building seas off Nantucket Island.

The ship's three senior crew members and a force of 11 U.S. Coast Guard specialists were removed late Thursday "for their own safety," a coast guard spokesman said.

By early today the tanker had developed a 10-degree list and its starboard side was awash in seven-foot seas, he said.

If the ship breaks up, 7.6 million gallons of heavy oil might be spilled and washed into the Georges Banks, one of the world's richest fishing grounds.

Rear-Admiral James Stewart, commander of the coast guard's First District, reported "some cracks in the bulkheads and some buckling of decks" by Thursday afternoon.

The 640-foot Liberian tanker, en route from Venezuela to Salem, Mass., ran aground on shoals early Wednesday.

BCGEU Accord Reached

A tentative agreement has been reached between the provincial government and the B.C. Government Employees Union on a new wage contract for 34,000 public service employees.

BCGEU general secretary John Fryer said Thursday night union negotiators are recommending acceptance of the wage contract even though they are unhappy with the terms.

Details are not being released until they are presented to the members and Fryer said he doesn't expect the vote to be completed until the middle or end of January.

The dispute has been mediated by Clark Gilmour who was at Thursday's meeting in Vancouver when the final details were hammered out.

Gilmour was appointed after talks broke off in October for the second time.

Following the earlier breakdown, the BCGEU members voted 61.5 per cent to reject an offer by the B.C. Government Emloyee Relations Bureau of $45 a month, effective Oct. 1, 1976.

At that time the union was asking for $65-a-month plus a government offer on retroactivity.

It is not known whether there was any retroactivity built into the tentative agreement.

Ten of the 13 BCGEU components have been without a wage contract since October, 1975.

However, corrections branch employees have been without a contract since March 31, 1975, while administrative support employees and ferry service officers have been in the same position since June 30, 1975.

While this has meant no actual wage increases, there have been hikes through a cost-of-living clause, which was part of a master agreement reached last fall.

Sask. Lottery Sales Illegal

SASKATOON (CP) — Western Express lottery tickets being sold in Saskatchewan are not authorized by the Western Canada Lottery Foundation, the general manager of the foundation's Saskatchewan division said Thursday.

Bob Ritchie said the distributor of the tickets is breaking the bylaws of the foundation and his licence can be taken away if he is discovered.

Christmas Sales Match Last Year

are selling at a pace rated as "fairly good." These include toasters, blenders, electric kettles and frying pans as well as the inevitable rush on electric can openers at Christmas.

Camera sales are a little higher than in 1975.

A large number of people continue to charge their purchases, although there has been no increase in credit over last December.

Toys enjoyed a big year last December and sales are expected to be even higher this year, according to the early trend.

The biggest rush on toys will be early next week. Video games are the most popular single item but citizen band radio sets are a close second among the more expensive gifts.

Dolls and dump trucks are selling briskly for the younger children.

One manager said he had noticed an increase in sales of lamps and fireplace accessories this year.

One interesting change noticed by one manager was a sharp increase in the number of shoppers from up-Island.

"I guess this is a result of the ferry fares. I have talked to people who have come all the way from Campbell River to shop in Victoria. They used to take the ferry across to Vancover from Nanaimo but now they are coming here. They come down on Saturday, spend the night in Victoria, and then go back home on Sunday. Our Saturday night shopping has never been this busy before."

He said many of the shoppers came from Port Alberni, Parksville and Nanaimo as well. There are a number of Duncan shoppers but this is not unusual at this time of year.

Public Figures Laud Caouette As Force for Canadian Unity

OTTAWA (CP) — Real Caouette, a flamboyant orator and a man described by his political opponents as a force for Canadian unity, died Thursday of heart failure.

The former leader of the populist Social Credit party, which drew its strength in latter years primarily from rural Quebec, succumbed after a long illness at 59.

His death prompted the immediate adjournment of Parliament for the night and a rush of tributes from political leaders and parliamentary colleagues who had listened to his captivating speeches — and occasionally fell victim to his acerbic thrusts — over his 30-year political career.

Funeral services will be held at Rouyn, Que., where he operated a car dealership.

Although he led what was essentially a fringe party, Caouette played the role of a catalyst in federal politics. Social Credit strength in the early 1960s deprived the major parties of a clear majority to govern.

On one occasion, when his party held a balance of power in the Commons, Caouette's forces saved the government of the late Lester Pearson from defeat.

BEFORE THE FIGHT for leadership of the Social Credit party, Real Caouette (left) raises arms of then-party leader Robert Thompson early in 1963 in Montreal. The two fought for party leadership most of that year with Caouette finally taking over. Caouette died in Ottawa Thursday at age of 59.

Caouette suffered from diabetes which became complicated recently by a series of heart attacks and a stroke, forcing him to relinquish the leadership of the party in the fall.

"He was not a politician, he was a Canadian," Fortin said.

"He worked all his life for unity."

Prime Minister Trudeau described the former MP for the rural Quebec riding of Temiscamingue as one of the country's "original political spokesman."

"Real Caouette had an unshakeable faith in this country that could serve as an example to us all," Trudeau said in a statement.

"He knew that French Canadians must build their federal system."

Opposition Leader Joe Clark said Caouette's death represents "a loss from the Canadian scene of a very strong force for Canadian unity."

"He was a man who had the capacity to reach out to a large group of Canadians who may have felt alienated from the political processes," the Progressive Conservative leader said.

And former prime minister John Diefenbaker, who was in the Commons when Caouette was first elected in 1946, described his colleague as "an excellent parliamentarian, pre-eminent on the stump, a supporter of the monarchy."

His death would mean a loss to all Canadians.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said Caouette's death means Canada "has lost a man who based most of his political activity on his profound commitment to the continuation of our more than 100-year history of federalism."

Former NDP leaders David Lewis and T. C. Douglas described the former Social Credit leader as a devoted advocate of federalism.

"In this period of crisis of national unity, his death was a particular loss," said Lewis.

Under Caouette's leadership, the Social Credit party was transformed from a western Canadian-based movement to one with representatives only from Quebec. His death reduced Social Credit ranks in the Commons to 10.

But, although the fortunes of his party waned nationally and in Quebec, Caouette remained a popular politician throughout Canada and his lifetime.

He built his political success in the early 1960s with a paid regular 15-minute French-language television talk that eventually propelled him into the Commons with 26-member force after the 1962 election.

He remained a popular personality on television and during his travels — often by car —across the country. But his relations with the strong provincial Social Credit movements in Alberta and British Columbia were always fragile.

Still, Martin Hattersley of Edmonton, national president of the party, said Thursday that Caouette was committed without compromise to Canadian unity.

He was a man of "great courage, high principles and immense determination, with a passionate concern for the welfare of his fellow man."

Camil Samson, head of the provincial Creditiste party in Quebec, said simply that Caouette "sacrificed his life for his convictions."

Caouette was born in Amos, Que., Sept. 26, 1917. He is survived his wife Suzanne and three children.

U.K. BANKER ARRESTED

LONDON (Reuter) — Scotland Yard detectives arrested a Bank of England official and five other men Thursday in connectian with an alleged $1.6 million fraud.

The arrested men included lawyers and investment brokers who work in London's financial district.

Greenpeace Boosting Seal Fight

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation will escalate its annual battle with the federal government over harvesting of seals on the East coast.

The federal government Thursday increased the seal kill quota to 170,000 from 127,000 and the foundation said it will increase its force of on-the-ice protesters to 30 from 18.

"We'll be there this spring almost twice as strong," said expedition leader Paul Watson.

Mr. Watson said that last year's quota was exceeded by about 50,000 and the announced raise this year was done to "avoid further embarrassment."

It Could Have Been Stopped

It's a slow, insidious process like the final stages of a terminal illness. The property is assembled, offers made to homeowners, lots are consolidated into a large plot. A development company enters the picture with plans for an apartment or condominium complex. Owners of houses leave, tenants are given notice to vacate. The buildings empty. The only external signs are the two-by-four fences around boulevard trees that tell the bulldozer operators to keep clear.

It went that way this fall on Pembroke and Princess Streets in the Fernwood district, just west of Cook Street. Last week, the destruction of part of a neighborhood was almost complete. Eleven houses on the two streets, which shared common back fences, had no windows left. Someone had stripped out the usable plumbing fixtures. Attractive wood panelling and fireplace mantels were ripped out. At night, pickup trucks came round and men with flashlights poked through the remains looking for any valuable leftover bits and pieces.

These were all solid, well-built and well-maintained homes for the most part, constructed six and seven decades ago. They were not crumbling, rotten slums. It was a pleasant residential neighborhood, which could have benefitted from a little sprucing up, some renovations and modernization.

But that chance was lost on the wekend. The developer's bulldozers went in and flattened the houses. The old wooden structures went down quickly. No effort was made to salvage the sound lumber—the bulldozer just walked back and forth on the remains to make of them easily removable splinters and shards.

A shiny anonymous new condominium project will rise on the site this winter, its 100 units providing accommodation for probably not many more people than lived in the old houses. But the big change in the equation will be price, and the elimination in the old homes of a large number of apartments at moderate rents that people could afford.

Why couldn't the old places be fixed up? The neighborhood is part of the Fernwood neighborhood improvement project (NIP) designated area with $1 million available for the general improvement of the whole neighborhood as well as loans and grants on generous terms to individual property owners to fix up their dwellings.

What actually happened is a travesty of the NIP program's aims. It was made possible because Victoria city council and the civic bureaucracy stalled or failed to move fast enough to save the housing with zoning changes. Most of the houses destroyed on the weekend were not architectural gems or heritage homes by any definition, but they were good, solid structures. The condominium market is glutted, but there is always a need for affordable rental accommodation. The sad thing about the weekend demolition-job was that it was not inevitable, it could have been prevented, it should have been stopped, but was not.

Some Balance at UVic

University of Victoria departmental agreement to adopt a Canadian first hiring policy is an intelligent and logical policy in view of the realities of this country today. In essence, if foreign and Canadian applicants have similar qualifications the Canadian will get the nod. That in no way implies foreign academics will be banned in future. The new policy also states that anyone "likely to make a contribution superior to that of a Canadian applicant" will receive the appointment.

Criticism from the Committee for an Independent Canada that the whole policy is negated by including landed immigrants in the definition of Canadians seems fatuous. Excepting native peoples, all Canadians are landed immigrants of one sort or another. Excluding landed immigrants from eligibility for academic employment would be a slur on their honorable intentions to embrace citizenship. Yet there are those who will view the UVic ruling as the worst kind of xenophobia. But it is difficult to refute UVic president Dr. Howard Petch's remarks that enormous efforts have been made in Canada to develop graduate schools, and it is only right that young Canadians get preference in teaching jobs at the university level.

During the late 1950s and early 1960s, many British and U.S. academics were hired at Canadian universities to fill an academic void as Canadian universities absorbed the population explosion of the war years. These teachers and researchers naturally recruited like-minded theorists and countrymen for their own departments.

In some cases, departments such as English or sociology became almost the preserves of British or U.S. teachers. If the country is to have a sense of self it is necessary to study and analyze its literature and theatre, even if the body of work available is shallow compared with British and American traditions. The same is true for the social sciences. Only in the last 15 years have we seen a Canadian sociology emerge through the works of John Porter and others. Vast areas of unplumbed research exist in Canadian history, economics and political science.

UVic has taken a rational approach to a delicate question. The next generation of Canadian students will receive the ultimate benefits from this decision. Yet in any community of scholars there should always be a large minority of foreign teachers. Ideas know no political boundaries. The UVic decision will simply balance the scales a little more evenly. Canada could stand more of this modest nationalism in other areas.

Three Official Languages

OTTAWA — A core difficulty with the first ministers' conference, or at least I think it's a core difficulty because it's presumptuous to pretend to any certitude, is that everyone is talking a different language. Not English and French, which is a complexity easy to cope with. But three languages, in which the words are the same but the meanings attached to them are quite different.

First, the feds. Prime Minister Trudeau described his financial offer to the provinces as a "major innovation." The phrase is apt. Ottawa is offering the provinces more money to spend, on higher education, hospitals and medicare, in any way they wish, free of all federal guidelines or standards so that one province can spend its money on expensive hospital clinics, say, and another stretch the available funds as far as possible by experimenting with home care, ambulatory services, and para-professionals.

Indignant

Second, the provincial premiers. Ottawa's proposal, said Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer, left him "genuinely indignant." The federal government had been "unbending." These phrases also are apt. The 10 provinces had, for the first time at these meetings, developed a common front. They functioned as a block, rather than as 10 units. Ottawa's refusal to yield to their demands for about $4 billion over the next five years under a revenue guarantee formula would leave the provinces short of cash while federal tax revenues, in contrast, expanded so that Ottawa either could cut taxes or start new spending programs.

The objective of most provinces — though not all the small Atlantic provinces — is a restructured Confederation made up of a weak central government and of up to 10 strong regional governments. Ontario Premier Bill Davis best expressed this view. He found "some measure of consistency" between his own criticisms of the federal government and those uttered by Quebec Premier Rene Levesque who attacked the "ever-increasing federal penetration into many new social, economic and cultural fields."

Last, but the most important, Quebec. Much that Levesque said could have been said, and indeed was said, by other provincial premiers. The provincial demands, he said, were "more reasonable, indeed were just minimal."

The rest of Levesque's remarks, apt or not according to your view, were his alone. The meeting had been "an exercise in frustration." Then a shrug, a quick smile, a puff of his cigarette, and the calm declaration, "inside, oh, three, maybe four years, we confidently expect to be out of the whole system."

His goal, he reminded the conference at the start, was "political sovereignty and an economic association." The election of Nov. 15 as "irreversible." Quebecers believe "in the need for a fundamental change."

From this vantage point, Levesque talks his own language. The "common front" of which the nine English-speaking provinces were so proud becomes, to him, just a temporary convenience. Even federal-provincial conferences, once the dollar issues are tidied up, become to Levesque just "a useful opportunity of keeping contact with representatives of the people of Canada" not an opportunity, that is, of running the country.

Using those three languages, the premiers and prime ministers talk at, but not to, each other. Ottawa worries that if it yields too much tax room it would lose its ability to manage the economy. The provinces demand more money and jurisdiction but haven't spelled out how their dispersed Confederation could still function as a country. Levesque conceals his goals in cloudy generalities, like "we must differentiate political institutions which should be different." (One can almost hear the other provinces saying, "Ahh, he really is one of us.") And then abruptly ends the charade by terse declarations like: "Our concept is two nations, two different peoples."

After a time, the effort to sort out who means what when saying which to whom, and the effort to be fair and balanced, and the effort to be neither alarmist nor naive about Quebec's intentions, becomes not simply exhausting but self-defeating.

Irritated

This process, continued for too long, will fray the tempers of English-Canadians. Today's mood of rather anxious patience and faintly guilt-ridden tolerance, will turn, first to irritation and then to anger.

You could spot one sign of the shift in some comments by New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield. Was he discouraged by Levesque's comments at the conference? "No," answered Hatfield, "because I've been discouraged ever since the election. They've made it plain they're going to use all in their power to achieve independence, and let no one be in any damn doubt about that." Hatfield's words may be a trifle strong; no-one, though, would have the least trouble understanding his language.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Debating National Suicide

In the autumn of 1608, Samuel de Champlain, with 27 companions, built his flimsy shack beside the towering rock of Quebec. In the spring the first man who could rightly call himself a Canadian reported that of his garrison "only eight remained and half of them ailing." But the civilized world heard nothing of those eight in a wilderness stretching to the Pacific. Nor could they suspect that they had begun to found a nation.

Since then, 368 autumns and springs have followed with adventures strange, often desperate and little known to foreigners — none so strange as the state of Canada today when one descendant of Champlain's breed is struggling to preserve the nation and another scheming to destroy it. In Pierre Trudeau and Rene Levesque, both as symbols and men of power, we see the question unknowingly posed by Champlain and unanswered yet: Whether a nation unique in its duality, its treasure and its luck can or should even try to endure.

Facts Ignored

Any foreigner ignorant of Canada would regard such a question as preposterous. To him it must seem incredible that one of the most fortunate nations on earth should be solemnly debating its own deliberate suicide.

To the Canadian men of mischief, in Quebec and the west, this debate, as they hope, is a chance to undo all the toil, intelligence and bloodshed of better men who built that nation. To the psychiatrist the thought of destroying it must seem like sheer lunacy, as it is. To the thoughtful citizen the question now raised as a nightmare or a heartbreak, to the thoughtless a bore. To anyone who can think at all it is a question that should have been answered long ago not by the law but by the liteways of the people.

Unhappily the question arises at a moment when the people have no real confidence in any leader or political party and one of history's recurring, drought cycles has yielded a lean crop, when a government hanging on the ropes confronts an opposition on the make but lacking an alternative policy or an essential presence in Quebec, and when, still worse, the people, for the first time, are losing confidence in their future and themselves.

It would be quite wrong, however, to suppose that the crisis has appeared overnight with no advance warning. In fact the nation has been steadily building the crisis for at least 10 years by grossly mismanaging its national business as Quebec has mismanaged its own on an even more reckless scale.

The public demand for state services without the taxes to finance them, the consequent budgetary deficits and mountainous debt, the inflation of the currency to blacken the red ink of the ledger, the largest trading deficit in the western world because our costs and prices are too high, the whole vain attempt to consume more than we produce — all these obvious facts have long been ignored as too complicated, too remote or too unpleasant to be understood and faced.

At last a double crisis, of politics and economics, has reminded us of the facts. The public can understand what Levesque proposes to do by referendum, harassment or both, if his people are foolish enough to let him do it.

The public may not understand the complexities of international exchange but it can understand the falling value of the Canadian dollar, the true measurement of the nation's current worth and damaged reputation in the cold arithmetic of the world. The public can also feel its humiliation when, on the American television screen, ignorant and excited pundits compare Canada to the disordered state of Mexico.

So we witness the closing phase of an illusion and twilight sleep altogether uncharacteristic of the Canadian people, as if the affluence of some three decades had changed their personality. But the illusion still lingers because, for the time being, we can count on foreign credit and most of us have never had it so good, only the minority victimized by the majority's blunders and greed.

The preliminary shocks represented by Levesque, the declining dollar and the derangement of our affairs in Ottawa have just begun to fracture our smugness. More shocks will follow and force us to recover our characteristic sanity.

Find a Laurier?

That we shall recover it I cannot doubt but the process will be clumsy, confusing and painful — a time to try the souls of all good Canadians. In it the ruin of men, governments or oppositions will not matter much. The nation alone matters as a single, indivisible economic organism but, more importantly, as a human experiment and brave hope with on parallel elsewhere.

Such a nation, so conceived and so dedicated, will survive, if it deserves survival, and not otherwise by an instinct far deeper than politics, far below the level of law, constitution or finance. On that instinct and nothing else survival must ultimately depend. For the political and economic arrangements will reflect the nation's mind once it is made up.

We have yet to find the men in either of the two great Canadian communities who can evoke, articulate and set that old sixth sense to work again. But we shall surely find them as we found the Macdonalds and Lauriers of the past unless we have indeed lost our character and our way. And in the next few years we shall learn what kind of people we really are now after our march from Champlain's hut beside the river where the nation was founded on solid rock.

Shattered Silence

After 15 years of heart-breaking delay and the complication of nine reports which have been largely ignored, the doctors of this city feel some sympathy at least with the heading of your editorial of Dec. 15, A Hospital At Least. Do not, however, delude your readers that all the problems are over. The most difficult decisions still lie ahead.

The facts are that hospital costs are the most expensive part of health care. As a result of this, doctors and citizens can never have all the hospital beds they desire. The target for the area in 1981 is 1,094 acute beds; 625 of these are to be in the Royal Jubilee Hospital, 469 are to be under the administration of the Victoria General Hospital. With the growing population of the area, it is obvious that ultimately a third hospital will be needed. The recent decision of the minister has now decided that this third hospital will be on the Helmcken Road site, this once and for all settling the bitter backbiting squabble as to who should benefit most, directly or indirectly, in the squalid struggle of buying land cheaply and selling it for all the traffic will bear.

The problem remains of what to put on that land and when, and in particular what should be done with the Victoria General Hospital at its present site.

The medical profession of this city have consistently advised all levels of government that the most sensible thing to do would be to utilize that part of the facilities already in existence at the Victoria General Hospital which are in excellent condition. This includes some of the main buildings with some of the wards, the laundry which is the best in the area, and the modernized heating plant. The older parts of the hospital should be phased out and on the land of St. Ann's Academy, which has already been purchased by the government, the Victoria General Hospital should be brought up to date. At the same time we have advised that the government buy the third hospital site and erect on this site patient facilities which will not require at this time the very expensive duplication of investigative and therapeutic facilities. These are the really expensive parts of a hospital. If patients are admitted directly, they are all needed. To make their use economical a hospital has to be of sufficient size to keep them properly employed. If patients are therefore to be admitted directly both to the Helmcken Road hospital and into the old Victoria General Hospital, there will be this very expensive duplication. The alternative to this is to transfer the whole hospital out to Helmcken Road.

This expensive dislocation of services and staff has always been the second best solution offered both by the Victoria General Hospital staff in a unanimous report, and by the Victoria Medical Society, directly to the minister. We do not yet know what his plans are for the Helmcken Road hospital site, or for the old Victoria General Hospital.

As it appears that the government pays more attention to letters solicited by interest groups rather than the facts of medical need and economic common sense, and as I have no confidence in the diverse trilogy of Bawlf, Barber and Scott Wallace, who are supposed to represent the interests of the city, I would suggest that all the people that we look after in the James Bay area, in the Cook and Fairfield districts, and within the city itself, should write to the minister. Do they realize they could lose their hospital? I would suggest they give consideration in their letter to the unamimous recommendations of the medical staff of Victoria General Hospital:

1. That the hospital be redeveloped on its present site.
2. That the land be purchased for the third hospital and that facilities be built on that site that do not need expensive duplication of medical facilities.
3. That plans be developed for the third site to expand into a full acute care general hospital when the needs of the whole area demand an increase over the projected 1,094 acute care beds.

If, my friends, you do not write these letters, don't blame your doctors when the Victoria General Hospital on its present site is phased out or closed and you have to drive or bus to Helmcken Road. The Jubilee can't handle the whole city. And certainly, don't blame us if the hospital is split into two unworkable, wasteful halves in spite of all our advice and the advice of the consultants, to satisfy the political ambitions and cupidity of our trusted public representatives.—Peter J. Banks, M.D., Victoria.

Fixed Ideas

Thank you, Norman Gidney, for your article History Without Credibility.

The writer (Paul Hurmuses, Power Without Glory) obviously is the usual product of a Canadian expatriate who lives and works in the U.S. and returns with fixed ideas about the mythical dangers of socialism in B.C. Of course his association with Time magazine did not help him to form liberal opinions.

The tragedy, in my view, is that so many people confuse real socialism with progress such as the NDP tried to introduce into this province and the powers-that-be delight to read of this distortion as their one hope is the continuation of the status quo. The NDP, in spite of many mistakes (and which government does not make mistakes), did more for the average citizen of this province in 3½ years than the previuous Socred government did in 20 but we are not supposed to believe this. — M.P.B. U.S. Deserters Prefer Sweden

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

Exiles absorbed into Swedish life

STOCKHOLM — The U.S. military deserters and draft resisters have settled in here and they do not like the look of the limited pardon promised by President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Most of the exiles in Sweden are servicemen who took off when they were ordered to Vietnam. They can not find much comfort in an offer of relief exclusively for draft evaders.

They are married or living with Inga, Bodil, Karin or Margarethe. Their children speak only a few words of English. Many of the exiles are working at decently paid jobs by the standards of Sweden's welfare state. The U.S. job market and the high-powered U.S. society look risky at best. Even if their slates were wiped clean, most of these here — between 200 and 300 — think they would choose to stay.

* * *

John Toler, 30, of Chico, Calif., a deserter from the Army Special Forces, has taken out Swedish citizenship. He visited his mother country last summer on a U.S. visa. If had a free choice, "I would live in Sweden," he said.

"I was kind of disappointed this summer in the U.S. Their environment is so dismal. The hugeness. My friends are all trying to find some compatible work."

Toler is writing a doctoral thesis at Stockholm University about Sweden in the depression. He expects to teach. His wife is a teacher and their oldest son, Jonas, 6, is in school. As we talked in his roomy old apartment, Paul, 3½, brought us toys to admire. "Hi" was the only English word he could manage.

Michael Powers, 26, from Brooklyn, lives in a comfortable, sunny apartment in suburban Vallingby, right around the corner from former Premier Olof Palme. Powers is under indictment for draft evasion, but even a prospective pardon does not tempt him.

"My wife has no desire to live in the U.S.," he said. Bodil Powers is the well-paid head of the science department at a junior college.

"It's a nice place to visit, but I don't want to live there. I live here. I'm working. I have my political activities. I can't see myself even accepting the pardon to visit the U.S."

Powers has just finished an undergraduate history degree at Stockholm, is the fond father of 3-week-old Hakan ("The only Hakan Powers in Sweden," says his mother), has a temporary job with the Stockholm archives and expects to be a town planner.

I'd have a rough time if I went home," said George Meals, 31, of Atlanta. "It's a pragmatic problem. I've never been able to hate the U.S. to the point where I'd renounce my citizenship. I'm not at war with the U.S."

Meals has been here nine years, is a father, has several well paid jobs as a sound technician ("I'm in the 80 per cent bracket," he said with evident pride) and has "a secure future in Sweden."

He took off from advance infantry training at Ft. Jackson, S.C., in 1967, just as he was about to be ordered to Vietnam, cashed a few shares of stock he owned and caught a plane from New York to Stockholm.

The exiles here closely follow every published word about pardon and, from what they know of it, regard the Carter plan as inadequate or useless. Most of them have picked up the leftist jargon of Swedish university students. They describe the proposal to forgive draft resisters alone as class-biased.

* * *

The draft evaders, they argue, are mostly middle class, college educated, capable of coping with bureaucracy. In the exiles' views, the real victims are the tens of thousands of deserters and those who got less than honorable discharges, mostly working class and minority citizens — war resisters who decided in service that the Vietnam war was evil. The exiles say that a genuine pardon should provide universal, unconditional amnesty for all, wiping out any strain that would handicap these men in civilian life.

The exiles draw little comfort from Carter's vague promise to give each deserter a change to state his case before a hearing officer. They think this means a military tribunal, much like the ones set up by President Ford. Those routinely "processed" each man out of service, jailed none and gave them all dishonorable discharges.

Several hundred who were in Sweden, many of them regulars stationed in West Germany and suddenly ordered to Vietnam, have already taken this route. A few, finding the dishonorable discharge an unbearable burden, have returned to Sweden.

The deserters who remain make no effort to hide the fact that it was an order to report to Vietnam that drove them over the hill. They say they were hostile to the war, that it was immoral, that it was a matter for Vietnamese to settle.

At first glance, these exiles appear to have adjusted remarkably well to Swedish life. Most have been here six or more years, their hair is thinning and a few, like Powers, now speak English with a faint Scandinavian accent. In the end, however, this is an alien land and, like refugees everywhere, they cannot be completely at home.

Bill Schiller, 33, never answered the draft board's call for a medical examination after he graduated from the University of Illinois and put a year in with the Peace Corps.

He reports, produces and broadcasts an English-language program for Swedish short-wave radio and lives on a small farm, raising chickens and vegetables. He has "lots of foreign friends," but few who are Swedish. "The Swedes are harder to get to know. They are more reserved." Like George Meals, he misses what he sees as the openness of Americans.

Perhaps the most successful exile here is James Walch, 31, from Milwaukee. In 1965, he transferred from the University of Wisconsin to Stockholm and has stayed on ever since, ignoring a call to perform his alternate military service as a conscientious objector.

He has a Swedish wife he met as an exchange student in high school, three children, a cozy suburban house, two doctorates, has written or edited two books in Swedish and just published his first in English, a study of politics in southern India.

Walch has never been charged with a draft offence and stays by choice. He misses "the diversity and plurality in the States."

Sweden, he said, "is a monoculture that allows only one point of view at a time."

"It is generally more humanitarian — its set of social values. Society here is a little more secure than the States, the way society is organized and the equity provided."

One way or another, Walch's fellow exiles feel much the same. As Americans join Rotary Clubs or Community Chests, the Swedish Americans join in protests against "imperialism," "terror in Chile" or what have you.

When they first came here in 1968 and later, the draft resisters and deserters gathered together frequently. Now they see each other largely by accident. They simply do not need each other as much.

West Germans Worry As Others Fall Behind

By WALTER SCHWARZ
Manchester Guardian

BONN — "First we had the Fresswelle (eating spree), then it was the Reisewelle (travel craze) and now it is the Trimmdichwelle (keep fit and diet)." This was a Bonn housewife's summary of Germany's postwar evolution, as the family emerged from Sunday lunch for its weekly walk in the Stadtwald (Municipal woods) of Bad-Godesburg.

The "walk" turned out to be a marked-out course, with knee jerks and arm bends programmed by diagrams, equipment laid on at 22 points — and instructions for proceeding "at a trot" from one to the next. It progressed with deceptive ease from hopping childishly to swinging across a horizontal ladder.

Not many people were doing it seriously. The Sunday walkers were in any case far too well dressed in brisk tweeds, Bavarian hats with a feather, knickerbockers and here and there a hooked walking-stick. I had the feeling the track was amply used all the same; Not after lunch on Sundays but before breakfast on weekdays.

Much may be learned about Germany from that walk in the woods— so meticulously arranged and spotlessly maintained — and from my friend's sardonic comment on it. The ways things are organized, the way people conform and participate and — for all their successes — the German habit of constant self-analysis.

Can't Compromise

"We Germans are too dogmatic and can't ever compromise," grumbled a civil servant when Herr Strauss's party stormed out of its alliance with the Christian Democrats. "Here in Germany we blow everything up out of proportion," said a businessman when two generals were sacked for allowing an ex-Nazi war hero to attend a nostalgic party in a mess.

With their economic performance pulling them daily further ahead of all their neighbors, Germans might be expected to be smug. In fact they are embarrassed by their success, worried only by the failure of others to keep up, and surprisingly unassured.

After 30 years the German system still has an experimental air. The old nationalism seems embarrassing and irrelevant and no new one is yet clearly visible.

One obvious reason is to be found here in Bonn. Germans are provincial—literally so because they have no capital city, Bonn is a pair of quiet provincial towns — Bonn itself and Bad-Godesburg, with a string of ministries and embassies in between. From lunchtime on Friday everyone fades away to where they really live.

Only Berlin has a big city feel — but that is a distant island surrounded by East Germany and not even officially part of the Federal Republic. Hamburg, Dusseldorf, Frankfurt and Munich are all aggressively prosperous and uncompromisingly modern — but provincial all the same with no pretence at leadership.

Provincialism has its agreeable side. Not only are Germans more efficient, they are also more civil. Where in Paris nowadays will a waiter ask you if you enjoyed a meal, a train guard wish you a pleasant journey or a passery-by put himself out to show you the way? If there was a real capital, people might be as rude there as in Paris or as indifferent as in London.

The efficiency is overwhelming until you take it for granted. In even a back street hotel, there's a telephone in your room with direct dialling to anywhere in the world. The calls get through first time — and you can also dial for recorded train time tables, the news, theatre programs, a recipe for dinner or suggestions for a Sunday outing.

Trains, of course, run on time and are clean and notices at stations give arrival as well as departure times. Yet efficiency is tempered by matiness, in quiet contrast to the class consciousness of the French and the social tensions of the British. In a train between here and Koblenz a group of businessmen in my compartment was joined by the ticket collector for a 10 minute chat about football and politics.

Relative classlessness is no doubt one secret of German success. The old middle classes, wiped out in the thirties, never came back and only now are the new rich emerging. Unpleasant jobs are still done by Spaniards and Turks, although half a million "guest workers" went home in the recent depression.

Classlessness is also a reason for the high degree of consensus in German politics, for the way the unions play the national game and the absence of a substantial Left. No large group feels excluded — not even the unemployed, who sometimes get more in benefits than they could earn by going back to work.

What demons disturb this tranquil society fabric? For many people political worries seem centred abroad: on the Russians and the arms buildup, the British and their hopeless economy, the Italians and French who threaten to let the Communists into power. Nothing like that can happen here.

Heart-Searching

Communists and other radicals are barred from public employment and there was a lot of heart-searching on this point — as there is about most things in Germany — after an engine driver was disqualified. The rules have now been relaxed a bit at federal level.

Are Nazi ghosts stirring in the army? It was mainly foreigners who feared they might be, after the affair of the dismissed generals. Here, nobody questions the two generals' credentials as democrats — they had been merely stubborn and imprudent — or suggests that the war hero Hudel is now an active Nazi.

The problem the affair did raise is how German soldiers can be inspired by military tradition without delving into offensive areas of the past. Regimental tradition is generally supposed to be important for enthusing young soldiers. But how can you train people to defend democracy with stories of German exploits in the last war?

Why Try Harder for Avis?

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

According to Transport Minister Otto Lang the government saved $1 million by rejecting the bid of the Canadian-owned Tilden Rent-a-Car company in favor of American-owned Avis when both bid for prime booth positions at the nine major international airports in Canada.

Lang's action has released a covey of lawsuits as Tilden, Hertz and Holiday Rent-a-Car allege the government is playing fast and loose with its own tendering guidelines.

The tendering system is extremely complicated. It involves open and domestic class bids, guaranteed revenue payments and commission fee percentages. But whatever formula was applied to determine the winner, it is clear from Lang's statement that the ministry was primarily interested in making sure that Avis stayed in business at Canadian airports.

Most of the car-rental business is generated at airports. Travellers grab their luggage and head for the nearest car-rental booth. Position is vital. The closer you are to the disembarkation gate, the more business you get.

When Tilden outbid Avis and won the No. 3 spot, the American company was inclined to get out of Canada altogether. The transport ministry's "solution" was to interpret the bids in such a way that Avis retained its position and Tilden was given fifth choice. At Winnipeg this put the company the length of two football fields away from its previous position.

"We couldn't afford to keep Avis, one of the world's biggest car rental operations, out of Canada's major airports. So we accepted their bid despite the fact that it was lower than Tilden's," Lang said.

This is a frightening admission. If the government applies this kind of thinking to all enterprises, Canadian companies are bound to consistently take second place to American conglomerates.

Besides hampering the efforts of Canadian companies to grow, this policy directs other economic benefits to the U.S. Many business and administrative functions of the American companies are carried out in the U.S. The Canadian subsidiaries pay for them, thus providing revenue for employment of Americans instead of Canadians.

The Committee for an Independent Canada is correct in calling on Lang to reexamine the awards to car-rental agencies. The government has no need to protect American multinational corporations at the expense of Canadian-owned businesses.

The Liberal Zoo

By RICHARD NEEDHAM
The Globe and Mail

Andrew Hacker is a distinguished U.S. historian and author of The End of the American Era, which came out some five years ago; it hit the nail on the head then, and still does. Mr. Hacker recently observed, "When Americans set foot from their homes, they enter an environment that is physically dangerous, esthetically repellent, and morally disquieting. The public domain has ceased to be civilized territory."

True and untrue. I'm always happy in small-town America. The big cities are something else again, I never set foot in them; to me they're hotbeds of evil; and, what is much worse, the political and moral weakness that encourages evil. In this connection, I'll print word-for-word an article which appeared last week in The New York Times. The writer is Neil McCaffrey of New Rochelle, N.Y.; he is president of the Conservative Book Club and Arlington House Publishers:

* * *

We all know about the liberals and crime. But as far as I can tell, nobody has projected the trends of the 60s and 70s off into the fearful future. Let's take a deep breath and try it. First of all, it is obvious that under a liberal society with a liberal legal system, crime must rise, and keep rising. So, at some point, the inexorable arithmetic dictates that the criminals will outnumber the lawabiding. But, as I have actually read from some liberals, only a small percentage of the population have been crime victims, so quit worrying.

The only trouble with this thinking is that it's heartless and wrong. Other factors come into play, and they assure that the rise in crime will be not arithmetic but geometric. Even the dumbest of the punks now understand that crime pays. The system is on their side. the police also understand this; increasingly, they are coming to realize that they are the minority, they are isolated. Should we be surprised if they decline to play martyr for a populace too besotted with self-indulgence to care, or too numbed by fear, to back them up? Cops aren't fools.

Even more ominous, in the late lamented elections, did you notice that crime became the Great Unmentionable? This means that the liberal "solutions" are now seen to be bankrupt; but since a liberal society tolerates only liberal solutions, no alternatives could be offered. An unsentimental, serious approach to public order and safety (never forget: this is the first duty of government) is impossible in a liberal society. Anyone proposing it is called racist, reactionary, fascist; and our politicians don't care to stand up to that sort of abuse.

The result is that we have a tacit agreement that society is to become a zoo, with the animals in charge; but a liberal zoo. Better to have 80-year-old women raped and mutilated than risk offending the American Civil Liberties Union and The New York Times. Not that I mean to put all the blame on the Establishment. Our fellow citizens must come in for their share, too. Crime tends to finish about fourth or fifth when pollsters ask about current problems. Which I interpret to mean that most people don't care unless they had a murder on their block last week. Or, alternatively, it means that they have given up caring, knowing that the system guarantees more killings, beatings, rapes, thefts.

If the former is the correct reading; if our fellow citizens are indeed so insensate that they are unmoved when elderly men and women are brutalized in their own homes by beasts, then we already have a peek at the World of Tomorrow — the world the liberals have bequeathed to us. If, on the other hand, the public is indifferent to crime because it has given up hope, then we have a different reason for concluding that the liberal system is bankrupt. If, after all, a government cannot assure the safety of its citizens, and if the citizens recognize this, then the very basis for that government's legitimacy has collapsed.

* * *

The logic of our crime projection, we repeat, is that one day the beasts must outnumber the decent people. Then, according to the logic of liberalism, crime won't be crime. Majority rules — doesn't it? But of course it won't happen that way. We will be spared the nightmare of seeing liberal democracy carried to its logical conclusion. Instead, something else will intervene: the Clockwork Orange society, where the sadists reign unchecked.

Am I saying, then, that things are hopeless? Not exactly. Things are never hopeless, and nobody who cherishes the Western tradition can hold that man's fate is simply determined. What I am saying is that things look hopeless as long as America lives by liberalism. And the liberal cancer runs deep. Does America have the internal resources to stand up to major surgery? Can it still cut out this cancer? That is the question. The only question.

Sharp Gains At Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was sharply higher in active mid-afternoon trading Friday.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.99 million shares compared with 1.47 million at the same time Thursday.

A trading halt continues on first preferred shares of Scott Misener Steamships Ltd. at the company's request pending an announcement. It last traded at $11 a share.

Among other industrials, Canadian International Power A rose 2 to $16½, Noranda Mines A 1 to $28¾, Westcoast Transmission ¾ to $27¼, Royal Trust A ⅝ to $17 and Bank of Nova Scotia ⅝ to $20¼.

Asbestos Corp. was down 1 to $22¼, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas ⅜ to $35, MICC Investments ½ to $7½, Imperial Oil A ⅛ to $20¼ and Sklar Manufacturing 19 cents to $1.25.

Denison Mines gained 1¼ to $59, Roman Corp. ⅝ to $21⅝ and Hudson Bay Mining A ⅜ to $17½. Mattagami Lake Mines A dropped ¼ to $13 and Consolidated Canadian Faraday 15 cents to $3.10.

United Canso Oil and Gas was up ⅜ to $6¾, Coseka Resources 20 cents to $4.30 and Total Petroleum North America ⅛ to $6⅞. North Canadian Oils slipped ¼ to $6¾ and Voyager Pete ⅛ to $15⅞.

Trading was active. Volume reached 17.08 million shares by mid-afternoon.

OPEC members meeting in Qatar split on their pricing plans, with most members declaring 10-per-cent increases and Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates limiting theirs to five per cent.

Although investors initially were pleased, by mid-morning the market settled down as Wall Street began to study the possible effects of the OPEC situation.

Among actively traded oil stocks, Texaco rose ½ to $27¾ and Exxon added ⅛ to $52c, while Atlantic Richfield slipped ¼ to $59⅜.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced slightly Friday on some early buying that greeted the news of a pricing split within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than five points at the outset, was ahead 1.16 at 982.46 at 2 p.m.

Gainers clung to an 8-to-7 edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) - Prices were generally higher in moderate afternoon trading Friday on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EST was 410,300 shares, compared with 311,500 shares traded up to the same time Thursday.

Westcoast Petroleum was up 1¼ at $7, Canadian International Power A 2 at $16½, Celanese Canada 20 cents at $3.40 and Inco A ⅜ at $30⅞. Resource Service Group was off five cents at 70 cents and Financial Collection Agencies seven cents at $1.40.

London

Prices were generally higher in light trading at London today.

The Financial Times index was up 14.4 to 337.1 in mid-session trading.

Canadian issues were stronger.

CDC

Canada Development Corp. reported increased net earnings for the first nine months of 1976 in a third-quarter report.

Net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30 rose to $17.7 million or 15 cents a common share from $15.2 million or 36 cents a share in the same period last year. There were fewer issued preferred shares in 1975.

Third quarter net income was $1.6 million, including an extraordinary gain of $800,000 on the sale of property, compared with $6.2 million in the same period last year.

CDC said this year's lower results "reflect the adverse effects of continuing softness in the international economy of the company's two major holdings, Polysar and Texasgulf." Losses incurred in currency transfers among international operations were blamed for $2 million of lost profit.

HB. OIL BUYS INTO SUMATRA

CALGARY (CP) — Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd. reports it has purchased an 8.66-per-cent interest in a production-sharing contract covering 16.3 million acres in the offshore southeast Sumatra area of Indonesia.

The purchase, from the Carver-Dodge International Partnership, was made by a cash payment and the assumption of certain liabilities, the company said in a prepared release.

Five oil fields have been developed within the contract area and are producing a total of about 115,000 barrels a day, the company said.

Starting Jan. 1, the production will be subject to revised production-sharing terms agreed to by the operators and Pertamina, the state-owned oil company.

Computer Taxes Corporations

British Columbia corporations will have their income tax forms processed by computer for the first time starting in the new year, Revenue Canada official said today.

Data from all corporation forms will be fed into the government's computer in Ottawa instead of being processed manually at the local office.

Hubie Larocque, local Revenue Canada chief of verification and collections, says the result should be faster service although corporations should expect a few computer-related problems in the first year of operation.

"The big advantage of computer operations is the speed with which data can be retrieved," he said. "For example, when a corporation official says he believes he was forwarded a piece of information, this can be checked within seconds by computer. In the manual process it might take weeks of searching to prove beyond doubt that the material has not been sent."

The corporations should get quicker service but otherwise will not be affected by the change. The forms will be sent as usual to the local Revenue Canada office.

It is there that the main change will be noticed. Instead of beginning to process the bulky forms locally, data will be fed into the computer, along with information on corporations in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. Data on prairie corporations will be processed through a federal government computer in Winnipeg.

By 1979 or 1980 a federal government computer centre will be established in Surrey to handle all Revenue Canada processing, including corporation tax forms.

Computers have been used by Revenue Canada for 13 years but in the past only simple forms were handled in that way.

Now the more complicated forms of corporations will be added to the computer system. One of the major complications in dealing with companies is they have varying fiscal years. While individuals have a tax deadline of April 30, the last date for corporations is six months following the end of their fiscal year, which could be any one of the 12 months.

While data will be processed in Ottawa, verification and collections will be carried out by the local office, Larocque said.

Any taxpayer, corporation or individual, who fails to file tax return or fails to pay his taxes will receive a reminder notice when the payment is about two months overdue. If there is no response to the reminder, a demand note is sent out one month later.

The demand note is a legal document requiring the receiver to comply with the order within 30 days or face prosecution. The law provides for a $25 per day fine for each day of default.

If the taxpayer is overdue with a payment, he faces a five per cent penalty (If he owes $2,000, he would have to pay an additional $100) plus five per cent interest on the overdue amount.

Corporations who fail to forward income tax, unemployment insurance and other payments to Revenue Canada by the 15th day of the month following the month the money was collected from employees face a 10 per cent penalty plus 10 per cent interest, Larocque said.

If an employer fails to respond to a demand order for payment, the company faces prosecution, which can result in fines ranging from $200 to $10,000 and a jail term.

Larocque said Revenue Canada launches between 25 and 50 prosecutions per year against Vancouver Island companies. He estimates there are about 14,000 employers on the Island.

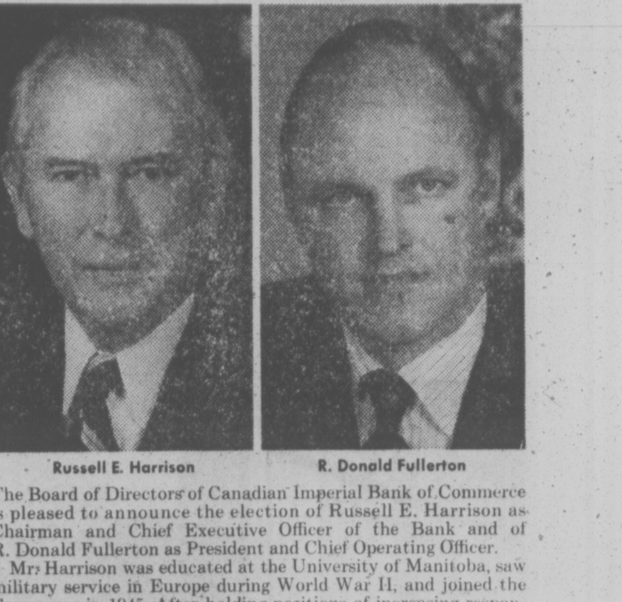
CANADIAN IMPERIAL BANK OF COMMERCE



Russell E. Harrison — R. Donald Fullerton

The Board of Directors of Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce is pleased to announce the election of Russell E. Harrison as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Bank and of R. Donald Fullerton as President and Chief Operating Officer.

Mr. Harrison was educated at the University of Manitoba, saw military service in Europe during World War II, and joined the Commerce in 1945. After holding positions of increasing responsibility in Winnipeg, Hamilton and Toronto, he became Regional General Manager, in charge of the Bank's Quebec operations, in 1963. He returned to Toronto in 1969 as Executive Vice-President and Chief General Manager and in the following year was named a Director. In 1973, he was elected President and Chief Operating Officer. Mr. Harrison has served as President of the Canadian Bankers' Association, is a director of a number of Canadian companies and is active in community affairs on a national and a local basis.

Mr. Fullerton is a graduate of the University of Toronto and also studied at Harvard University. He joined the Commerce in 1953 and, after holding various positions, became Regional General Manager, Saskatchewan, in 1966. In the following year he was appointed Regional General Manager of the Bank's international operations. A year later, he became Deputy Chief General Manager and, in 1973, Executive Vice-President and Chief General Manager. He was elected a Director of the Bank in 1974. Mr. Fullerton is a Vice-President of The Canadian Bankers' Association, a director of several Canadian companies and has an active community involvement in a number of organizations.

AWARDS MADE

They were there to receive awards they won in the Saanich fire department's fourth annual poster and essay contest.

Doncaster elementary made a clean sweep in the essay contest. Theresa Klingspohn, 11, received the first-place trophy. Second and third were Lorraine Lewis and Scott Green.

Tracey Campbell, 6, of Glanford Avenue elementary won the award for the best poster at the Grade 1 level The Grade 11 award went to Paul Birkett, who was unable to attend Thursday's ceremony, and Robin Heppell won the Grade III award.

Gains said more than 4,000 posters were submitted. They were judged by members of the Oak Bay Art Club, the chief's wife, Mrs. Eunice Young and Mrs. Alice Ashton.

Lieut. William Holmes, who heads the department's school fire safety program, judged the 130 essays.

"Interest is growing each year, especially in the essay contest," Gains said, "If they retain that interest, we've accomplished our mission."

MORE CLERKS HIRED

Ten temporary clerks have been hired by the housing ministry to help clear up a backlog of home acquisition grant and sceond mortgage applications.

About 1,000 applications are awaiting processing, Housing Minister Hugh Curtis revealed Thursday.

The total stood at 7,000 as of Nov. 30.

Curtis said even with the hiring of the extra staff, applicants may have to wait up to three months to receive their cheques.

The minister said he hopes the backlog will be cleared away by the end of January.

CREDO Considered

He might be the Capital Region Economic Development Officer, but the regional board wants to chew that idea over.

Directors funneled a proposal for such a creature to their executive committee this week after it was received in a memo from Alan Emery, president of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Emery wrote that the chamber is extremely concerned at the number of plants being shut down in the district and added it is not aware of new industry locating here to replace jobs lost.

Limited land together with selective land-use policies by several local governments combine to act as "a very definite deterrent" to almost any company thinking of locating here, he said.

The chamber is proposing appointment by the region of an "economic development officer" to meet the problem, first by acting as a central source of expertise and information on available commercail and industrial land and policies. With experience, such a person could advise local governments and promote the district for suitable businesses.

Emery wrote that employment of such an official would be a natural function of the regional district but he should report to a broader economic advisory committee.

Pump Station Plan Protested

A land-locked site for a proposed Oak Bay sewage pumping station was examined this week by a council committee and within two days, 70 residents had signed apetition of protest.

Mrs. H. Gilbert Cook, 545 Transit, said she saw members of council looking at The Gulley, a wooded walk leading to Anderson Hill Park from Transit, and was aroused to organize opposition to any proposed development as a pumping station or anything else.

"I feel rather strongly about The Gulley. It's a little bit of nature left to us and I think it should be left alone," said Mrs. Cook.

Residents of the area, supported by people at large of Greater Victoria, already have registered strong protest over a proposed pumping station site on Shoal Bay waterfront near the end of Transit at Beach.

A committee of council and citizens was set up to investigate alternatives and recommend the best choice for a station to serve the southeastern sector by pumping sewage to a new outfall station at Clover Point.

Council was told Thursday the committee expects its report to be completed by the end of January, and Ald. John Goult suggested council would consider it about mid-February.

The Capital Regional District, which is building the new facilities, has asked Oak Bay to indicate when council expects to render a decision.

The regional district said earlier Oak Bay should be billed for any extra cost the project enounters through delay.

Mrs. Cook said The Gully follows Earn Street undeveloped road allowance and it has been used for years as access to the undeveloped park lying above Transit. There are trees and "masses of snowdrops. So many people use this little gully to walk up and get to the park," she said.

If there is any thought of constructing a pumping station there, "I'm nipping it in the bud," she added.

SOVIET BUILDUP

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is arming its forces in East Germany for the first time with a powerful new anti-aircraft missile system designed to knock down low-flying enemy bombers and fighters, U.S. intelligence sources report.

The SA-8 system, which can fires two missiles at a single target simultaneously, is the second advanced weapon to be deployed recently with Soviet forces facing Western Europe.

Less than a month ago, the Pentagon announced that the Soviet army had moved its T-72 tank into East Germany for the first time. The T-72 can shoot on the move, which most U.S. tanks cannot do, and is believed better armored against anti-tank missiles and artillery.

U.S. NETWORKS WON'T PAY PRICE

MOSCOW (AP) — Three United States television networks negotiating with the Soviet Union for broadcast rights for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow have decided to withdraw from the talks, a network source said today.

The source said the reason for the breakoff was "excessive demands of the Soviets."

The network executives planned to leave for home later today. "This is not a negotiating position," the source said, "and the Soviets have been so told."

The Soviet Olympic organizing committee and the state committee for radio and television opened the talks Thursday with a surprise demand for $50 million to buy equipment for TV coverage of the Games.

The $50 million would have been added to the price a network would pay for the exclusive U.S. rights. Some estimates of that probable price tag were as high as $100 million.

NBC, CBS and ABC were seeking the broadcast rights.

The Soviets demanded that 40 per cent of the sum be paid in 1977 and the remaining 60 per cent in 1978.

The next step, the source said, would be to seek U.S. justice department permission for an Olympics coverage pool.

Canucks' Manager Starts to Wonder About His Coach

Times News Services

Phil Maloney, general manager of the Vancouver Canucks, is losing patience with his coach. The Canucks lost again Thursday night, absorbing a 7-3 drubbing from the Detroit Red Wings, and Maloney said he may fire himself as coach if things do not improve soon.

The Canucks have won just eight of 33 games this National Hockey League season and share last place with the Minnesota North Stars in the Smythe Division.

"I don't know if it's me or the team. We played badly tonight," said Maloney, who added that his chances of staying on as coach could depend on the club's next game, Saturday at Minnesota. "The next game is critical," he said. "It's a four-point game and it should be very significant."

A loss would leave Vancouver alone in the cellar.

Elsewhere in the NHL Thursday night, the Philadelphia Flyers downed the Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 in a fight-marred game which got Chicago coach Billy Reay into another verbal battle; the Buffalo Sabres slashed the New York Rangers 7-2; the Boston Bruins topped the St. Louis Blues 5-2, and the Pittsburgh Penguins trimmed the Cleveland Barons 5-4.

In the World Hockey Association, the Minnesota Fighting Saints beat the Indianapolis Racers 5-3 and the San Diego Mariners blanked the Edmonton Oilers 3-0.

Reay, who recently was involved in a verbal tiff with Coach Scotty Bowman of the Montreal Canadiens, had some fiery comments on the Flyers after the Chicago loss.

"They sent their clowns out to intimidate us and they after the Flyers extended were successful," said Reay their unbeaten string to 13 games.

There were four fights in the third period. A period earlier, defenceman Bob Murray was added to the mounting Chicago injury list when he was checked into the boards by Philadelphia's Mel Bridgman and was hospitalized with possible rib and muscle injuries.

Rick Martin scored three times in the second period and Gil Perreault added two goals as the Sabres outshot New York 40-14 and kept the Rangers winless at Buffalo since Nov. 22, 1973.

Pat Hickey scored both goals for New York.

Terry O'Rielly's first goals in 20 games and three assists by defenseman Brad Park carried Boston past St. Louis and former Bruins goalie Ed Johnston, extending the Blues' winless string to nine games. It was only the Bruins' second victory in nine games.

St. Louis Coach Emile Francis was not pleased with the work of his forwards, excluding Larry Patey, who scored both Blues goals.

"Our forwards should donate some of their pay checks to the defensemen and the goalie. This has been going on for three weeks now. They (the forwards) have been standing and looking, hoping someone else would do it for them. And nobody's doing it."

Pittsburgh's Pierre Larouche scored the winning goal in a fame which featured four ties and a successful penalty shot by Cleveland's Al McAdam. Jean Pronovost scored twice and set up two other Penguins' tallies.

McAdam, who had broken in alone on Pittsburgh goalie Denis Herron, was awarded the penalty shot after being held from behind by defenseman Russ Anderson.

Minnesota's Mike Antonovich scored three goals and assisted on another as the Fighting Saints survived a 27-shot attack by Indianapolis in the first period and went on to victory.

Despite the 27 shots on Minnesota goalie Lou Levasseur, the Fighting Saints came out of the first period with a 2-1 lead on the first two goals by Antonovich.

Joe Noris scored twice, once on a power play and once shorthanded, while Edmonton was held to just 11 shots on San Diego goalie Ernie Wakely in the Mariners' triumph over Edmonton. It was San Diego's 11th straight home victory.

Finley Lawyer Cites Vendetta

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley's $3.5 million damage suit against baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn opened in federal court Thursday, with Finley's lawyer charging that Kuhn took actions "to punish an old enemy."

Neil Papiano of Los Angeles, the lawyer for the Oakland A's owner, referred to Kuhn's decision to void Finley's sale June 15 of three top players to Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees for $3.5 million.

Kuhn claimed the deals were not in the best interests of baseball. Finley said he needed the money and filed the suit to get it.

Kuhn's lawyer, Peter K. Bleakley of Washington, countered in his opening statement that "the evidence in the plaintiff's own case will belie the charge" of malice on Kuhn's part.

The 58-year-old Finley watched the statements from a table where four members of his trial team sat. Kuhn was not present, but lawyers for him, both major leagues, the Yankees and the Red Sox, were.

Bleakley said evidence would show that Kuhn's action was just like voiding of trades by previous baseball commissioners. Bleakley said the 1930 proposed trade of Fred Bennett of the American League's St. Louis Browns team to a minor league club in Milwaukee was voided by commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. Milwaukee challenged Landis' decision in federal court, which upheld the commissioner, said Bleakley.

Czechs Edge Winnipeg; Soviets Down Sweden

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia took an early lead in the annual Izvestia international hockey tournament Thursday, the Soviets getting three goals from Valery Kharlamov in a 4-2 win over Sweden and the Czechs edging Winnipeg Jets 3-2.

Kharlamov, who also assisted on a second-period goal by Boris Mikhailov, is making a fast return to international hockey after suffering two broken ankles in an auto accident earlier this year.

Vladimir Veith's goal midway in the third period through a maze of players broke a 2-2 tie and saddled the World Hockey Association Jets with their loss in the opening game of the tournament.

Veith's goal, against Winnipeg goaltender Joe Daley, came only 37 seconds after defenceman Dave Dunn had climaxed a Winnipeg comeback from a 2-0 first period deficit.

Vladimir Martinec and Vincent Lukac had provided the world amateur champion Czechs with an early cushion, but the Jets responded and Anders Hedberg made it 2-1 just 23 seconds into the middle period.

The Soviets, with a number of veterans returning to the lineup after several months absence, opened up a 4-0 lead before the Mikhailov line departed.

The weakened Soviet offence in the third period allowed the less experienced Swedish club to get back into the game, Kent Nilsson and Mats Ahlberg scoring to make the outcome respectable.

RESTRICTIONS PROMPT ANOTHER RESIGNATION

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Poce, citing "uncertainty" for the future, has gone the way of Ken Twigg, Diane Clement and Johanna Kennedy and resigned as distance coach for the Canadian Track and Field Association. The resignation is effective Dec. 31, 1976.

Twigg, the CTFA's executive director, and Clement and Kennedy, president and vice-president of the association respectively, submitted their resignations at a meet-branch delegates rejected a ing two weeks ago when revamped track program that would have cost them additional funds.

CTFA members subsequently agreed to the new program.

Poce said Thursday he didn't feel he could do the job he was hired to do under the restrictive format imposed by the association.

Lancaster Tops Five Categories

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Lancaster, a veteran of 17 years in the Canadian Football League, was the leader in five passing categories during the 1976 season, league statistics released today show.

The Saskatchewan Roughrider quarterback, named the league's most outstanding player in post-season balloting, topped CFL signal-callers in pass attempts (494), completions (297), completion percentage (.601), passing yardage (3,869) and touchdown passes (25).

Lancaster, 37, who joined the Roughriders in 1963 after three years with Ottawa Rough Riders, holds CFL passing records in five categories—attempts (5,394), completions (2,924), total yardage (44,786), touchdown passes (304) and interceptions (349).

Tom Clements of Ottawa Rough Riders, the top passer in the Eastern Conference, led the CFL in average yardage gained per pass—8.7. Lancaster's average pass completion touchdown per-pass radio.

John Hufnagel, a late-season arrival in Calgary, averaged one touchdown for every 12 passes he threw as a Cowboy for the CFL's best touchdownper-pass ratio.

RUSSELL SIGNS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shortstop Bill Russell, who had his best year in the major leagues in 1977, signed a three-year contract Thursday with Los Angeles Dodgers. Russell, 28, hit .274 with five home runs and 65 runs batted in during last season. He was second to Ron Cey on the club in game-winning hits with 12.

Selects Defeat Ontario Seniors

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Moscow Selects opened up in the second and third periods to score a 7-2 win over Brantford Alexanders of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League before a crowd of 3342 Thursday night.

It was the fourth win against one loss for the touring Soviet team. They have three games remaining.

Moscow's top line of Viacheslav Anisin, Yuri Lebedev and Sergei Potgortsev, which was kept on the bench in the first period, dominated the final 40 minutes. Anisin scored two goals in the second period and Lebedev one in the third.

Moscow's other goals were scored by Valeri Bragin, with two, and Vladimir Semenov and Vladimir Deviatov with one each.

Two former National Hockey League players, Jack Egers and Eddie Shack, scored for Brantford. Shack was on loan from Whitby Warriors.

Namdor Shows Way In Volleyball Loop

Namdor picked up four wins Thursday night to take over sole possession of first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Volleyball League during play at the CFB Esquimalt gymnasium.

Namdor downed CFB Esquimalt 15-0, 15-7 and topped Bunglers 16-6, 15-12.

In other games, Khalsa defeated Great Pumpkin 15-0, 15-7 and dropped Multi-Grade, 15-2, 15-16; Suke Teechrs topped Allenby Ford of Duncan 15-11 and picked up two 15-0 wins by default over Royal Roads; Allenby downed Suke 15-3 and collected two default wins over Royal Roads; CFB Esquimalt nudged Bunglers 15-12, 15-10 and Great Pumpkin posted a 15-3, 15-6 decision over Multi-Grade.

Namdor leads the league after seven weeks of play with 23 points and is followed by Khalsa (22), Great Pumpkin (21), Bunglers (14), Suke (12), CFB Esquimalt (9), Royal Roads (9), Multi-Grade (9) and Allenby Ford (7).

League games are all on Thursday nights between 7 and 10 p.m. at CFB gymnasium. Spectators are welcome and there is no admission.

Klammer Wins Downhill Test

VAL GARDENA, Italy (AP) — Franz Klammer of Austria won the men's World Cup downhill in this Italian resort Friday, covering the 3,750-metre course in 2:03.83 minutes.

Herbert Plank of Italy was second in 2:04.91 and Eric Haker of Norway third in 2:05.27.

The warm temperature made the track much slower than in previous days and Klammer was more than two full seconds slower than his record time of 2:01.22 for the course.

Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., and Ken Read of Calgary, both winners of World Cup downhill races last season, were the top Canadian finishers today.

Irwin was 14th in 2:07.53 and Read 17th in 2:08.29. Steve Podborski of Toronto was 18th in 2:08.37, Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., 29th in 2:10.71, and Jim Hunter of Calgary 34th in 2:11.72.

FIVE-YEAR TERM

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Former major league baseball star Orlando Cepeda was sentenced Thursday to five years in jail and fined $5,000 for trying to smuggle 170 pounds of marijuana into Puerto Rico from Colombia.

Herminio Cortez, a former winter league player who was arrested with Cepeda in December of 1975, was sentenced to 30 months in jail and also fined $5,000.

Federal judge Hernan Pesquera ordered both men to serve three years of parole after completion of their prison terms.

Cepeda, 39, who retired from major league baseball two years ago after a 17-year career, was arrested by police at San Juan International Airport with Cortes while they were picking up a shipment of boxes filled with marijuana.

A jury found Cepeda and Cortes guilty last month, but sentencing was delayed until Thursday.

Merchants Tie With Athletics

Juan de Fuca Merchants, currently residing in the South Island Big Six Hockey League cellar, came up with a surprise on Thursday night for leading Victoria Athletics at Pearkes Arena.

After entering the final period with a 4-2 deficit, Merchants managed to rally and earn a 5-5 tie with Athletics.

Dennis Head set the pace for Merchants with two goals while single were contributed by Dave McLachlan, Brian Carbery and Dan Roy. Dale Ewasiuk (2), Mark Purdy, Ross Swanton and Gord Nielson counter for Athletics, who now lead runner-up Western Homes Buckaroos by four points.

Regina Continues To Struggle Along

WINNIPEG (CP) — Regina Pats showed some signs of recovering from an unprecedented winless streak Thursday night but still came away on the short end of a 6-4 decision in a Western Canada Hockey League game against Winnipeg Monarchs.

The Monarchs jumped into a 2-0 first period lead but the Pats got goals from Ron Parent and Gerald Minor in the second period to move into a brief 2-2 tie before Monarchs regained the lead.

Regina battled back to tie the score twice more in the third period but the Monarchs fired two goals in the final minute to earn the victory and extend a Regina winless run to 28 games.

Dave Stekler, Greg McPhee, Eugene O'Sullivan, Daryl Einarson, Tom Roulston and Dave Morrison scored the Winnipeg goals.

Other Regina goals wree scored by Hugh Ellis, on a penalty shot in the third period, and Glen Ing.

NBA's 'Stable Year' Turns Into Hectic One

NEW YORK (AP) — "This was supposed to be a year of stability for the National Basketball Association, but two months into the season things are more hectic than ever.

The stunning deal involving Bob McAdoo, the league's top scorer each of the last three seasons, is only the most recent of a series of weekly developments in a sport which was supposed to be maintaining a low profile for a while.

Last year was the big one for off-court developments. The merger was consummated, ending nine years of often-heated conflict between the NBA and the upstart American Basketball Association. What's more, a progressive, long-term agreement was reached with the players' association, erasing the prospect of lengthy litigation.

"I'm looking forward to getting back to my office and watching some basketball this winter," commissioner Larry O'Brien said before the start of the season, echoing the sentiment of fans around the league.

All was peace and harmony as the 22 NBA teams headed for their pre-season training camps in late August. It didn't last long.

A rapid-fire series of surprises has kept the sport on its ear. In just two months, consider the following developments —

● Julius Erving, catalyst to the merger, heart and soul of the New York Nets franchise and perhaps the most magnetic player in the game, refused to report to the Nets in a contract dispute and was traded to Philadelphia 76ers for about $3 million.

Philadelphia drew record crowds wherever it went, but Nets' fans reacted angrily and now season ticketholders are being refunded a percentage of the ticket cost because of the loss of Erving. Nets coach Kevin Loughery observed that while $3 million is nice, it can't play forward.

● Moses Malone, who chose not to be a junior in college, was traded by Portland Trailblazers to Buffalo Braves, then one week later was shuffled off to Houston Rockets — his fifth team, at the tender age of 22.

● John Havlicek, the essence of "Celtic Pride," staged a brief pre-season holdout with Boston before signing. Paul Silas, the rugged rebounder and defensive bulwark, staged an extended holdout and was dealt to Denver.

Red Auerbach reunited UCLA stars Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe in Boston, purchasing Wicks from Portland and obtaining Rowe from Detroit Pistons in the three-way deal involving Silas.

● Just as things began to look up in Boston, Dave Cowens, the Celtics' fiery centre, walked into the club office one day and said he'd lost his passion for the game has been sapped and requested an indefinite leave of absence. He may be back in uniform later this season, he may be back next season, he may never be back.

● Pete Maravich, the peerless Pistol of New Orleans Jazz, said Cowens did what he was thinking of doing two weeks earlier — packing it all in. Soon thereafter, however, Maravich said he was happy once again and no longer thinking about quitting.

● An NBA single-game attendance record was set Oct. 26 in New Orleans when 27,383 turned out to see Erving and the 76ers play the Jazz in the Superdome. At the other end of the spectrum, only 73 fans braved blizzard conditions to buy tickets at the gate for a game in Buffalo, which drew a total crowd of 994.

● Larry Costello, the only coach Milwaukee Bucks ever have had, was forced to resign one month into the season and was replaced by Don Nelson, whose total coaching experience consisted of 18 games as Costello's assistant. Wayne Embry also resigned but stayed on to stay on until the end of the season as a lame duck general manager.

And, finally, there is McAdoo, the NBA scoring champion the last three years and the essence of the Buffalo club, who was dealt to New York Knicks for $3 million and reserve John Gianelli.

Trout, Steelhead Anglers Have to Work for Success

Fishermen going after winter chinooks are hitting it lucky in a number of Vancouver Island areas but trout and steelhead anglers are having to scratch around a little for their catches.

Several limits of winter chinooks to 26 pounds have been landed between Secretary Island and Possession Point at Sooke. Both anchovies and hootchies — either green and white or dark blue and white — are good producers when trolled close to the bottom.

At Pedder Bay, the average right now is about three fish per boat and 40 salmon have been weighed in since Saturday for the winter chinook derby which ends Jan. 2.

Top fish so far is a 24½-pounder landed Monday afternoon by Brian Gibson. Brian Waddell's 19½-pounder is second.

A hidden-weight draw is scheduled for Dec. 24 in the Peddar Bay Marina fishfest and the derby takes in all waters between Becher Bay and Albert Head.

Most catches have been made close to the bottom on anchovies or hootchies (either green and white or all white).

Constance Banks is still the main producer for fishermen venturing out from Oak Bay with chinooks averaging 11 pounds and sometimes tipping the scales to 22 pounds. Other excellent spots have been Trial Island and the Flats and green and white hootchies seem to be outcatching any other type of terminal gear.

Blueback fishing is turning out to be a deep-lines proposition at Deep Cove with most catches coming in from depths greater than 175 feet.

Waters between Tod Inlet and Willis Point are yielding chinooks to 11 pounds, mainly on strip, while blues from 14 to 16 inches in length can be picked up just about anywhere using hootchies and 250 feet of line and planer.

Hootchies and Squirts, fished in deep waters of Finlayson Arm, are pulling up a few chinooks to 15 pounds and some fair catches have turned up for both moochers and trollers working deep in Sansum Narrows.

Fantastic fishing is reported for chinooks averaging seven pounds right in Departure Bay as well as off Nanoose Bay and Harmac. The bite seems to be best just after dusk, around 5:30 or 6 p.m.

The only other productive spot on the Island has been from Duncan Bay to Willow Point, where chinooks to 16 pounds are biting on deeply-trolled strip.

Trout anglers have been connecting around the creek mouths in Cowichan Lake, throughout the West Arm of Shawnigan Lake and in both Somenos and Quamichan lakes.

Some good returns were also noted in the larger lakes of the Campbell River system.

Steelheaders are picking up some catches in the Cowichan River on small Spin-n-Glos and a few returns were reported from the Oyster and Puntledge systems.

Action has dropped off further north, however, with both the Salmon and Gold rivers running full. Returns have also diminished in the Campbell, despite the flogging it's been taking from large numbers of fisherman.

NIBBLES: Contrary to a rumor currently circulating around the Island, the wildlife management area being set up on Tofino Flats will not be closed to hunting . . . This is one of the last good waterfowl hunting areas left on the Island and it's nice to know that development, which has forced hunting closures in area after area in recent years, will be restricted under the new classification.

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association will hold their monthly Frostbite Derby from dawn to 2 p.m. Sunday.

South Vancouver Island Rangers will hold a Turkey Shoot for trap only from 11 a.m. to dusk Saturday and Sunday on their Luxton Road grounds . . . Everyone is welcome.

Ellison Sparks Flyers' Advance

Terry Ellison fired the last two goals of the game Thursday night to provide the winning edge as Fuller Lake Flyers came up with a 5-3 South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory over Oak Bay Trios at Oak Bay Arena.

The win boosted Flyers to within two points of leading Saanich Braves.

Flyers held period leads of 1-0 and 3-2 but Trios managed to tie it up before Ellison came through for the up-Islanders.

Ken Bell also scored two goals for Fuller Lake and a single was added by Gene Wrigglesworth. Dave Murrell, Mike Paget and Clay Bertoia replied for Trios.

Paul Vaeson was the busiest netminder, making 33 saves in the Oak Bay goal, while Ken Stanton of Flyers blocked 29 shots,

Trade Pleases Perez

MONTREAL (CP) — A four-player baseball trade Thursday between Montreal Expos and Cincinnati Reds left more than the two National League clubs happy.

First baseman Tony Perez, who joins Montreal from the Reds, and left-handed starting pitcher Woodie Fryman, who leaves the Expos for Cincinnati, are pleased as well.

"They have a lot of good young ballplayers—I feel great about it," Perez, speaking by telephone, said of the Expos, who acquired him and lefty reliever Will McEnaney in exchange for Fryman and righthanded reliever Dale Murray.

As a 10-year major-leaguer with the last five years with one team, Perez, 34, could have vetoed the deal if he had wanted. But the slugger said he believes the Expos are moving in the right direction with the acquisition of himself and free-agent second baseman Dave Cash from Philadelphia Phillies.

"I don't think of Montreal being like the team they were before. They have Dave Cash. They have me. They are going to get more players. We are going into the new stadium and we are going to have fun.

"I like the people in Montreal. I like the French-Canadians—at least they know how to pronounce my name."

Fryman, 36, has said he would like to finish his career with a winner, and the Reds are two-time World Series titlists.

"I'm happy because Cincinnati is only 85 miles from my home," said the Ewing, Ky., tobacco farmer by telephone.

Expos manager Dick Williams said the deal was "like an early Christmas present."

Perez batted .260 with 19 home runs and 91 RBIs in 1976. He has 277 career homers, ninth among active players.

Williams commended general manager Charlie Fox, who announced the trade, for complementing the signing of Cash, an outstanding leadoff man, with Perez, who probably will bat fourth for the Expos.

McEnaney pitched the final innings in each of the Reds' world championship wins in 1975 and 1976. He was 2-6 with a 4.88 earned-run average for the title-winning Reds this year.

The Expos gave up two of their top pitchers in Fryman and Murray. Fryman was 13-13 with a 3.38 ERA last season, while Murray posted a 4-9 mark with a 3.27 ERA coming out of the bullpen.

Grads Sharp With Rams

Mt. Douglas Grads expanded a 33-28 half-time lead Thursday night to defeat the current Rams team 81-56 in an exhibition basketball boys' game at Mt. Douglas High School.

Tom Watson sparked the Grads with 25 points while Jim Dudderidge added 14 points and John McManaman contributed 12.

His Own Boss Now

CINCINNATI (CP) — Ralph Staub, chief executive officer and top aide for Woody Hayes, has resigned after seven years at Ohio State to accept a four-year contract as head football coach at the University of Cincinnati.

Jan's Discretion Pays Off

AROUND OUR SHORES
pat dufour

Jan Olsen's Discretion has been the boat to beat in the B series completed by the Turkey Head Sailing Association on Sunday.

She cinched the series by winning both sailouts on Sunday in waters off Oak Bay Marina. Placing second and third in the series were John Watson's Drambuie and Jack Foster's Sly Fox.

Although THSA has no more series racing this year many of the boats will be out again on Sunday to join their Royal Victoria Yacht Club buddies in another long-distance race. Start time is set for 10 a.m. Racing will be in two categories — International Offshore Rule and Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet.

In return, there's likely to be a good turnout by RVYC boats for THSA's annual Boxing Day rum race. The race will begin at 11 a.m. and will be run on the reverse handicap system so that boats, hopefully, will all finish close together, allowing crew members plenty of time to gather in the Oak Bay Marina's coffee shop for the prize giving and hoiday get-together.

RVYC's Laser enthusiasts will be out again Saturday for around-the-buoy racing. The first gun goes at 1:30 p.m.

Bob Britten won the first race last Saturday, edging out Dave Richardson and Barry Wright. The last two races were both won by Jeff McBride. Bob Dalgleish and Dave Teece were runners-up in the second one while Charles Simpson and Eric Jespersen trailed Jeff the last time around.

★ ★ ★

It's getting almost commonplace for local sailers with an eye for a bargain to go abroad to buy their new dream boat and keep her out of the country for a year in order to avoid paying the crippling federal tax.

The latest one to join this club is navy commander Peter Hunter of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association. He has had a new 37-foot cutter shipped out as deck freight from Taiwan. Waiting out the year aboard her in Seattle will be Peter's wife, Marion, and their son, Nigel. Like the Hunters' old boat, she'll have the name, Nelson of Bronte, on her transom.

Wiggin Retained By Kansas City

Wiggin, 42, was hired in January, 1975, as the second head coach in the history of the Chiefs after Hank Stram was dismissed.

TENNIS TEAM OWNER CAN'T STAND HASSLE

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Owner Frank Fuhrer of Pittsburgh Triangles announced he would dissolve the World Team Tennis franchise for at least a year, not because of financial losses but because he couldn't take the hassles.

"It's not a matter of money," said the millionaire insurance broker who said he lost about $1.4 million on the team over three years.

"If it was just money I could play for a long time. I just don't want to put up with the crap and lose money at the same time. I'd rather play golf."

PRO PICKS

Chuck Foreman Doll Just Does Everything

NEW YORK (AP) — With a wave of George Allen's magic wand, Washington Redskins have made it to the National Football League playoffs.

It was not easy.

Those nice old men had to win their last four games to get into the Pete Rozelle Tournament and now, as a prize, their first-round opponents will be — drum roll, please, maestro — Minnesota Vikings.

You remember the Vikes, who clinched the National Conference Central crown about 10 weeks ago. Fran Tarkenton and Company on the attack with the ultimate offensive weapon, Chuck Foreman.

There is a joke around the NFL. Here is a Chuck Foreman doll. Wind it up and it does everything.

The real Foreman fits that description. He ran for 1,155 yards this season and caught 55 passes for 567 yards. "He's the best all-around back in the NFL," says Tarkenton, who may himself be the best quarterback.

Fran the Scram had his usual 2,000-yard season, completing 255 of 412 passes for 2,961 yards and 17 touchdowns.

How do the Redskins control that offence? The Pro Picker says they don't.

Last week's 10-4 record made the regular season mark 136-591 for .697.

★ ★ ★

SATURDAY

Minnesota 27, Washington 20

The Vikings got tripped up by the wild-card Dallis Cowboys a year ago and will not let that happen against a back-door team again.

With 30 seconds left and Billy Kilmer throwing 50-yard bombs to Frank Grant, the Vikes will be playing a better prevent defence than they did against Roger Staubach and Drew Pearson last year.

The Redskins were the last team to qualify for the playoffs. They will be the first to be eliminated from them.

Oakland 31, New England 21

The Patriots were the only team to beat the Raiders this season. Now Oaakland gets even.

The Raiders offence operates around quarterback Ken Stabler, who has enjoyed another standout season. New England's Steve Grogan, an emerging quarterback star, may be flashier but the left-handed Stabler is more consistent.

For this game, stay with consistency. The Patriots, however, will benefit from the playoff experience and it could help their future.

SUNDAY

Pittsburgh 14 Baltimore 10

They should save this game and play it in the Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 9. It could be better than the Super Bowl.

The Steelers' defence has permitted 28 points in the last nine games, which is slightly unreal. The offence has two 1,000-yard runners in Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier.

The Colts may be the best young team in football with Bert Jones at the controls throwing to Roger Carr, and Lydell Mitchell around to carry the ball. Too bad they must play the best old team.

Los Angeles 19, Dallas 13

Upset special. The Rams have the best personnel in the National conference and have been putting it together better lately

The Cowboys have been sluggish and are coming off the loss to Washington.

Brancato Hits NFL Expansion

NEW YORK (CP) — Coach George Brancato of the Grey Cup champion Ottawa Rough Riders says it's ridiculous for the National Football League to have such weak expansion teams as Seattle Seahawks and Tampa Bay Buccaneers "that can't compete in any league."

Brancato said in an interview that the Canadian Football League has become stronger by not expanding.

Whether it be pro hockey or football, expansion waters down the calibre of play where, in some cases, it isn't fair to the fans who are paying high ticket prices for something better, Brancato said.

The National Hockey League with expansion "really watered themselves down," he said. "In fact, the Canadian people don't even like to watch the NHL play anymore.

"There's just not enough players to go around, and I think this is what the CFL is going through. They have to hold back on their expansion now because they have team like Seattle and Tampa Bay that can't compete in any league. It's ridiculous."

Tampa Bay lost all 14 games in its inaugural season this year while Seattle won two and lost 12.

By spreading the talent so thin, it's not possible to provide the kind of competition that fans are paying $11 a ticket for, Brancato said.

MERCEDES-BENZ does not normally offer their fine cars at sale prices. So this is truly an exceptional opportunity.

At this moment, your local Mercedes-Benz dealer has a list of executive-driven company cars which are for sale at special prices—effective immediately

These are 1976 models in immaculate condition. All have less than 6500 miles on the odometer. Most have less than 4000 miles

So if you have ever considered owning a Mercedes-Benz, long acclaimed as "one of the world's finest automobiles", then now is the time to act.

See your local dealer. Remember, he has a complete description of all the company cars available for immediate delivery.

But act quickly. We fully expect these fine cars to be sold in a very short time. After all, this is a rare event.

Mercedes-Benz

Jodzio Awaits Trial Decision

QUEBEC (CP) — Left-winger Rick Jodzio of Calgary Cowboys of the World Hockey Association now is awaiting a decision on whether he will be sent to trial on criminal charges.

The preliminary hearing of Jodzio's case in Quebec City ended Wednesday and Judge Cyrille Potvin of sessions court will decide March 7 if the case will go to trial.

Jodzio has been charged with assault with intent to injure Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques in an April 11 WHA game in Quebec City. Under section 228 of the Criminal Code of Canada, Jodzio faces a possible five-year jail sentence if he is convicted.

WHAT ELSE BUT GOLF AND GIRLS?

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Jim Colbert's eyes brightened and a smile crossed his face as he was asked for his assessment of the new Mixed Team golf championship in which men and women touring pros were playing together for the first time in a decade.

"What else is there in life but golf and girls?" he replied. The women seemed to agree.

"It's nice to have a man around out there," said Pat Bradley, who teamed with Master's champion Ray Floyd in the selected drive, alternate shot competition in the $200,000 event on the Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

Dr. Gil Morgan and Marlene Hagge led after Thursday's wind-blown first round with a six-under-par 66.

The Bradley-Floyd team was one shot back at 67. Four teams were tied at 68.

The favored team of Judy Rankin and Ben Crenshaw could do no better than a 70 and the pair of Sandra Post, formerly of Oakville, Ont., and Tom Watson shot a 71.

The unique format allows both team members to drive on each hole—the man from the championship tees, the women from the ladies' tees. The difference in the tee markers ranged from 25 to about 70 yards. The team is allowed to select the drive they want and then play alternate shots on the same ball for the remainder of the hole.

Trudeau, Other Leaders Flout AIB Over Raises

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, his 32-member cabinet, 26 parliamentary secretaries, Opposition Leader Joe Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent all will get pay raises Jan. 1 that exceed Anti-Inflation Board guides.

All will receive an automatic seven-per-cent boost in salaries and allowances that will push their pay higher than the $2,400-a-year increase allowed under government wage and price control regulations.

Ordinary MPs will also receive a seven-per-cent raise Jan. 1 on salaries of $24,000 and tax-free expense allowances of $10,600. But the increase will only come to $2,300 because it is rounded off to the nearest $100 below the actual calculation.

Broadbent urged the government Thursday to block any increase above the $2,400 ceiling imposed by the Liberal administration when it started controls more than a year ago.

Trudeau will get a raise of $4,600 next year, nearly double the allowed limit. Currently he receives the $34,600 given all MPs, plus $33,333 because he's prime minister.

Clark and cabinet ministers, who now receive $20,000 in addition to their $34,600 in salary and allowances, will get pay boosts of $3,800 next year.

Mr. Broadbent, parliamentary secretaries, party whips and Opposition House Leader Walter Baker will get raises of $2,700, based on seven per cent of their usual pay, plus $5,300 in benefits that go with their parliamentary positions.

The increases, automatic under a bill passed by Parliament, were frozen last December. Then, Trudeau announced that MPs would not receive a scheduled seven-per-cent increase in salary as part of the government's austerity program. They had been given a 33.3-per-cent pay raise the year before.

When he announced the freeze, Trudeau excluded a freeze on tax-free expense allowances. But the government later imposed a control on that benefit to cool public protest.

Trudeau refused to discuss the subject with a reporter Thursday, but External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said the government was checking to see whether an increase in the $10,600 tax-free allowance fell outside the $2,400 yearly limit ordered by the controls board.

KNOWLES WILL GIVE RAISE TO CHARITY

OTTAWA (CP) — All MPs get pay raises Jan. 1, but one who won't accept his increase is the veteran House leader of the New Democratic Party, Stanley Knowles.

The 66-year-old MP for Winnipeg North Centre will do as he's done in the past, and give his extra $2,300 to charity. He won't accept any raise until he's fought a subsequent election so his constituents know exactly how much their MP will cost.

Knowles has been elected 11 times, first coming to the Commons in 1942.

The $2,300 raise for MPs comes on top of $25,000 annual salaries and $10,600 tax-free expense allowances. It is automatic under a two-year-old law that gives parliamentarians annual raises. Last year, the government froze the increase as part of a spending-restraint drive.

Danson Eyeing Updated Radar

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian Defence Minister Barney Danson expressed some sympathy Thursday for U.S. proposals to upgrade North American and NATO air defence.

After discussions with U.S. Defence Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, Danson told reporters a major topic was the proposed airborne radar system the United States wants to establish in North America.

The Canadian government has yet to make a decision on participation, but Danson said "our radar systems are getting pretty old now and do need updating."

He said he could not give a precise estimate of how much it would cost Canda to participate in setting up the system, but the amount would be closer to $100 million than $1 million.

He said he found the Americans had no specific deadline in mind for agreement on the Canada-U.S. system.

A decision on that could wait until after late January or early February, when NATO ministers decide on the NATO system.

The NATO system would cost a total of $2.5 billion and would include attack control as well as radar warning.

Danson said, "Without exception, I think all members of NATO feel the system is militarily important, good and necessary."

Although in Brussels last week he said Canadian participation in setting up the NATO system would cost about $200 million, he said Thursday he could give no estimated cost because the possible Canadian share is being negotiated.

Danson said that in addititon to discussions on the airborne radar systems, he had useful general briefings on Canada-U.S. defence co-operation.

Questioned whether U.S. officials expressed any concern about developments in Quebec as a possible threat to U.S. security, Danson said the topic was not raised.

PM Drops 'Scrums'

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau has decided to hold once-weekly news conferences in a move designed to free him from the present impromptu talks with reporters around Parliament almost daily.

A letter Thursday to the Parliamentary Press Gallery from Richard O'Hagan, the prime minister's special adviser on communications, says Trudeau proposes a formal weekly news conference on Thursdays during the parliamentary session.

The first would be next week and the weekly series would be resumed when Parliament returns from its scheduled Christmas recess in late January.

The formal news conferences, said O'Hagan, "we see as substituting for the impromptu contacts or 'scrums' following caucus, cabinet and outside the chamber of the House of commons."

But this new system would not rule out "ad hoc meetings . . when warranted clearly by circumstances or events," O'Hagan said.

Dumont
SELECT MILD

Dumont SELECT MILD cigarettes have been carefully developed to satisfy the two consistent requirements of Canadian smokers... effectively filtered mildness and good old-fashioned tobacco flavour.

Our researchers set themselves the double task of designing a filtration system that was the most efficient possible, and at the same time interfered least with the fine flavour of good tobacco.

Dumont SELECT MILD is the outstanding result of their labours... a completely new product which in every way satisfies the demands of the modern smoker for a sensibly filtered cigarette that delivers the rich tobacco flavour that smoking is all about.

Watch for the Dumont SELECT MILD display where you buy your cigarettes, and try this advanced new cigarette for yourself.

Mildness and flavour go together.

Warning: Health and Welfare Canada advises that danger to health increases with amount smoked – avoid inhaling. • King Size. Tar 9 mg. Nic. 0.6 mg.

Jamieson Objects To MPs' Free Trips

Jamieson

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Thursday he would prefer if MPs did not accept free trips to Taiwan because such a journey could be misinterpreted as Canadian recognition of the government there.

The minister's statement, made in an interview, was rejected by fellow Liberal Ralph Stewart of Cochrane, Ont., who said he has received an invitation to go to the island and he hopes some day to accept it. (Jamieson was commenting on a Toronto report that five MPs have been invited to take free trips to the island — whose Republic of China government is not recognized by Canada.

Robert Smylie, public relations man who represents the Republic of China, said the MPs will spend six days in Taiwan. (Jamieson said the government has done what it can to discourage such trips and added he would prefer that MPs not go.

He noted that since 1970 Canada has recognized the People's Republic of China government in Peking.

Visits of MPs to Taiwan — and to three other areas whose governments were not recognized by Canada — were open to the misinterpretation that Canada is extending some form of recognition.

The other three areas are North Korea, Rhodesia and Namibia (South West Africa).

The external affairs department has a year-old policy of refusing to issue official passports to MPs visiting the four places. These passports, available for travel elsewhere, assure MPs of better treatment than ordinary tourists.

However, the MPs can still travel on the regular passports available to all Canadians.

Stewart said Jamieson's argument is a "lot of balderdash and an external affairs cliche."

"Since when does an MP going anywhere indicate a degree of recognition," he said.

He said external affairs should not attempt to impose its point of view on MPs, adding that they were free agents and had to visit various areas to be exposed to problems first hand.

Gov't Business Guide Attacked

OTTAWA (CP) — Government guides to prevent illegal or improper overseas business deals by Crown corporations were announced Thursday and immediately attacked by opposition MPs as unenforceable.

Under the guides Crown corporations must establish and follow formal procedures when hiring agents to promote or sell goods in foreign countries. But enforcement of those procedures is left to the corporations, not the government.

New Democrats said the policy is too weak because it allows Crown corporations to make an exception to the guides "where it is satisfied such exception is warranted."

That clause was not meant as a loophole, Treasury Board President Robert Andras told the Commons after tabling the guides. If a corporation makes an exception to the gudes, it must be documented in the company's annual report.

T. C. Douglas (NDP-Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) said the government should provide tough enforcement.

Records Open to U.S. Spies

OTTAWA (CP) — United States intelligence organizations can obtain details of the travel and entertainment habits of upper-income Canadians who use American Express credit cards because records of the transactions are maintained in the U.S., a company official said Thursday.

James Boff, vice-president of the card division of the company's Canadian subsidiary, American Express Co. of Canada Ltd., told the Commons social affairs committee the records can be obtained by subpoena.

He said the card holder would never be informed his personal file had been turned over if the disclosure were prevented by the wording of the subpoena.

The company issues cards mostly to upper-income Canadians, he told the committee reviewing proposed consumer credit legislation. More than 80 per cent of American Exrpess card holders in Canada have family incomes in excess of $15,000 and 60 per cent above $20,000.

He said the company provides cards in 16 currencies throughout the world and that the card can be used just about anywhere.

Boff said it is company policy not to show the records to anyone unless the permission of the card holder is granted or they are subpoenaed.

"We're dependent on the good will of your company that you wouldn't do those things," said John Rodriguez (NDP-Nickel Belt).

He said in an interview later the company was "set up beautifully to gather information in 16 countries."

Brass Fired As Payoffs Rock Firms

Washington Post

NEW YORK — Questionable payments continued to rock the financial segment of the United States Thursday as Continental Oil Co. and Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. revealed that top officials of both firms had been fired for involvement in payoffs.

And Philip Morris, Inc., disclosed in a filing with the Securities and Exchange Commission that its Miller Brewing Co. unit made nearly $2 million in questionable payments between 1971 and May, 1974, to promote the domestic sales of Miller beer.

In a surprise move, Continental Oil Co., 16th largest industrial corporation in the U.S., late Wednesday fired two of its four vice-chairmen because Conoco said they knew about or took part in questionable domestic political payments but withheld the information from a committee of company directors investigating the disbursements.

Conoco officials who were fired are Wayne Glenn, vice-chairman for petroleum exploration and production and minerals, and Willard Burnap, vice-chairman, petroleum refining and marketing. Glenn also gave up his seat on the 15-member Conoco board of directors.

The investigation is "substantially complete" according to a Conoco statement, and so far has turned up a total of $85,000 in company funds used to make unauthorized political contributions to federal, state and local officials in the United States, and $148,000 in payments that went to politicians or political parties abroad. No names of recipients were disclosed.

Schlitz, which disclosed in June 1975 that the Securities Exchange Commission was investigating alleged payments to the company's retail accounts to handle Schlitz products as part of a wide probe of the beer and liquor industry, Thursday announced a major shakeup in its marketing department as a result of its own investigation.

Four marketing executives were put on leave of absence last August, and it was revealed Thursday that three have been fired — including Robert Martin, senior vice-president-marketing; Thomas Roupas, vice-president-sales, and Abraham Gustin, director of national sales services — while the fourth, William Timpone, director of field sales, has resigned.

Philip Morris, in its SEC filing, said that it had uncovered no improper use of corporate funds by Miller Brewing for payments to government officials or for political contributions, but that $1.97 million had been paid out over more than three years "in commercial transactions to promote the sale of Miller beer."

Hearst at parents' home

'No Sense at All,' Says Patty

NEW YORK (AP) — Patricia Hearst says she's still trying to figure out how she got so "twisted around in my own head" that she never tried to escape from the Symbionese Liberation Army SLA.

"It doesn't make any sense at all, and it's something that I'm still working on myself," the convict-heiress said in a televised interview on CBS Thursday night.

The 22-year-old daughter of newspaper executive Randolph Hearst told interviewer Harold Dow much the same story of her life with the underground terrorists that was rejected by the jury in her bank-robbery trail earlier this year.

But she issued her strongest denuciation yet of the six SLA members who were killed in a Los Angeles house on May 17, 1974: "I feel that they got exactly what they deserved in Los Angeles, exactly what they'd asked for. And I don't feel sorry for them at all."

She said one of the dead, SLA leader Donald Defreeze, known as "Cinque," was a "complete maniac, alcoholic, egotistical, raping, murdering, horrible person."

Senate Conducts Spy Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate intelligence committee staff is inquiring into the operations of South Korean, Chilean and Iranian intelligence agencies in the United States, said a committee spokesman.

The inquiry also is seeking to determine whether the activities of these foreign spy agencies are being conducted with the knowledge and consent of the CIA.

The inquiry has been under way for more than two months at the staff level, but three prominent senators have asked committee Chairman Daniel Inouye (Dem. Hawaii) to launch a full-scale investigation.

In a letter sent Thursday to Inouye, Senators Hubert Humphrey (Dem. Minn.), Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.) and Charles Mathias (Rep. Md.) said that "political contributions through Korean CIA conduits, the harassment by those agencies of Korean opponents of the current regime, and similar allegations concerning Iran's Savak and Chile's DINA, are among the specific charges that might be appropriate for investigation."

JOB CON MAN GETS $2,000

SEATTLE (AP) — A man offering high paying jobs in Alaska may have conned Seattle area residents out of as much as $2,000 before fleeing his motel, authorities say.

A "Mr. Graber" ran a classified advertisement in a local newspaper offering immediate work in Alaska for "skilled and unskilled labor" at $1,500 a month and up.

The man said he was representing Seaward Maintenance, an oil company affiliate, which turned out to be nonexistent, said Gene Anderson of the prosecutor's fraud division. He left the area shortly before police were to arrest him, Anderson said.

CREATING NEW JOBS FROM COMMUNITY PROJECTS.

Canada Works

Young Canada Works

Canada Works is a new job creation program that will be launched in January.

This new year-round program is designed to get needed work done by people not employed in the private sector.

Canada Works will accept applications from groups and organizations including private businesses who wish to develop, sponsor and administer worthwhile community projects. Funds will mainly be allocated to areas of high unemployment and projects will be tailored to special employment needs of your local community.

Canada Works will generate employment for more than 60,000 Canadians who are presently unemployed. Applications will be considered twice a year – in Winter and Summer.

Think about your projects now! Early in the new year, your local Canada Manpower Centre will have application forms and a Canada Works "Guide to Applicants," with full details on the program. Canada Works for your community. Make your worthwhile projects work next year!

Manpower and Immigration — Main-d'œuvre et Immigration
Bud Cullen, Minister — Bud Cullen, Ministre

This part of the program is for students. Young Canada Works will create jobs for more than 20,000 students next summer. The emphasis will be on projects of solid community value. It has many of the same features as the year-round program, except projects will be limited to 14 weeks during the summer months.

At the same time, Young Canada Works will enable students to gain valuable work experience and test their career aspirations.

Like Canada Works, your Canada Manpower Centre will have application forms and a Young Canada Works "Guide to Applicants" early in the new year.

Raindrops Keep Falling on Heads Of Ski Operators

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Skiers are getting depressed, resort owners are shelling out refunds for cancellations, and ski tow owners are beginning to fret over the cost of off-season renovations.

And all of it for a lack of snow, the bane of major ski centres near here in the key, two-week pre-Christmas period.

"It's raining," was the most frequent weather report this week from several ski operators in the mountainous areas around Vancouver, a city noted for its rainfall.

"They're all crying about this late opening date," said Leo Shapiro, secretary-manager of the Canada West Skiers Association, which represents ski centre operators throughout Canada's western provinces.

"Some operators are losing two and three weeks of operation, which might be the difference between a loss or a profit for the year, and the skiers are getting downright depressed," Shapiro said.

The lack of snow is a problem throughout the west, according to Gary Kiefer, general manager of Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd., one of the area's largest operators.

"It's the same in the rest of British Columbia, Alberta and the western United States," Kiefer said. "Even Banff and Jasper are only marginal."

Kiefler said his firm had spent $7.5 million over the past 18 months to add tram and chair lifts at the firm's operation on Grouse Mountain, some 40 minutes from Vancouver.

"There's a lot of long faces right now in this business," he said. "Three of the last five years have been good years, but a group that makes a profit can generally attribute it to an early opening."

Kiefer said Grouse was two weeks behind normal opening and the firm now hoped for a full start-up by Christmas, depending, of course, on the snow conditions.

A week further behind was Garibaldi Lifts Ltd., which operates on Whistler Mountain about 75 miles north of the metropolitan area.

Garibaldi spokesman Al Turner said Whistler usually started operations in the third week of November to cash in on the American Thanksgiving holidays. "What it means," he said, "is that either this year or next the balance sheet just won't look so good."

An area recently incorporated into a "resort municipality" under provincial legislation, Whistler is taking a large loss in the inn and resort hotel trade.

John Mitzel, general manager of the Christiana and Cheakamus Inns, said the Cheakamus had been booked solid for the American Thanksgiving holiday but refunds had to be made because there was no skiing.

'Like Hitting the Side of a Building'

By MIKE HUGHES
(Times Staff)

Tirjeet Singh Johl, 3662 Dartmouth, said in an interview today he is certain of one thing, "it was a pretty shaky experience."

But as for other details about the flight which ditched in the chilly waters of Juan de Fuca Strait, "I'm still trying to straighten it out."

Johl, the owner of Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. on Admirals Road, said the plane hit the water hard a first time, bounced up and then came down again.

"Everyone just stayed calm," Johl said of the other 13 passengers and two crewmembers.

Johl, who takes the AirWest flight back and forth to Vancouver about once a week, was asked if he's thinking twice about flying in the future.

"Oh, for sure."

The two other Victoria passengers on the flight Thursday morning from Vancouver to Victoria were Gwenneth Saunders, 884 Falkland, and Dr. Peter Coy, 4532 Tiedemann.

Mrs. Saunders, 60, the only woman on the flight, refused to discuss the incident.

Coy, head of the Victoria Cancer Clinic, said it didn't appear the pilot was making a landing at the time the plane hit the water.

He said one of the passengers was watching the altimeter through the cockpit door and noticed it drop from 20 feet to zero and was wondering where the pilot had miscalculated when the plane hit.

He said the 16 people aboard sat inside the plane about 10 minutes discussing what to do.

He said it was interesting how much concern there was for the two dogs, locked in metal cages.

The doors were opened to give the dogs a chance to go into the water. One of the dogs made it, the only casualty of the ordeal.

Coy said the passengers heard a helicopter nearby at one stage and then the sound faded.

About five or 10 minutes later, the U.S. Navy helicopter returned, landed on the water and picked up the passengers and crew.

They were later transferred to a National Harbors Board pilot boat and brought into Victoria. All were taken to hospital for examination and later released.

Coy said he was "rather embarrassed" that he was the only one who didn't get wet.

He said he was able to jump from the pontoon of the downed plane to the helicopter with only his shoes getting a little damp.

The other people had to jump into the water and swim to the helicopter.

Len Kowalewich, of Port Moody, a cameraman for CTV, was one of he pasengers and was able to shoot film of the rescue effort, shown later on the news Thursday night.

He also took the time to have all those involved autograph his life jacket which he was wearing when he arrived in Victoria.

"It was like hitting the side of a building . . . if we were descending any steeper than that, I think none of us would have been celebrating Christmas this year," he said.

He said the pilot admitted he had made the approach to Victoria too low to the water.

"He admitted himself that he came too low," he said.

Kowalewich said the plane bounced 150 feet after the first impact, then pancaked back into the water.

Norman Sigsworth of North Vancouver, western region manager of the transport ministry's safety branch, said he was "shaken" by the accident.

"I don't think anybody could go through that and not feel something," he said.

"We knew a distress signal had been sent. I knew enough about search and rescue that someone would come. It was just a question of when."

Coy said he offered his dry clothes to the other passengers in the helicopter who were shivering "but no one seemed to want to take their wet clothes off and get colder."

TOWN TALK

By special permission of Santa the Postmaster-General, all the letters are intercepted and opened and replies sent from Vancouver.

Children receive a reply that says "Hi. Your letter really cheered up the gang here in reindeer land.

"The elves, Mrs. Claus and I had a jolly time taking a break from our busy schedule to read your letter."

The reply tells a little story about life at the North Pole and ends with: "Your message is going into my special notebook and we're looking forward to visiting your home on Christmas Eve. Love Santa."

★ ★ ★

There are ho, ho, ho's and then there are HO! HO! HO'S!

One mother reports he is "just fantastic with children the best I've seen in my lifetime."

Apparently the ebullient St. Nick has the patience of a true saint, taking extra time with the kiddies.

Once he was observed on his hands and knees with a youngster going through the toy section of a department store catalogue. Town Talk salutes all Santas and wishes them all a Merry Christmas.

The scales were tilted against them when the town's volunteer fire department wanted to get into the act and receive them too.

The council this week, after a heated debate on what Mayor Peter Malcolm termed "the turkey delight", decided to give neither the staffers nor the firemen the bird with only Malcolm and Ald. Ross Martin voting in favor of handing out vouchers.

Even the environmentalists chuckled Thursday during a public hearing on Saanich's controversial Roy Road housing project when one resident used a play on words to introduce some comic relief into the proceedings.

Joe McRoberts, 5221 Sapphire, tired of hearing concerns voiced about the fate of the birds on Panama Flats blurted: "Environment queer ducks . . . they're the first to go into the bush to shoot them."

The reaction . . . instant applause.

It's with a little smile of sympathy, because spelling bugs us too, that we note president E. E. Moyse of the Vancouver Island Curling Association reporting in a bulletin that in a seniors' tournament there were nine rinks and four births.

Births, berths, we know what you mean, E.E. But will the players' wives understand?

★ ★ ★

In fact McGeer, who has said some extremely harsh words about local brands in the past, is becoming a downright mellow fellow.

Sipping the Christmas present from the college, McGeer commented that it was the best B.C. wine he'd ever tasted, adding he was pleased the "education system can do something well."

Attorney-General Garde Gardom; "Not bad. Not bad at all." And Premier Bennett; "Pretty good."

'Worst Toy' Candidates Sold in City

At least three of the "worst Christmas toys" listed by an American author are sold in Victoria stores this year.

Lawyer Edward Swartz in his book Toys That Don't Care says the toys may be harmful, even deadly to youngsters.

Two department stores and a toy specialty store checked by the Times said they carried one or more of the items.

None had been informed of any hazard from these or any other toys by consumer services officials, fire marshal or consumer spokesmen.

Swartz lists 10 of the worst toys of 1976 being sold across the U.S., some of which he claims, are capable of blinding, choking, burning or maiming a child. He blames the toy industry for not warning parents and other shoppers precisely of the risks.

The three toys available here are The Original Holly Hobbie, by Knickerbocker Toy Co., Middlesex, N.J., which allegedly has inflamable clothes and components, the Bumble Bee Pull Toy, an import item carried by Woolworth stores, with wings that come off to reveal a sharp steel rod that can cut or pierce flesh and Ramper Stompers, by Hasboro Industries, Pawtucket, R.I., a walking device that Swartz says may sprain a limb or cause a child to stumble.

A Hudson's Bay spokesman said it had sold out of its stock of Romper Stompers and in the U.S., Woolworth's said it has ordered its stores to withdraw the Bumble Bee toy.

The Holly Hobbie doll is imported to Canada by Ganz Bros., Montreal, and one storekeeper said the consumer's association had used it in a recent demonstration of safe toys at a Victoria mall.

A Sears spokesman said if Holly Hobbie is unsafe, her sister dolls Heather and Amy would likely be in the same category.

Several of the other toys listed by Swartz involve exploding caps and missiles, but none by the trades names given turned up in the Times survey.

Swartz said the toys he listed are by no means the only unsafe ones being marketed but they are examples of the types of hazards threatening children.

He said U.S federal regulations are too lax and leave too much authority in the hands of the toy industry.

He called for the industry to offer realistic and precise warnings to buyers.

TENANTS DOUSE FIRE

The fire started behind a chair in the corner of suite 204 occupied by Susan Biggs causing about $3,000 fire and water damage.

Tenants grabbed one of the building's fire hoses to extinguish the blaze. Some water leaked down to the apartment below.

Officials have not yet determined the cause.

Firemen Mediator At Work

Mediator Clark Gilmour began meeting today with representatives of both sides in the Victoria firefighters' dispute.

Gilmour was appointed this week by Labor Minister Allan Williams after the firemen threatened to strike Jan. 1 if the city failed to pay the full amount granted them in an arbitration award.

The city's position is that to pay the full amount, bringing the firemen to the same level as their Vancouver counterparts, would be over the limit allowed under federal wage guidelines.

United Way Raised $770,000

A total of $770,000 was raised in Greater Victoria in this year's United Way campaign, Stuart Drummond, executive director, said today.

Although this is $30,000 short of the goal, he said it represented an 11 per cent increase over last year's campaign.

"The 11 per cent is new money raised," he said. "It puts Victoria in fifth place in terms of new money raised of 20 major campaigns across Canada."

While United Way didn't reach its $800,000 goal, he said this actually does not mean too much.

"Some cities set low goals and make much of the fact that they topped it," he said. "What really counts is new money raised and whether enough money has been raised to support the various agencies."

City Appeals LRB Decision

The City of Victoria has asked the Labor Relations Board to reconsider a ruling last week which deprived three senior officials, including a department head and a deputy head, of their management status.

But Mayor Mike Young said Thursday it is "ridiculous" to suggest council is appealing the decision because it fears trimmed management ranks would be unable to keep services going in the event of another strike-lockout situation.

(Almost one-third of the city's former 38-strong management structure has been removed and transferred to union jurisdiction under the LRB's two recent rulings).

Young stressed council has no strong feelings about the decision. He said the city is taking the appeal action mainly because the employees concerned don't have any individual recourse to appeal, "and the feeling we received was that they themselves would like the matter reviewed."

The employees affected are land commissioner Kenneth Wilkins, assistant planning director Peter Crisp and data processing supervisor Francis Grealy.

In a letter sent Thursday to the board, asking for their case to be reconsidered, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers challenges the assertion that Crisp cannot be said to be employed for the primary purpose of exercising management functions over other employees, because he acts "on behalf of" his department head.

"By this reasoning, carried to its reductio ad absurdum, only one employee of one employer can ever be a member of management, namely, the person at the pinnacle," says de Villiers.

As far as the city is concerned that person would be the city manager, "for every other employee necessarily reports, either directly or indirectly, to him."

"Apart from its logical absurdity this ruling is inconsistent with the panel's finding, on the same general application, that other deputy department heads in the city are engaged for the primary purpose of exercising management functions, e.g., Mr. John Bate in the department of recreation and Mr. Alan Smith in the parks department."

The city solicitor notes that Grealy, a divisional head within the treasurer's department, is included in the bargaining unit while purchasing agent Harry Robinson, who has similar status, powers and duties, is excluded.

With regard to Wilkins, he says the panel based its decision on the fact that only one employee reports to him, while the Labor Code refers to "other employees" in the plural.

But he points out that the Labor Code is subject to the provisions of the Interpretation Act, a section of which reads: "In an enactment words in the singular include the plural, and words in the plural include the singular."

De Villiers concludes that for the purposes of the code, it is sufficient to find that there is only one employee over whom management functions are performed.

"Any other construction would result in a member of management becoming a member of the bargaining unit whenever the number of employees subordinate to him falls below two, and re-emerging from it whenever one additional employee is hired," he states.

Bids in January On 'Y' Addition

Tenders will be called in early January for the $1.1 million expansion to the Victoria YM-YWCA building at 880 Courtney St.

The project received a boost when Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf announced in November the "Y" will receive a grant for one-third the amount from the Community Recreation Facilities Fund.

President Henning Norgaard said the expanded facilities will include a teaching pool equipped for use by handicapped, courts for handball, racquetball and squash; a new youth centre, individual exercise area, auxiliary gym and expanded locker room facilities.

More than 2,200 individual contributions were received to bring the expansion fund over the needed $1.1 million mark, Norgaard said.

For $375,000, Satisfaction

David Duncan of Victoria has been a service station operator and a furnace oil salesman—but what he really wanted to do was own a pub.

"On Jan. 1, I become the owner of the Prairie Inn," he said today.

"I paid $375,000. It's a lot of money but I have always wanted to own a place like that."

On Boxing Day, 1974, it became British Columbia's first neighborhood pub.

There are rooms above the drinking area but they have not been used in recent years.

"I don't plan any immediate changes in the Prairie Inn," Duncan said.

"The staff will stay as it is. I want to look things over for awhile and maybe I will begin making renovations in about a year. I would like to do something with the upstairs area — possibly offices or games rooms."

He bought the Prairie Inn from three local partners who were asking $500,000.

Duncan said the sale was completed quickly and he will resign as a salesman for Home Heat Centre at month's end to run the inn.

"I know the area very well. I was born in Brentwood and spent the first 16 years of my life there. This is quite an adventure and I am looking forward to it."

to shop and service tends to be even slower than usual.

Christmas is a tough time It's quite a chore considering all the different tastes, likes and dislikes, sizes and styles of the gifts, you're buying.

The Christmas rush is not the ideal time for careful shopping decisions and almost everyone makes a mistake: wrong size, wrong color, a duplicate of something the person already has or, quite simply, the recipient simply doesn't like the gift and wants to exchange it.

Immediately following Christmas, stores are busy making refunds and exchanges and consumer agencies are flooded with consumer complaints about stores that refuse to give a refund.

The cause of much of the grievance is simply that people don't know that a store doesn't have to accept returns, make cash refunds or even exchanges. The fact that many large retailers, such as major department stores, do give money back has caused many people to assume that stores are required to do this by the virtue of some consumer protection law.

This simply IS NOT the case. Stores are allowed to set their own refund and exchange policies.

In fact, they can even refuse to make any adjustments on a purchase.

A purchase is in effect a completed "contract" even when nothing has been put on paper. The transaction itself is a contract and payment is the completion of the contract.

Most stores, however, do provide some way for consumers to "correct their mistakes."

Most large retailers will refund cash but the bulk of smaller retailers cannot afford to cancel sales they've already made and therefore opt for exchange policies or credit slips to customers who wish to return an item but cannot find anything in the store at the time to replace the purchase.

The refund and exchange policy of a store is usually posted on the cash register or in many cases it's printed on the store's bill of sale. Usually it states "No Cash Refunds" or it may have a time limitation within which an item may be exchanged.

But it is not always convenient merely to have the right to exchange an item.

A credit slip might not be useful for a consumer who may have no interest in purchasing anything other than the original gift from that particular store.

The only protection a consumer has is to find out what the store's refund and exchange policy is before completing the purchase. If the store doesn't give cash refunds and the consumer is uncertain whether the product will be suitable, then it is better to try another store with a more favorable policy.

If a sales clerk promises a customer a cash refund upon return of the item after Christmas, the consumer should ask that the promise be written on the bill of sale especially if the store normally has a no cash refund policy. The sales clerk may be in the store parttime for the Christmas period. It will be difficult to prove that any such promise was made.

Consumers should also be aware that many sales, including pre-Christmas sales, may mean that all sales are final and the store will not accept returns or even povide exchanges. In fact, if something is purchased on sale, it may be the end of a line and it will be difficult to have the the item exchanged for a different size after Christmas.

Consumers should also be store to put an item on layaway in early December, planning to pick it up and pay the balance just before Christmas. Once again it's important to know the store's policy pertaining to the deposit which is paid by the customer in order to "hold" the item.

It's possible that before Christmas, the consumer will find a more appropriate gift and decide to make the purchase in another store. What happens to the deposit? Some stores will not refund deposits, others may hold back a portion of the deposit to cover bookkeeping and other expenses.

Ask the sales clerk to spell out the store policy on the sales slip given as a receipt for the deposit.

If something that is purchased before Christmas goes on sale after Christmas, the consumer is NOT automatically entitled to take advantage the sale prices when exchanging the item.

Needless to say, a consumer should keep ALL bills, receipts and price tags for Christmas gifts. They are proof that an item was purchased in a particular store and not in another store or even shoplifted. Stores do not have to give refunds or make exchanges unless a customer is capable of presenting the bill of sale.

Telephone Addict Can Talk Forever

DEAR ABBY: I have a "sickness" that you've probably never heard of, and it's costing me a small fortune. It's telephonitis!

I am constantly calling friends all over the U.S. and Canada, and once I get started, I hate to hang up. I can talk an hour!

I don't want my husband to know how much my phone bills are, so I sometimes reverse the charges, and then send them a cheque to cover it. I've even charged some calls to my husband's business, but he hasn't caught on to that yet.

Right now I am fighting the urge to call the newspaper to find out how I can reach you by telephone instead of writing this letter. I lost. I phoned the newspaper, but they said you had an unlisted number!)

This may sound dumb to you, but I assure you it is a serious problem. Please, please tell me what I can do about it.—AFFLICTED.

DEAR AFFLICTED: When you get the urge to make a long-distance call, write a letter, take a walk, take a bath, bake a cake or read something. And if you can't stay away from the phone, call a local shut-in and talk until the urge passes.

DEAR ABBY: It was like an answer to my prayers when I saw a letter in your column from a man who was worried because ever since his wife became pregnant, she'd been craving Argo laundry starch! Wherever did she buy it? If I could find some, I'd be the happiest woman in the world because that's what works best for ny nylon net curtains.

For years I've been searching for Argo starch, but no store in my area has it. All they have is liquid starch, which doesn't compare to the old-fashioned kind that used to come in a blue and white box and looked like chalk.

Can you help me find some? — CARLA.

DEAR CARLA: I'll try. Does anyone out there know IF Argo laundry starch is still available? And if so, where?

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful 24-year-old college-educated daughter who is getting married soon. Her future husband wants her to keep a kosher kitchen. Do you think she should?—MOM

DEAR MOM: Not unless he's Jewish.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a girl who's nearly 18, and I have this thing about kissing. For some weird reason, kissing turns me off completely. I can't stand to be kissed by a boy, and I can't bring myself to kiss one.

Even as a child I hated it when a relative would say, "Come here and give me a kiss."

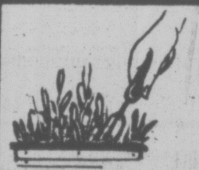
I am dating a nice boy who has been very patient with me. Most guys would give up on a girl who refused to kiss him.

I know I'm letting my boyfriend down because of my hangup and I'll probably lose him soon because I can't expect him to go with me forever if I don't kiss him.

My mom tells me to force myself, but I just can't.

Other girls my age seem to enjoy kissing, but it's repulsive to me. Please help me. — HATES TO KISS

DEAR HATES: Apparently your early experiences related to kissing are responsible for your negative feelings. I recommend professional help to overcome your hangup.



indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL: I read about your iron cross begonia that you treat as cut flowers because they won't grow anywhere but in a greenhouse. I was given an iron cross last October and placed it above my kitchen sink in the window. It' still flourishes! I wash my dishes by hand and the steam rises to the plant. It is thick, with many small pink blossoms. I water it every day. It gets a strong western light, especially in the afternoon. I turn it every couple of days. The rest of my many plants are doing well also. So I'm the first person you know who can raise an iron cross. — Mrs. B.

Dear Mrs. B.: Congratulations. Iron cross begonias can grow indoors with ideal conditions, which you have. You are to be commended because it is not easy. We received many letters with problems about iron cross begonias, most of which dry up.

They thrive on humidity, and you are providing it in perfect measure. The tuberous begonias and many other varieties are next to impossible to grow indoors without controlled situations and the iron cross is the heartiest of the bunch! Happy growing.

Colorful Clothes Set New Style

By BERNADINE MORRIS
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK — "I'm tired of seeing women in men's clothes," Oscar de la Renta observed in a quiet moment after his spring show.

It was a presentation marked by an exuberance of color, a rustling of silk and a flamboyance that was generally absent from other highly commended shows.

"It has a vitality all of its own," said Grace Mirabella, editor of Vogue magazine. "There's a sense of entertainment, fun and a free charm you don't find anywhere else."

The vitality was expressed in skirts tiered like those of flamenco dancers, waistlines cinched it and marked by ribbon, and occasionally, ballooning sleeves.

That is, of course, for evening, but daytime clothes also affect a gentler quality. Typically, a suit had a white lined jacket, about hip bone length, a linen belt and a four gore, flaring skirt.

"You could wear it with a blouse, of course," de la Renta pointed out. He showed it without a shirt open to mid-chest level. Much more devastating that way.

"The mood of fashion is changing," the designer went on. "For the last few years, everything has been sportswear oriented. Women wore pants and jackets tailored like men's. We're moving away from that now.

"The diffference is strongest in evening clothes, but by next fall, I think there will be a big change in day clothes."

Like many other designers, de la Renta has previously emphasized nat jersey and chiffon evening clothes. Now the stress is on taffetas and other crisp silks that have body and hold their shape.

They're used in fuller silhouettes (the designer describes them as clothes with "more volume"), which are kept in control by a belt at the waistline. The result is a turning away from the rectangular line that has dominated women's clothes for close to two decades and the approach of a more curving hour-glass look.

It is, ipso facto, a feminine shape.

"What was most significant in Yves Saint Laurent's collection, to my way of thinking," de la Renta said, "was that the designer who did trench coats and mannish-tailored suits for women was moving into a thoroughly feminine mood."

He calls his own mood "romantic," adding that "it's fantasy in a sense, but not trashy fantasy."

"Glamorous" is a word he likes and would like to see revived. It represents the move away from strictly utilitarian, practical clothes.

"People have been wearing blazers at night, but they're beginning to change," he said. "Last night, I went to a dinner party and six or eight women were wearing taffeta skirts with cinched waistlines. It's far more amusing and, yes, glamorous, than a blazer and a pair of pants."

De la Renta believes so strongly in the new mood, he is carrying it out in his other design enterprises. His bed linens, for Cannon, are printed with roses and other nosegays.

His eyeglass frames for American optical are tinted such shades as pink or mauve. And Miss O, his new line of dresses to sell for under $100, is replete with floral fabric designs and pretty colors.

But it's in his main collection that the frivolity is rampant, from his knee-length play dresses ("something you can throw over a bathing suit") to his rustling, ruffed evening ones.

It is finding a ready response from women who, like a de la Renta supposes, may be tired of running around in men's clothes.

SABBATICALS HELP COUPLES

TORONTO (CP) — Many marriage breakups might be avoided if the partners took sabbaticals fron each other every 10 years says a creative divorce insructor.

Lynda Tribblig, speaking to a meeting of the One Parent Familes' Association of Canada, said marriage partners "need to get away on their own to find out who they are."

Sabbaticals would probably save a lot of marriages and end a lot that should be ended, she said.

"Marriages aren't getting worse," she said. "People's expectations of them are greater and legal and economical barriers are less, making it easier to get out of marriage."

Burnooses Latest News

NEW YORK (NYT) — Women have the what-to-wear-on-a-brisk-day problem all wrapped up. They're tossing on panchos, capes, hooded burnoses, serapes, blanket-like shawls. All the garments that have tradionally kept out the cold since biblical times are on the city streets. And with all the blessing of times are on the city streets. And with all the blessing of the fashion makers — you don't have to be ethnic to love looking like a market woman; it's the in thing.

The streets are aflap with capes and burnooses made of soft wools, usually long and always worn with boots. Serapes right out of Andean villages go over jeans. A poncho worn by an English visitor shopping in midtown was made of hamster fur.

Short panchos or long capes have solved the problems of what to wear with this year's long full skirt that looks dowdy under last year's coat. Big scarves or shawls go over suits or even coats for extra warmth.

Of all the flowing garments, probably the poncho or serape makes the most sense, since it doesn't have to be clutched and leaves the arms free. The shawl and cap are less manoeuverable; still, women like the age-old gesture of drawing a shawl close to themselves.

The fashion for yards of fabric does present problems. A crowd of women wrapped up like a desert tribe takes up a lot of room in a bus. Capes also get caught in taxi doors and sweep subway steps.

The Formula

Baby's Talc Ideal For Irritation

By NORMAN H. STARK

Two causes of skin irritation in babies are friction and excrements. Talc has an oily, slippery feel that makes it ideal as an anti-friction agent which is helpful in reducing irritation. And because it is acids, it is an excellent baracids, it is an ixcellent barrier against irritation caused by acids. Here's how to make your own baby powder.

You'll need two cups TALC, and a few drops of OIL-SOLUBLE PERFUME if you want the powder scented. Mix the two thoroughly and store in glass, metal or plastic shaker can.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Sailor Style

NEW YORK (CP)—Sailor-inspired sportswear separates in crisp white, navy and red are making waves for spring in the volume-priced market. The look of the middy is showing up in blouson tops, T-shirts and jackets.

Cradle Saves Money and Space

Tired of awkwardly designed, overpriced nursery goods? "You don't have to put up with them," said Mark White of Kodiak, Alaska. Mark and his wife, Karen, designed and made a beautiful, macramed hanging baby cradle at a cost of a little more than a couple of dollars!

Karen and Mark had looked at some of the space-eating monstrosities offered by the makers of mass-produced cribs . . . and — sad to say — they found their wares entirely impractical. They wanted a cradle that would be (1) lightweight, (2) compact, and (3) collapsible for easy storage . . . and they certainly hadn't found these qualities in any of the items they had seen.

Then too, they wanted their firstborn's bed to be soft and warm and comfortable, to give the child a feeling of security. Somehow, plywood headboards and prison-like bars didn't give them that feeling.

Their thinking on cradles was influenced by something else, too: they wanted their baby to sleep as close to their bed as possible, so Karen could — if need be — respond to the infant's cries by lofting him-her right into bed with them.

In the end, they decided to make their own cradle . . . a macramed, hanging cradle that they could suspend over the foot of their bed!

Their baby's hanging bed consists of three components: (1) an open, rectangular, wooden "upper frame," (2) a one-piece hardboard botton and (3) interwoven nylon twine sides.

The upper frame measures 20" by 28" (a bit on the small side they have found) and consists of four pieces of scrap two-inch lumber joined together by five-inch-long No. 12 wood screws. Along the length of each framing member, Mark drilled pairs of holes — ¼" in diameter and spaced ¾" apart — every two inches to accomodate the strands of twine. (Altogether he made ten pairs of holes in each 28" framing member and six pairs along each 20" piece.) Naturally, for their child's safety, he sanded each piece of wood carefully after drilling, to eliminate splinters.

The crib's bottom is nothing more than a 16 by 24 inch od 3-16" thick Masonite. (Quarter-inch plywood should work just as well.) This piece is purposely smaller than the upper frame so that the macrame lacing will slope inward towards the bottom, thereby helping to hold the mattress in place and keeping the baby from rolling too far to one side or the other.

(Note: Because of this board's smaller size, you'll have to space the pairs of twine holes around its perimeter somewhat closer together than tow inches. Mark worked out the spacing with a pencil before he drilled . . . and it saved him a lot of headaches!)

For the macrame lacing, they used 3-16" braided nylon net-mending twine (pure nylon . . . no preservatives added or tar compounds added), which cost them about $1.50 for the 225 feet they used. They chose this material for its combination of strength and softness . . . however, cotton twine — prewashed to remove the starch — or nylon sash cord would be equally suitable.

Putting the cradle components together was a cinch. First they tied four long pieces of twine to the corners of the 20" by 28" frame, then they hung the frame from their plank ceiling with the aid of four strong screw hooks.

(If your house or apartment has a plasterboard ceiling, make sure you screw those hooks into something solid — like the ceiling joists — so there's no chance they'll pull out. If in doubt, test the strength of the attachments by hanging a 20- to 30-pound weight from each hook . . . then proceed.)

Once the frame was in place they set the crib bottom on a cardboard box so it would rest about 10 inches below the hanging "hoop." Next they got out their roll of twine, snipped off 32 seven-foot-long pieces of nylon, and carefully seared — or melted — the lines' neds in a candle flame (to prevent ravelling) . . . after which they folded the pieces of twine in half and dropped them one by one into the pairs of holes along the top of the rectangular frame. This done, they began tying the macrame knots (in this case, a pattern called a square knot sennit).

Just how fancy you get in your knot-tying, depends more on how patient you are than on how much skill you have. If you feel intimidated by this part of the project, though, you may want to consult a beginner's book on macrame. The main thing to remember is that you want to keep the braided openings small enough so that a child's head can't possibly poke through one, yet large enough so the infant's hands and feet can't get caught. Take your time here and think things out . . . you'll be glad you did.

Mark used a two-inch-thick piece of foam rubber — covered with a double thickness of plastic — for the cradle's mattress. (The foam rubber cushion from an old car seat is about the right thickness and firmness.) Atop the mattress they laid a soft piece of cotton quilting to absorb moisture. (From the standpoint of both health and comfort. It's not a good idea to let a baby lie directly on plastic.)

Their daughter, Melissa, is two months old now, and she seems to enjoy her little cradle slmost as much as Karen and Mark enjoyed making it.

Preventive Plans Begin With Young

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

We are a young and growing family. We've always wondered if there are definite preventive measures that can insure better health and longevity for our children. — Mr. and Mrs. D.E.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. E.: Yours is a wise and thoughtful question. There is a tendencey to believe that preventive medicine refers only to adults. In reality, the ideal objective of preventive medicine is to start during early childhood.

Only in this way can the chronic diseases that strike later in life, such as stroke, heart disease and possibly cnacer, be modified or prevented.

For example, the beginning and progression of atherosclerosis can be said to depend on high cholesterol levels in the blood, and marked overweight. The fatty plaques that develop inside the arteries and interfere with the free flow of blood can be prevented with proper diet, controlled weight and planned exercise, beginning at an early age.

Teenage and young adult smoking undoubtedly plays an important part in some of the major illnesses of man.

Family eating habits should be adjusted so that all members of the family, young and old, benefit by the newer concepts of diet in relation to good health.

Dr. Christine W. Williams and Dr. Ernst L. Wynder, of the American Tealth Foundation in New York City, point out that "the cholesterol level of the average American child at age three is equal to that of a middle-aged man in countries such as Japan, where coronary heart disease mortality is low.

"With 40 per cent of caloric consumption made up of fat, especially saturated fats, and the high intake of cholesterol and calories from 'junk foods,' our children have higher cholesterol levels and great risks of having coronary artery disease in adult life than children in almost any other country in the world."

Patterns of eating within the home and sensible planning of meals at school are a vital part of preventive medicine.

Children with a family history of diabetes or any other hereditary illness should be kept under surveillance. The early recognition of disease means earlier treatment and prevention of complications.

A must, of course, is to maintain a high level of immunization against diseases for which vaccines are now so effective.

Assembled Furniture In Style

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP)— Consumer-assembled furniture is being touted as offering more comfort and higher styling, in order to attract mature homemakers as well as youthful customers.'

At least that's the message from the Southern Furniture Market Centre's fall show at High Point, where the knock-down furniture was shown. Easy to store and moderately priced, it ties up less money in inventory because it offers quick factory-to-store delivery, a big plus for dealers. Then, too, customers can walk right out of the store with easy-to-carry boxes.

The assemble-it-yourself furniture has been popular for a long time, particularly because its portability appeals to a society that moves about. But its consumer appeal was often limited to young people who liked the stark appearance.

Styling has changed. James David softens the look, featuring upholstered arms with button tufting and plump cushions of 100-per-cent woven cotton fabric upholstery. What's more, the upholstery is interchangeable. New fittings, including natural-color nylon, rust-color corduroy and chamois-color vinyl, can be ordered easily.

SEXIST LABEL ON BILLBOARD

VANCOUVER (CP) — Billboards displaying a leggy girl wearing pantyhose were given some added letters overnight Thursday.

The word s-e-x-i-s-t was sprayed in six-foot letters on the billboard ad by Safeway stores.

When Stan Whittle, president of Seaboard Advertising Co. Ltd., found the billboards defaced he ordered all of them to be temporarily covered with public service announcements.

"The Salavation Army got one. So did Big Brothers and several others," he said Thursday.

The billboards that unfuriated the women showed two workmen peering from a manhole to ogle a leggy passerby in pantyhose. The caption read "The eyecatchers."

Saanich Delays Roy Road Verdict

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Saanich council will pass the buck to the 1977 council on the decision whether or not to go ahead with the provincial government's controversial Roy Road 334-unit housing project.

With three new faces on next year's council the long-planned development could go down to defeat.

The decision to delay action came after a stormy public hearing Thursday night when more than 200 people crammed the council to voice their opposition to the development.

Among them was incoming alderman Robert Cameron.

"I'm for leaving the thing exactly the way it is now," Cameron said. "When is a gift not a gift?" (The provincial government will contribute $504,000 toward municipal services needed if the project goes through.) If it costs $2 million to accept a gift. When is a park not a park? (The government proposes to keep Panama Flats as a greenbelt). When it's under water."

Spokesman from the Victoria Sierra Club, the Victoria Natural History Society, the Amalgamated Conservation Society and federal fisheries department warned of the damage that could be done to the ecology.

Even Dr. Bob Langford, a marine biologist commissioned by the municipality, cautioned that proposed "reshaping" of parts of Colquitz Creek poses a hazard to the fishery. Langford also said "flooding (of Panama Flats) each winter is important" for wildlife.

He and others reminded council of Saanich's pamphlet, Help Protect Saanich Waterways, in which residents are urged, "Let's get together to save the aquatic environment of Saanich."

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber drew repeated applause when he hammered away at the "inconsistencies" of the plan. He blistered the provincial government for buying lots at roughly $2,500 which, he said, would not sell at $25,000, defeating the objective of providing "affordable housing."

Walter Webb of the Housing Corporation of B.C., however, said the average single-family lot would sell for between $17,000 and $20,000 while townhouse lots would be available for between $12,000 and $14,000.

Perennial fighter for affordable housing, former Saanich alderman Les Passmore lashed out at those opposing the project.

"We desperately need housing. People care about fish, about ducks, they're concerned with the weeds but to hell with the people that want housing," he said. "Right here in Saanich, members of a family died beeause they couldn't afford to live anywhere else but in an illegal suite. I know people who live in motels at $200 a month because they can't get anything else."

Another supporter of the housing project was Dr. John Wiens, assistant superintendent for School District 61. Wiens said Northridge elementary school could be adapted to accommodate extra students the project would generate. This, he said, was more logical than having to build new schools in another area.

Agreeing the new council should make the final decision on the housing proposal, Ald. Fred Severson said there are "about 16 lots and also one-fifth of the townhouses I don't support," and Ald. Mary Casilio said, "I could not support the high density that is planned here."

Ald. Sandy Noel said he wanted more data on what additional roadwork and other services will cost.

Also expressing doubts, Ald. David Peterson suggested "this plan may have to fail."

Rival PLO Guerrillas Fighting in Beirut

BEIRUT (UPI) — Rival Palestinian guerrillas battled with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades early today a a refugee camp south of Beirut.

Initial reports said at least 15 persons were wounded in heavy fighting near the Chatila refugee camp, the same area where similar clashes recently claimed an estimated 35 lives.

The clashes underlined the dissent in Palestinian ranks spawned by the guerrilla involvement in the Lebanese civil war and by controversy over apparent Syrian efforts to bring the Palestinians under control.

Guerrillas of the pro-Syrian Saiqa organization were battling radical Palestinians who Saiqa said belonged to the so-called "Rejection Front" that opposes a negotiated settlement with Israel and Syria's large-scale intervention in Lebanon.

Palestinan sources said Syrian troops of the Arab peacekeeping force supported the Saiqa guerrillas with fire from tanks, but this could not be confirmed immediately.

The fighting, which began Thursday night, raged into the early morning despite what Saiqa called an attempt by "the sister organization" Al Fatah of Yasser Arafat to halt the battles.

The clashes came as an Arab League supervisory committee was running into difficulty getting Christian rightists, Moslem leftists and Palestinians to hand over their heavy weapons.

"I was going to bring my wife and two children down from Denmark," said one Moslem in West Beirut. "But I think I'll wait until they collect the guns. Nothing is settled yet. I won't feel right about them coming here until they've gathered those guns."

The factions have given the Arab League supervisory committee inaccurate lists of the weapons they possess, according to sources close to the committee.

"Let's put it this way," the sources said, "suppose for a minute one group admits it has five tanks, another six tanks, another five, and we know the Lebanese army had 50 tanks before the war and they're all gone — well, we know someone is fudging."

B.C. Forest Advisers Appointed

The committee is composed of Dr. James Rae, assistant deputy minister of economic development, Wes Cheston, resources manager, B.C. forest service and T. P. Apsey, a consulting forest economist from Vancouver.

Deputy forests minister John Stokes will devote full time to business of the committee.

While Stokes concentrates on the affairs of the committee, E. L. (Ted) Young, chief forester for B.C., will assume responsibility for the administration of the B.C. forest service.

Language Outline In February

QUEBEC (CP) — Camille Laurin, minister of state for cultural development, is to outline proposed revisions to the Official Language Act to the Quebec cabinet Feb. 15, Premier Levesque said.

Levesque told reporters after a meeting of the cabinet that Laurin has been given a "full mandate" to revise the law — better known as Bill 22 — which was passed by the former Liberal government in 1974.

Laurin said he has been given responsibility for reviewing all sections of the controversial language law, including those dealing with the use of French in the public administration, in business and industry, in advertising and in schools.

In the area of education, Laurin said he will start from the basic principle that immigrants arriving after a certain date will be obliged to attendFrench-language schools. This includes immigrants from English-speaking countries such as Great Britain and the United States.

For Canadian citizens, the mother tongue will be a major criterion in establishing whether children go to French- or English-language schools, he said.

Ontario MD Billing List Leak Sparks Outrage and Apology

TORONTO (CP) — There were reactions of outrage, disappointment, concern and contrition Thursday following the publication of a confidential list of the names and addresses of 812 Ontario doctors who billed the province's health plan for more than $100,000 last year.

Premier William Davis described the affair as a scar on the face of the province's political life and said the doctors deserve an apology from the NDP, the official Opposition.

The contrition came from Ed Ziemba, NDP member for High Park-Swansea, who apologized in the House for leaking the list to the news media, saying he did not understand the impact his action would have.

The list of payments, 11 of them for more than $1 million, was submitted Wednesday in confidence to the legislature's public accounts commitee by the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP).

Most of the doctors named were furious about publication of the list Thursday in Toronto newspapers. Many said the figures are misleading since they represent gross income from which things such as overhead must be deducted.

staff salaries, expenses and

Ziemba, serving his first term in the legislature, told the House he sometimes handles politics badly, and agreed to resign from the public accounts committee.

Physicians' names are on the list only because a doctor's code number must be entered in the OHIP billing computer to show that the laboratory is under the supervision of a qualified person.

The medical association said Thursday that the average gross income of its 13,000 members is about $70,000. Doctors get about $44,000 in net income after the average overhead of 36 per cent is deducted.

French Trade Increase Urged

PARIS (CP) — With trade between France and Canada representing less than one per cent of each country's total trade, Canada's ambassador here says he hopes the two countries can develop more economic exchanges.

In a speech to the France-Canada Chamber of Commerce, Gerard Pelletier said there is a political will in Canada "to intensify commercial and scientific exchanges, as well as industrial co-operation between our two countries."

"If Canada wants to maintain its position among the industrial powers, it cannot be a country with one customer and one supplier," Pelletier said.

Canada's trade must be diversified without delay, he said. France and other members of the European Economic Community "are natural partners."

In discussing his first year as ambassador to France, Pelletier said there is a lack of understanding between people in france and Canada.

The former federal communications minister said people in each country see each other through "slightly absurd stereotypes" and deformed images which have little to do with reality.

Riding Stable Told to Pay

Decision to enforce the municipality's right as the landlord was made by council Thursday, having previously rejected an appeal to exempt the academy from taxes.

But the tenants, Don and Aileen Carley, say this year's $8,800 in taxes will be paid.

The Carleys have operated stables on Cedar Hill Cross Road for more than 20 years and have an avid following of horse owners and student equestrians making regular use of the 9.6 acre site.

Asked if council will carry through with eviction, Mayor Brian Smith said:

"We can't allow people to stay on municipal land without paying taxes."

He would not elaborate and said the motion speaks for itself.

One of a group of Carley supporters, Elsie Spratt, wrote council noting that a riding stable is operated privately on land owned by the National Capital Commission in Ottawa, and pays only a business licence to the government.

Smith commented that taxpayers across the nation support amenities in the capital at a cost of many millions of dollars.

"People who reside in the national capital are extremely well off. They have things municipalities in their wildest dreams can't provide," Smith said.

"I'd like to live in a community where the federal taxpayers pay for the leisure facilities," he added.

NO MOTH DANGER ON CUT TREES

Christmas tree buyers are misreading an advertisement warning that living pine trees must have a tag certifying the tree has been inspected for European pine shoot moth.

Cut Christmas trees do not need the tag, but the department of agriculture has been inundated with calls from Victorians saying their trees are not tagged.

A spokesman for the department said Thursday the tagging applies only to rooted, living nursery trees that will be planted in the garden after Christmas.

Once the tree has been cut, there are no longer nutrients to feed the moth which lives in needle tips and it soon dies.

Dummar Says Someone Transplanted His Prints on Hughes Will

OGDEN, Utah (UPI) — Melvin Dummar has been fingerprinted by Ogden police at his own insistance in an attempt to prove he never handled the "Mormon will" of Howard Hughes.

Dummar gave police his prints Thursday and said he thinks someone planted his thumbprint on an envelope that contained the will to keep him from getting one-sixteenth of the late billionaire's fortune.

Dummar appealed to the deliverer of the will to the Mormon church headquarters in Salt Lake City last spring to "come forward and tell the circumstances surrounding it."

Dummar, 31, an unemployed service station attendant, previously said he once pickup up in the Nevada desert a scruffy hitchhiker who bummed a quarter and told him he was Hughes.

"I never had anything to do with the will," Dummar said in an interview. "I never touched that and, if they got my fingerprints on there, somebody else had to have put them on there by means of a transplant.

"Someone is trying to keep the Hughes organization together and they will do anything in their power to keep it that way."

Nevada authorities reportedly found Dummar's thumbprint on the inside of the envelope that contained the will, which would leave more than $100 million to the Utahn if declared genuine.

A lawyer for Hughes' relatives in Texas said an FBI report verified Dummar's prints were on the envelope and also on a book and a Life magazine article found in the Weber State college library.

Attorney James Dilworth said the Life article was titled "The elusive Howard Hughes as revealed through his letters." Pages containing samples of Hughes' writing were torn out, he said.

The allegations prompted attorney Harold Rhoden, legal sponsor of the Mormon will, to ask Nevada Judge Keith Hayes to suspend probate proceedings pending further investigation. Hayes ordered the Nevada attorney general's office to turn over all evidence it has gathered in the case.

Dummar admitted going to the library and examining a copy of "Hoax," a book about Clifford Irving's phony autobiography of Hughes, but said, "it was after I found out I was mentioned in the will."

"I never touched that magazine," he said. "I didn't have the slightest idea about it. If they have my fingerprints on that Life magazine article, somebody else put them there."

Emmy Award Boycott Threatened by Stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Some 800 television performers, including famous stars like Mary Tyler Moore, have pledged to boycott the annual Emmy awards in a dispute between the television academy and its Hollywood chapter.

Petitions signed by the 800 were sent to the National Academy leadership Tuesday, said producer Chuck Fries.

In addition to Miss Moore, other stars boycotting the awards include Ron Howard, Ed Asner, Earl Holiman, Jackie Cooper, Henry Winkler, Ted Knight, Freddie Prinze and Jack Albertson.

He said he expects to gather another 200 signatures, pledging not to accept emmy nominations, cast votes or appear on the academy's annual awards show, scheduled for mid-May.

The pledges are the latest round in a long-running battle between the national leadership of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences and its Hollwood chapter — about half the academy — over the structure of the organization and the powers of national and local officers.

Fries said he withheld forwarding the petitions until the national trustees met Sunday to discuss a reorganization plan favored by the Hollywood chapter. He went ahead because the plan was rejected, he said.

At the same meeting the trustees voted to warn the Hollywood chapter it is in danger of being expelled and to file suit against the organizers of the boycott, he said.

The Hollywood chapter already has a lawsuit on file against the national academy, asking that the national group be dissolved and the Hollywood chapter be given the rights to the Emmy awards.

"I don't see any hope of resolving this," Stewart said. "It's been two and a half years. We've had meetings ad nauseum, negotiations, all of that."

BEST PRESENT of all is not the gift being opened by young Padraig McKenna but four free operations that have reconstructed his lower jaw so he can finally eat solid food. The youngster, now in New York University Medical Centre, lives in County Leitrim, Ireland, had a severe jaw deformity resulting from an infection shortly after birth.

Tiny Tim Sings Again

MIAMI BEACH — Once paid $60,000 for 10 nights at a local resort, an overweight Tiny Tim made a 15-minute taping this week for a canned TV series he hopes will start a comeback. The series is not sold, and Tim—50 pounds too heavy by his count — was not paid for the taping.

"I am back where I began," Tiny Tim said.

He insisted his marriage to Miss Vicki is valid although he hasn't seen her in three years. Vicki is working as a go-go dancer in New Jersey.

"I can't stop her from getting a divorce, but I am still married to her until death do us part. I worry about Judgment Day."

Tiny Tim said he can't support his wife or five-year-old daughter, Miss Tulip, because he's broke.

MOSCOW — Prominent Soviet dissident Vladimir Bukovsky will be freed from prison and expelled from the Soviet Union this weekend in exchange for the release of Chilean Communist leader Luis Corvalan, Bukovsky's mother said today.

Mrs. Nina Bukovskaya said she, her son, her daughter, Olga Ivanova, and her daugher's ailing 12-year-old son, Michael, would board a plane to Switzerland Saturday morning.

WASHINGTON — Watergate Burglar E. Howard Hunt apparently must spend Christmas in jail despite new efforts to release him.

Hunt, 58, is serving 30 months to eight years at the federal prison camp at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul VI today named Msgr. Edouard Gagnon, bishop of St. Paul, Alta., as vice chairman of the pontifical committee for the family. The appointment was one of 10 announced by the pontiff to three key Vatican committees.

PRINCE ALBERT — A petition is being circulated throughout the city to have city council reverse the decision that the Vivian family had to give up their pet lioness, Sheba.

Val and Ernest Vivian were forced earlier this month to remove their pet after they had appeared before council in late November seeking permission to keep the five-month-old lion in city limits. Council voted against keeping the African lioness as a house pet within city limits.

CHIEF JUSTICE ARRESTED

IRVING, Tex. (UPI) — The chief justice of the Kansas Supreme Court was removed from a flight and arrested because of drunken, belligerent behavior, according to a report filed by investigating officers.

The incident occurred Nov. 21 at the Dallas-Fort Worth regional airport, but the report was not released until Thursday.

The report said Harold R. Fatzer, 66, "was intoxicated to the point that officers felt he was going to be of danger not only to himself but to others."

Fatzer was charged with public intoxication and disorderly conduct, but the charges were dropped by Justice of the Peace Floyd T. Gray after Fatzer told officials he was a supreme court chief justice.

Fatzer refused comment on the report. He told a broadcasting station several days after the incident he was roughed up by security police.

Airport officials in the weeks following the incident refused to release the arrest report, called a blotter sheet. UPI obtained a booking sheet in Grapevine which confirmed the charges against Fatzer, but was denied access to the arrest report. Officials released the arrest report Thursday upon demand under the Texas Open Records Act.

The report said four officers answered a call of a disturbance in the Braniff terminal at the sprawling airport complex located between Dallas and Fort Worth.

"Upon arrival and entering the jetway, officers overheard loud and abusive profane language," the report said. "At the actual scene of the disturbance, the above actor (Fatzer) was pushing and striking" an unidentified complainant.

The report said the incident had begun aboard a Braniff flight which Fatzer was taking to Topkea from a convention in Miami.

"Further investigation revealed that the disturbance started aboard the aircraft and therefore Braniff's decision to refuse him flight, due to his intoxication.

"It soon became apparent to officers that the actor was drunk and his breathe (sic) smelled heavily of alcoholic beverage," the report said.

MEASLES UP 60% IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The number of reported cases of measles, that spotty bane of childhood whose eradication has been taken for granted by the general public, has increased by about 60 per cent this year over last.

While the 37,000 cases reported so far this year to the federal Centre for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta do not begin to come close to the half-million cases reported annually before the beginning of mass vaccinations about 10 years ago, the increase has federal officials concerned.

"For the past several years, far too many children have not been vaccinated," said Dr. Lyle Conrad, an epidemiologist with the CDC. "At best about 70 per cent of the children (ages) one to 13 have had the vaccine."

Since the beginning of the vaccination progam in the mid-1960s, the statistical course of the disease has been like a roller coaster.

The number of reported cases dropped from 204,000 in 1966, to 22,000 in 1968, and then began to climb, reaching 75,000 in 1971.

NBC 'Most Violent' Network

WASHINGTON (WP) — NBC is the "most violent" U.S. television network; Quest, Starksy and Hutch and Baretta are the "most violent" TV programs and Chevrolet is a participating sponsor of more violent shows than any other company, according to a study released Thursday by a Washington-based citizen's group.

Nicholas Johnson, a former FCC commissioner and now chairman of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB), also announced a $25,000 grant from the American Medical Association (AMA) to subsidize his group's monitoring of TV shows for their violence content.

The latest findings are based on the first 13 weeks of the new television season. All prime-time network programs were monitored during that period and tallies were kept of acts of violence from "hair-pulling" and helicopter chases to first fights, stabbings and shootings.

The 10 shows ranked most violent were Serpico (cancelled), Delvecchio, Police Story, Kojak, The $6 Million Man, Hawaii Five-O, Baa Baa Black Sheep, Baretta, Starsky and Hutch and Quest (cancelled).

The 10 shows ranked least violent were CPO Sharkey, McLean Stevenson, Doc (cancelled), Sirota's Court, Mr. T and Tina (cancelled), Ball Four (cancelled), Phyllis, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, The Bob Newhard Show and Chico and the Man. All are — or were—situation comedies.

The purpose of the study, Johnson said, was to alert viewers and advertisers to the most violent TV programs.

"We're making the information available publicly to see if that will alter corporate behavior," said Johnson.

"We think there's a very serious reassessment going on in advertising agencies, corporate suites and at the networks as a result of these studies. There's a growing groundswell against TV violence from the public. For 25 years people have been deploring violence on TV, but all that deploring has had little impact. Now we have the facts to back it up," Johnson said. NBC, cited as the most violent network (with CBS called "by far the least violent" and ABC in the middle), issued a statement denouncing the study.

"The usefulness of the study is nullified because it counts all acts of violence equally — a murder counts the same as a push or a shove," the statement said.

Nixon Found Guilty in Tapping Former Security Aide's Phone

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former president Richard Nixon, his White House chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman, and former attorney general John N. Mitchell violated the constitutional rights of a former National Security Council aide by allowing a wiretap to remain on his home telephone for 21 months, a federal judge ruled here Thursday.

The former NSC aide, Morton Halperin, elated at learning the ruling by U.S. district court Judge John Lewis Smith Jr., said he believes it marks the first time a private citizen has won a lawsuit against the conduct of a sitting president.

The ruling also marks the first time that a federal court has found that Nixon, who was pardoned for any criminal violations that might have occurred during his administration, personally committed illegal acts that specifically violated the U.S. constitution.

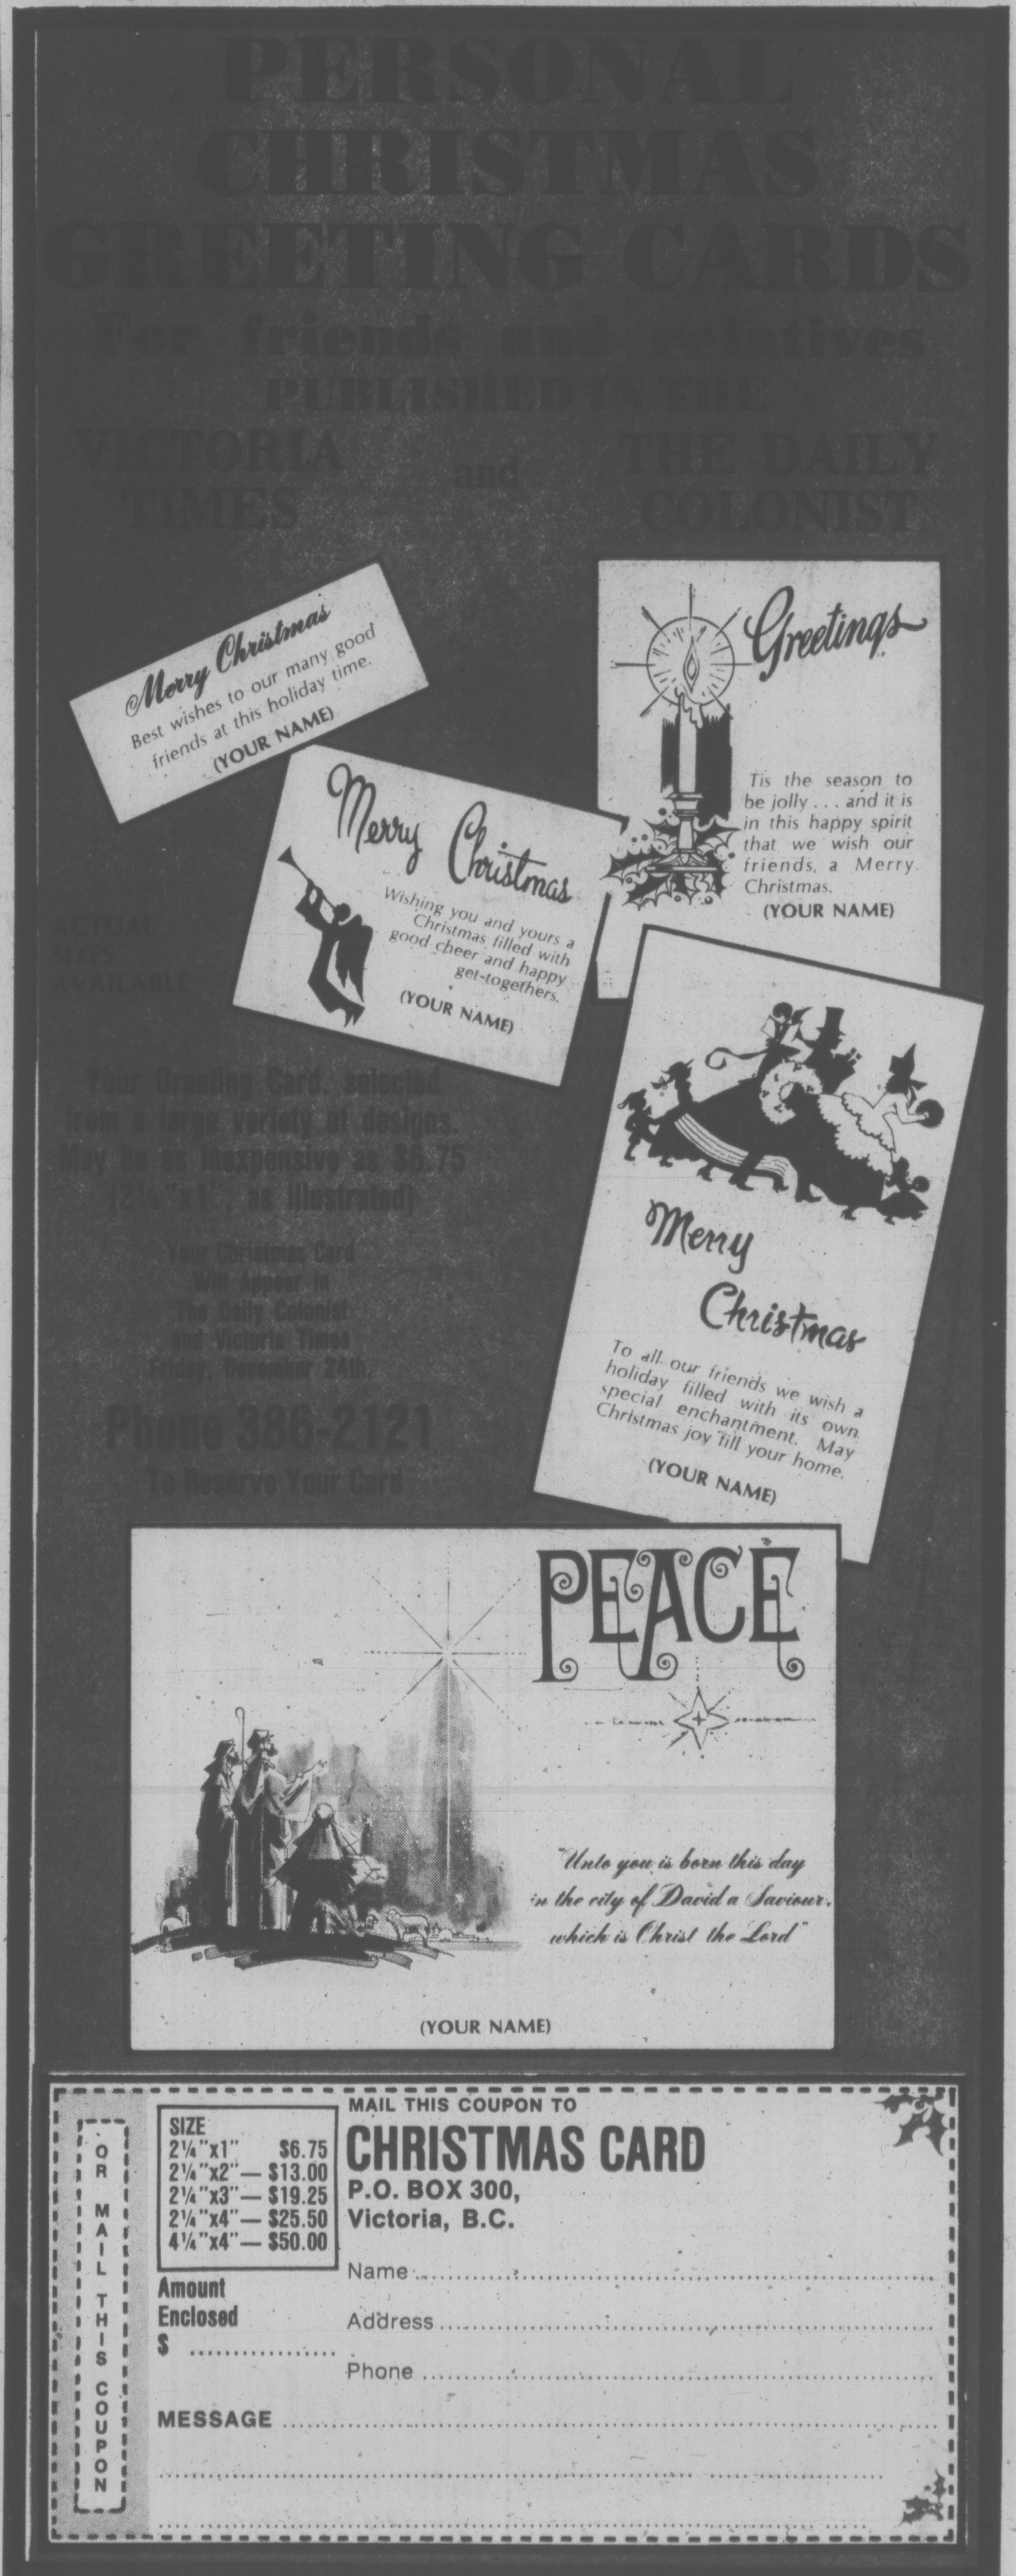
The judge held that Nixon, Mitchell and Haldeman must pay monetary damages to Halperin for the violations of his rights to privacy and freedom of expression.

$800 FOR 4 DAYS

DETROIT (UPI) — Some 18,000 Ford Motor Co. assembly line workers will earn almost $800 for four days' work between Christmas and New Year's in an unusual scheduling move to help the firm meet heavy demand for its large cars and vans.

The 18,000 Ford workers at five auto and two truck assembly plants will receive their regular holiday pay as well as double-time wages for the 40 hours they will work between Christmas and New Year's.

"Sure it's expensive, but we need the cars," a Ford spokesman said. "We're still playing catch-up from the strike in September and October.



Forest Dance Helps Psychic Learn Indian Culture, Mysticism

Donald Caldwell, 40, spent three days and nights dancing among the virgin timber of remote Chugach National Forest in southern Alaska a few weeks ago.

He described the "rich experience" during an interview here on the homeward leg of a 10,000-mile odyssey that has included visits to Indians in the western states, northern B.C., Alaska and Yukon Territory.

Seattle-born, Caldwell claims to have some Blackfoot blood in his lineage, and he is interested in native Indian culture, medicine and mysticism.

He went with a full-blooded Indian from Alaska — a university graduate who wanted to get back to the simpler life — to Chugach Park east of Anchorage on the mountain slopes of Prince William Sound.

Caldwell was amazed by the close range of wildlife, despite the presence of humans. They would come out of the woods into camp, and mink even joined in the dance around the fire, Caldwell claims.

"I'd never seen that before."

He has come to Victoria as a psychic, one of the group of individuals who believe there are human energies which are wasted in most people, misunderstood by many and unrecognized by science, but which some capture and use daily to cure ills, cope with stress, find missing bodies, start clocks or divine for water.

Caldwell lives in Los Angeles, possibly the western world's largest concentration of healers, cultists, meditators, mystics and purveyors of the occult, as well as the show business capital of the world.

Inevitably the one contaminates the other and Caldwell, who is a newspaper writer, film maker and amateur psychologist, is concerned that the "show biz" element is giving serious mystics a bad name.

The public has been getting "hokum because that's what it wants," Caldwell suggests. But the press is partly to blame for ridiculing and misrepresenting, he said, calling for more objective reporting on new techhniques for treating illness.

People who give the subject razzle dazzle "think the mystic field is living theatre, and the quacks are out to make a quick buck."

"If you make show business out of it, that's like making show business out of nuclear energy," Caldwell said.

Parapsychology, dealing with unknowns such as clairvoyance and telepathy, is no longer a borderline science, he feels.

It has its philosophical and religious connotations, some of them well known through study of Far Eastern cultures, but also related to native Indian religion.

Caldwell finds it sad that Indian religion in North America is almost dead, with the exception of Navaho and Hopi adherents. In his travels between bands he has found Christian religions firmly entrenched.

Some, such as pentacostals, actively discourage the old beliefs as conflicting with Christian ideals, Caldwell said.

He found it difficult to discover even among old Indians any of the naturalistic spiritual beliefs.

But there are still enough native Indian healers or medicine men to pass on their traditional ways, some of which have been adopted by the pharmaceutical industry. Herbal treatment is just another form of pharmacology, Caldwell says.

And some of the medicine songs cast hypnotic spells in a way similar to hypnosis therapy used by many medical practitioners.

While he is visiting Victoria, Caldwell will give a privately-sponsored public lecture — Man, the Aura and Inner Space — with slides at Holyrood House at 7:30 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $2, students $1.50.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

While it is always most pleasurable to fulfill a slam contract, it is especially gratifying to bring home an "unmakable" one by utilizing deceptive tactics. Today's deal serves as an example of a neat swindle perpetrated by our South declarer, which brought home a contract that appeared doomed to defeat.

NORTH
♡ K J 10 4
◇ K Q

WEST
♠ 10 4

EAST

◇ 9 7 6 2
♣ A 5 4

SOUTH
♠ J 9
◇ A J 10
♣ K J 6 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

When West opened the ten of spades, declarer recognized at once that East rated to have the spade king: it would require a lot of "guts" to lead the ten from some combination of the K-10 into North's spade bid.

So declarer, without any prolonged hesitation, put up dummy's ace, dropping thereon his own jack. At trick two he led the board's three of spades. East now took a time-out for reflection.

East came to the conclusion that South's jack was a singleton; and that West's opening spade lead had been from the tripleton 10-9-4 combination. So he thought it was hopeless to play the king, which South would ruff (if South possessed the singleton jack). As is evident, South's nine-spot captured the trick.

From here in the sailing was smooth and pleasant for declarer. He picked up the five outstanding trumps in three leads of the suit, and then surrendered a club trick to East's ace. The rest of the tricks belonged to him.

It is quite obvious that if declarer had taken the spade finesse at trick one, at the completion of trick two he would have incurred a one-trick set: East would have made the king of spades and his ace of clubs.

It is really difficult to criticize East for his refusal to put up the spade king at trick two. After all, South might have had the singleton jack; and by playing the spade king (which, in theory, South would trump), dummy's remaining Q-8-7 would all become promoted into winners.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forcast for Saturday, December 18

By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): monday, budget, taxes, expenses, prices — these blend to occupy time and thoughts. Partner, children, mate could be part of picture. You find ways of completing tasks, meeting challenges, reaching goals, getting rid of burdens. Libra figures prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New ways, methods, people are highlighted. Contractual obligation is to be considered. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. You want to do so much, to give, to be generous, magnanimous — there is a "slight hitch" but it will be overcome. Don't let anyone cause you to brood!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow through on hunch. You have lowdown on that "certain person." Older woman has digestive problem and confides in you. Emphasis on special services, work, health, getting togeteher with persons who share your interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Check Gemini message. Give full play to creative plans, ideas. Purchase gifts for young persons. You receive joy by permitting imagination to roam and roar. A friend — or relative — has asked for more than can be handled — and is financially embarrassed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22$: You may feel backed into corner, no exit. This is temporary. Key is persistence, patience, thorough review of basic material. If aware of fine print, if you read between the lines . . . if these things you do, this can be a time when the walls of restriction come tumbling down.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be willing to probe for answers. Reject the superficial. Gemini is in picture. Accent on trips, letters, accomodation to desires of young person . . . Good news from afar is highlighted. You feel warm, needed, loved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Financial aspects of situation come into focus. You learn you are in more positive position than imagined. Taurus individual figures prominently. Friend with "long face" should not be permitted to drag you down to negativism. Stand tall!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You gain insights, feel, perceive meaning of holiday spirit. Cycle is high and key is enlightenment. Pisces, Virgo figure in scenario. Prestige, appeal, fullfillment — these are on agenda. Be confident enough to take initiative. Apply original techniques.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are able to finish, to get rid of superflous material, to be aware, to shove aside doubts, fears. One who meant much to you in past could make reappearance. Capricorn, Cancer play important roles. You'll feel better about overall prospects.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might have reason to celebrate. One who thinks much of you has exciting news. Some of your fondest hopes, wishes surface — and you're able to fulfill them. Aries, Libra figure prominently. What seems negative will boomerang into a positive action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You find new ways of achieving, succeeding. Accent on pride, ambition, fulfillment, promotion, responsibility, adulation by peers. Property is worth more than might be imagined. Home base is a happier, more productive place than in recent past.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Build, collect, translate ideas into viable concepts. Aquarian figures prominently. You get help from one who has excellent "tarck record." You get chance to erase mistakes — you get proverbial second chance. Make the most of it. Be in touch with one at a distance.

IF DECEMBER 18th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you gain more recognition in 1977 — August could be your most significant month. You will complete important assignment, travel, broaden emotional and professional horizons. You are frank, artistic, fond of theater, capable of understanding and interpreting legal questions. Aries, Libra individuals play important roles in your life.

Susan put a jar down on the counter beside the others she had purchased. "I'll have this one too," she said. "It's just a dollar."

"Okay," replied Simple Simon, starting to make up the check. "The others are $1.75 and 60 cents each."

But Susan was amazed as she watched the boy figure out the total. "You've multiplied the three amounts together instead of adding," she exclaimed. "Yet your total is right."

It was too! So what was that total?

Empire Stadium Repair Bill Set at $204,000, PNE Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Damaged precast concrete sections in the seating area of Empire Stadium will cost $204,000 to repair, Paacific National Exhibition directors have been told.

Sayers Engineering Ltd. of Vancouver, commissioned in November to conduct a study of precast concrete portions of the stadium, said to replace all existing concrete sections would cost between $800,000 and $1 million.

Directors decided that repairs would be the best option, but referred the matter to the PNE's facilities committee for a detailed report and recommendation.

John Rennie, general manager of the PNE, said the problem is not a serious one right now. He said concrete has been breaking away from reinforcing rods in some sections of the stadium.

"It's a process that we've been aware of for some years," said Rennie. "It has to do with how the precasts were poured when the stadium was built.

In other business, the directors decided to ask the city to recommend a charter amendment repealing the Sunday sports bylaw.

The existing bylaw says professional sports may only be played between 1:30 p.m. and 6 p.m.

Directors said the bylaw is antiquated, especially since other Sunday entertainment, such as movies and concerts, are virtually unrestricted.

The subject of Sunday horse racing at Exhibition Park was referred to the new board and PNE staff has been asked to discuss it with the British Columbia Jockey Club and bring any recommendations to the new board.

Details of provincial Liquor Act changes which will allow the sale of beer at major sporting events are also being sought by the PNE. Information will cover methods of dispensing, types of containers and location of sales outlets.

After the information is gathered, PNE staff will submit marketing plans to the Jan. 12 board meeting so that sales to the public may be implemented as soon as possible.

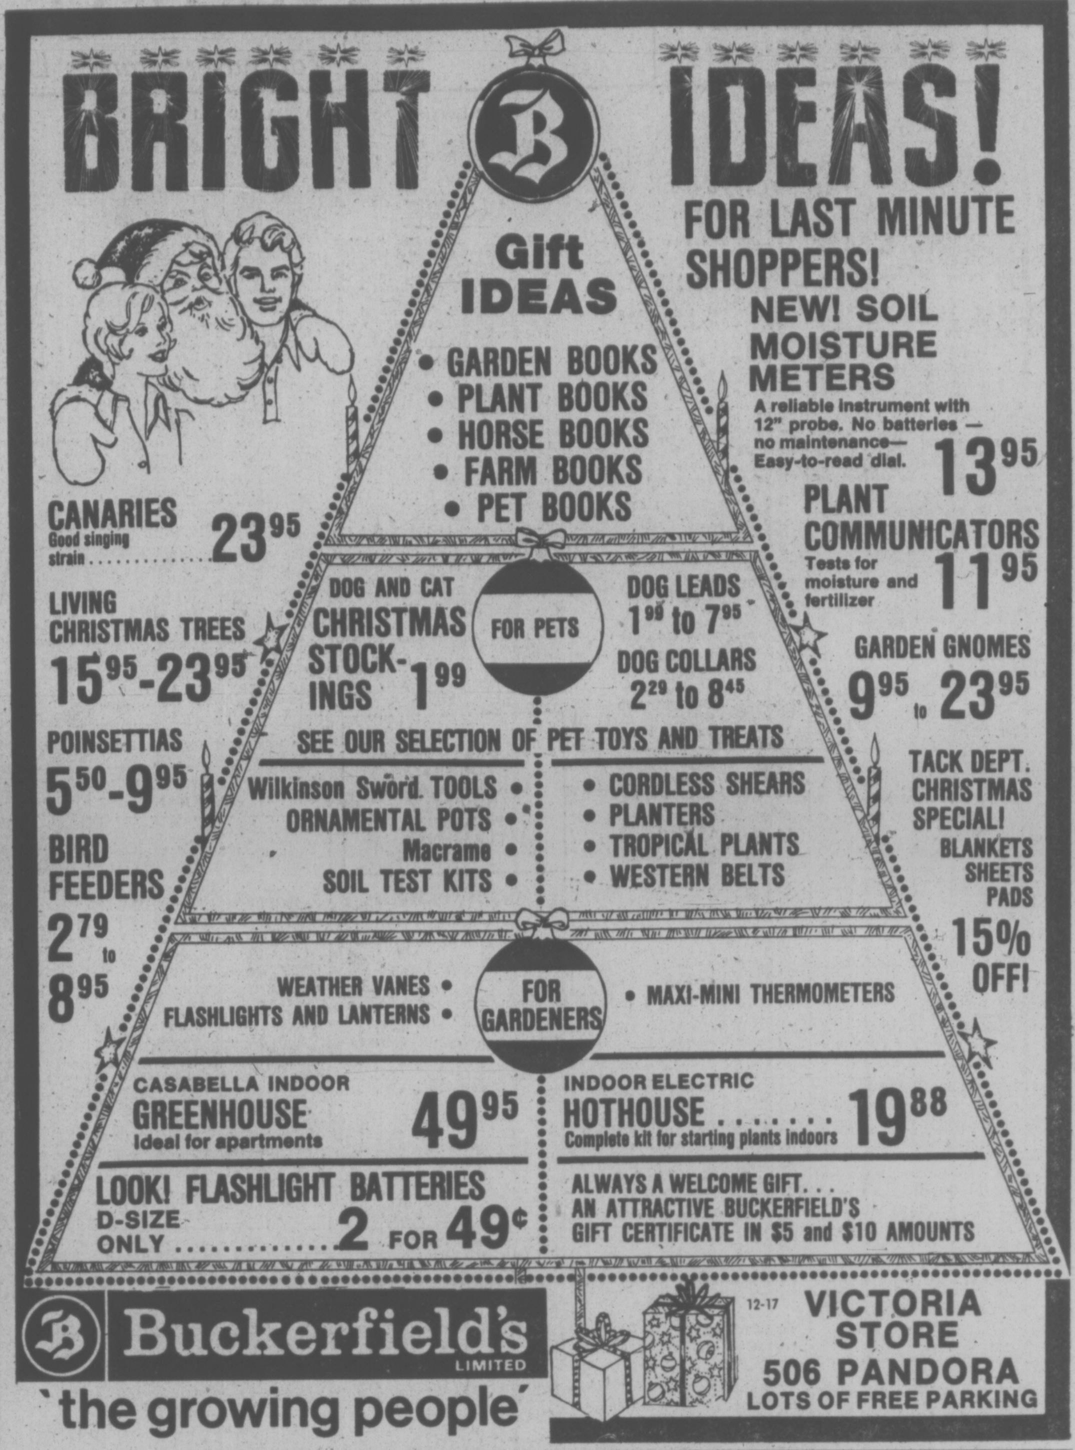
VANCOUVER SUBURBS SHORT OF BEDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver suburbs will be short 900 hospital beds by 1981, while Vancouver will have 1,000 more acute care beds than it needs, says a report prepared by the provincial government's hospital program division.

The report will be discussed by health minister Bob McClelland and Greater Vancouver regional hospital district officials in a private meeting next week.

According to existing hospital usage and trends, Vancouver will have 3,246 acute-care beds, but needs only 2,218 by 1981. This does not include the planned 240-bed University of British Columbia teaching hospital.

The greatest shortage of beds will be in Burnaby, which will have 238 beds and needs 514, the report said. Surrey will have 405 beds, but needs 592, while Richmond will need 257 and have 153. Delta has no acute-care beds, but will need 238 by 1981.



House Buy-Back Is Ruled Legal

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court has ruled that buy-back options in deeds for company-built homes in Mackenzie are legal.

Mr. Justice S. M. Toy ruled in Vancouver that John Christopher Gay must sell British Columbia Forest Products a house he bought from the company in the fall of 1974.

A repurchase option in the deed required Gay, a former employee of the company, to sell the home back to the firm if he ceased employment within five years of the purchase.

The clause also compels the company to buy back the home if the owner wishes for a period of 10 years, providing the home owner is employed by the company that long.

Under the arrangement, the value of the home in the five-year buy-back period remains the original selling price plus an improvement or minus any serious damage.

Gay's lawyer argued the company did not have the right to include the clause in the deed.

Gay bought the house from British Columbia Forest Products in late 1974 while working for the company. When he quit in late 1975, he wanted to keep the house and stay in Mackenzie. He now lives in Edmonton.

The company wanted to buy back the house for the original price of $35,000 although it was appraised in late 1975 at about $60,000. Bill Hibbard, Gay's lawyer, said the company offered an additional $7,000 to cover home improvements Gay valued at $14,000.

The ruling will affect homes built by several companies in the Mackenzie area, about 100 miles north of Prince George.

CUSTER APPEAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Merchant seaman Teum Abubaker, 28, of Ethiopia, who entered Canada illegally last summer after jumping ship here, was ordered deported Thursday after a hearing by special inquiry officer R. G. Smith.

Patricia Winfield, lawyer for Abubaker, said she plans to appeal on the basis of a claim of refugee status by her client.

Abubaker says he faces imprisonment or death if he returns to Ethiopia because of his activities aimed at winning Eritrean independence.

Town Gets Better TV

OCEAN FALLS (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co. has inaugurated a service to improve television reception for residents of this community 300 miles north of Vancouver.

The service uses the ANIK 3 communications satellite, which is owned jointly by Canadian telecommunication companies and the federal government.

In the past, residents received an inferior quality television signal by a relay system which hopped across mountain tops from Terrace, 120 miles north of here. The new signal from the satellite is more consistent and of higher viewing quality, the company says.

Bouquets Last Longer with Care

Bouquets of florists's flowers are received as gifts during the winter holiday season, a delightful custom indeed. Since the flowers are grown by professionals they are about perfect when purchased. The lasting period depends on the recipient.

Suppose you receive cut roses. The first thing to do after ooh-ing and ahh-ing is to place them in a deep vase of cool water.

After a few hours, re-cut each ste mone-half inch, while holding the base of the stem under water to prevent air bubbles entering the stem and preventing the upward flow of water. A slanting cut allows entry of water even when stems rest on the bottom of the vase. Place the vase in a cool place, out of sun and out of draught.

Wilted flowers, even roses, can often be revived by this treatment. It is a handy method to remember before discarding flowers.

After arranging in a suitable container, the roses should still be kept out of direct sun, and away from a source of heat. Each day, cut a half-inch from the base of stems when giving fresh water.

You will be surprised how long greenhouse roses remain fresh with this treatment.

Chrysanthemums as cut flowers need essentially the same care. Their leaves however must never be in or under water for they soon become waterlogged and contaminate the water in a few hours.

Put a vase of chrysanthemums on the floor at night, away from a source of heat so that the blooms are several degrees cooler than when on a table. These flowers naturally like coolness.

Cut the stems each day and give fresh water. Disbuds will last 10 days or so; sprays, as they are cut down, keep well for three to four weeks.

Some years we see anemones and ranunculuses as winter cut flowers. These too are long lasting. Their lovely clear colors are most cheerful and, being of the Buttercup Family, they love mosture and coolness. Treat them accordingly.

The daffodils and freesias in winter are indeed lovely omens of spring as the winter solstice, December 21, is reached and passed. The few minutes of extra daylight are noticeable before the end of the year.

If you have a cool entrance hall, or an unheated sunporch, that is the place for these spring flowers. They have been grown in comparatively cool humid conditions, much cooler than your living quarters.

Keep the water fresh and cool to get the most pleasure from winter cut flowers in the home. Those you may bring in from your own garden will also repay your attention to their needs.

Encyclopedia a Luxury —Que. Consumer Office

In the most recent issue of the office's bulletin, Protegez-Vous (Protect Yourself), consumers are warned to think twice before investing $300 to $900 in an encyclopedia.

"The big argument of salesmen is that an encyclopedia is necessary for you and especially for your children," the bulletin says.

"But in most cases a dictionary is more than sufficient for finding the information one needs quickly.

The article reminds consumers that encyclipedia salesmen are not paid a fixed salary and work on commission, usually about 20 per cent of the sale price.

"The best encyclopedia salesman for a company doing business in Quebec made $74,000 last year. One can ask how much time his clients spent looking over his encyclopedias," the bulletin says.

Nevertheless, the article has good things to say about certain publishers.

The author notes that the publishers of Encyclopaedia Britannica give a trade-in allowance on an old set and that Universalis, "considered the best encyclopedia in French," sells its volumes one by one and never forces the buyer to purchase the whole series.

Consumers are warned to check the date of publication of the encyclopedia in question to make sure it is not simply a reprinting of an old edition.

"It doesn't pay to buy a new book with a text which is 15 years old."

The bulletin also says that potential buyers should not trust salesmen who present letters bearing an apparent stamp of approval for their product from librarians or the education department.

Blind Provide Tax Facts

TORONTO (CP) — Six graduates of an income tax information officer training course at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) now are working for Revenue Canada in Toronto.

Six others have finished the course and expect to be working soon in tax offices across Canada.

Andrew Todd, chief of audits in the Toronto district tax office, was asked by the CNIB to set up the course.

Mr. Todd said applicants must have high school and some business experience or one or more successful years at a university. They must be fluent in braille.

"This is a completely new career for blind young people," Mr. Todd said. "Instead of working in a cafeteria or a broom shop, they can engage in gainful employment.

"It also helps them to integrate because they are continually talking to sighted persons."

On the telephone you won't know if you are talking to one of the blind people hired by the government to help you with deductions,

Residents Enforce Curfew

McLENNAN, Alta. (CP) Town council in this northwestern Alberta community has passed a bylaw imposing a night curfew on youth in an effort to stem growing vandalism and break-ins.

The curfew orders youths 16 years old and under off the streets by 10 p.m. week days and by 11 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Breaking the bylaw will bring an undetermined fine for parents of offending children.

Enforcement is done by the 1,268 town residents and a local 60-member youth group which asked council for the curfew.

In the last eight months, there has been a marked increase in the number of petty thefts and break-ins, says Sgt. Bob Hubber, head of the six-member McLennan-area RCMP detachment.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS AND OTHERS
WINIFRED DRANSFIELD WITHERSPOON, Deceased

CREDITORS and others having claims against the estate of Winifred Dransfield Witherspoon, deceased, late of 2149 Chambers Street, Victoria, British Columbia are requested to send full particulars of such claim to the Executrix, Anne Irene Wright, in care of Cumming, Richards, Underhill, Fraser, Skillings, Barristers and Solicitors, 530-880 Douglas Street, Victoria, British Columbia, on or about the 14th day of January, 1977, after which date the assets of the estate will be distributed, having regard only to claims of which the said Executor shall then have had notice.

Alberni Car Dealers Agreed to Parts Surcharge—Witness

A three per cent freight charge and a 10 per cent surcharge on parts and accessories were agreed to at two separate meetings of parts manager of Port Alberni car dealers, B.C. Supreme Court was told Thursday.

Norman Unger, former parts manager of Katila Chevrolet-Oldsmobile Limited (formerly Grant Katila Motors Limited), was testifying in the fourth day of a two-week trial of five port Alberni dealers accused under the Combines Investigation Act of restraint of trade.

The first meeting occurred in late 1967 and resulted in agreement to add 3 per cent for freight on sheet metal and body parts and the second meeting was around the end of July, 1969, and resulted in agreement on the 10 per cent surcharge, he said.

Chatwin Motors Limited, Katila Chev-Olds, Meyers Holland Motors (Port Alberni) Limited, Ohs Brothers Motors Limited and Western Motors Limited are charged in the three-count indictment. Two of them, Meyers Holland and Ohs Brothers, now are merged as Western Motors.

Unger said he was parts manager of Katila Chev-Olds for almost 10 years and a partsman for 1½ years before that. Since Jan. 1 of this year, he has been running a grocery store.

Unger said Leo Katila was worried about freight costs and asked him to attend a meeting of local parts managers to find a way of trying to recoup freight costs.

The parts managers of various companies had a meeting, discussed the freight situation, and "somehow we arrived at the three per cent figure." One man had recommended five per cent.

"We finally decided on 3 per cent based on the retail price, we would add on for freight," he staid.

He said "basically" the three per cent was to be applied to sheet metal and body parts. He said he had the authority to arrive at any conclusion with the other parts managers and reported back to Katila after the meeting who "agreed that would be about the right figure."

Katila Chev-Olds began charging the freight price and he identified one invoice which showed a wholesale price of $116.05 for a fender for a body shop, a retail price of $145.20 and freight charge of $5.25.

He thought the charge was levied from January, 1968, to the end of 1972, which included the period covered by the indictment.

Dealing with the surcharge, he said Katila came to him and "mentioned we were going to try to get more gross from the parts business so he suggested 10 per cent" surcharge.

He thought it was to start Aug. 1, 1969, and said Katila asked him to get together with other parts managers and work out the details of the 10 per cent.

The consensus of the meeting, he said, was that the 10 per cent should be applied to "basically everything at the beginning" and at the beginning there were "very few items we did not put the 10 per cent on."

He said he told the meeting the surcharge shouldn't be put on fast-moving items but his opinion wasn't supported.

But, he said, it was realized that certain very fast-moving items "we could not possibly" put the surcharge on, for example spark plugs.

He said "I think I probably told Mr. Katila what transpired" at the meeting, and the company did start adding the surcharge.

Unger said he realized by mid-August it was "awfully hard" to put the surcharge on competitive lines of parts and accessories and he phoned the parts manager at Chatwin Motors and told him it probably wouldn't work and "we should drop it." The other parts manager didn't agree, he said.

At the time, Katila was on vacation and he said "I don't remember if it was the same day or the next day" but after his phone call to the Chatwin Motort's parts manager, Barry Meyers, part-owner of Meyers-Holland Motors, telephoned.

Unger said Meyers phoned to speak to Katila, and Unger was asked to take the call.

Meyers felt Unger should carry on with the surcharge, at least until Katila returned from vacation, and "I said I'd carry on with it."

When Katila returned from vacation there was a discussion and "the general context was he felt we needed more gross profit in the parts department and I finally agreed with him."

Unger said Katila Chev-Olds did apply the 10 per cent "basically, with a few exceptions," until sometime in 1971 when it was dropped.

Unger said he dropped the surcharge for about nine months and didn't advise Katila.

He said the parts manager at Chatwin Motors phoned him and realized that Katila Chev-Olds hadn't been adding the surcharge.

Unger said he phoned the other parts manager and told him Katila Chev-Olds would drop the surcharge completely effective April 15, 1971.

"He asked me if my management knew and I said they would know very shortly," he said.

He said he advised Katila of what he had said and Katila tried to convince him the 10 per cent was necessary.

There was another meeting with Katila and "I finally realized the extra 10 per cent was needed on some items all right but I made a list of the parts I thought we should't put the 10 per cent on and Mr. Katila agreed with me."

He said the Chatwin Motors parts manager joined this discussion and the three of them went over the list and a list from the other parts manager and "between the two we compromised on this list."

Unger said "we pretty well agreed on" the other parts manager's list.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man described as "a hopeless alcoholic" was sentenced by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Thursday to six months in jail and the judge strongly recommended he be sent to the Alouette River institution for alcoholics.

David Lindsay Ryan, 23, of 1265 Grant, pleaded guilty Monday to breaking and entering with intent and was remanded to Thursday for a pre-sentence report.

Ryan was charged with breaking into the supply room of the Royal Jubilee Hospital pharmacy on Dec. 11. Victoria city police, at the hospital on another matter, apprehended Ryan in the pharmacy.

Oslter noted that Ryan had a bad record with offences related to alcoholism.

★ ★ ★

A Saanich man who wanted to lay countercharges against police was calmed down sufficiently to have charges read against him first.

Roger Lindal, 38, of 5191 Rambler, waved his arms at Ostler to show a bruise on his left wrist which he claimed was the result of handcuffing, and suggested that assault with a deadly weapon might be the appropriate charge.

However, Ostler was able to quieten Lindal enough to have charges read of causing a disturbance and assault by resisting an attempt to remove him. Lindal pleaded not guilty to both charges, which arose from a Thursday morning incident at the Royal Oak Inn.

During his tirade, Lindal said he was a badminton player and that the injury was luckily to his left hand, used to pick up the shuttlecock, and not his racquet hand, "or else I would be really hot."

★ ★ ★

James Michael Pogue, 33, of 95 Wellington, was remanded until Dec. 22 for election on a Dec. 1 charge of possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

★ ★ ★

Ostler handed out sentences totalling nine years, four months on 10 charges but because they were all concurrent, the sentence amounted to only one year.

John Petrashuik, also known as John Ptrashuyk, who formerly resided at 1135 Hilda, pleaded guilty Monday to seven charges of false pretences and one charge each of possession of a stolen motorcycle and stealing a car.

Before sentencing, Petrashuik changed his plea from not guilty to guilty on a charge of failing to appear in court.

Ostler gave the 23-year-old man one year each on all charges except the last one. He handed out a four-month term for failing to appear in court but made all sentences concurrent.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court the value of goods and money received on the bad cheque charges was $3,511.35 and the value of the stolen motorcycle was about $4,000.

"It's not dangerous, it's outrageous," Ostler said to an 18-year-old who pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and was fined $200.

Mulligan told the court that Saanich police began chasing Stuart Otto Hyde on Douglas Street, near the Trans-Canada Highway at 65 miles an hour. The chase reached speeds of 100 miles an hour before Hyde was stopped 3½ miles later near the Thetis Lake overpass on the Trans-Canada Highway.

Defence lawyer Robert Buffam, arguing for a conditional discharge, told the judge Hyde had bought the car the week before and that dashboard lights were not working. Buffam said Hyde was also "egged on" by a passenger in his car.

Ostler rejected the request by saying it was neither in the public's interest nor Hyde's to grant a conditional discharge.

Ostler agreed with Mulligan that the case of an 18-year-old Saanich youth charged with theft over $200 was an unusual one.

Mack explained to police that he took the chairs to pay a common assault fine of $300, the assault having taken place against Mack's mother.

However, Mulligan said, Mack's mother had said that her son's behavior had been exemplary since he spent a week in jail.

Ostler remanded Mack until Jan. 6 and ordered a pre-sentence report.

A 30-year-old man who grabbed another man by the hair and kicked him in the stomach last April was fined $75.

John Raymond Day, a seaman aboard the Canadian Coast Guard cutter Ready, was originally charged with assault causing bodily harm but a guilty plea to the lesser charge of common assault was accepted.

Court was told the incident took place outside a Sidney beer parlor.

15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

IS IT $50 OR $450?

Prevue Payoff Puzzle contestants have an added challenge this week.

They won't know whether they are shooting for prize money of $50 or $450 in the current puzzle which appears in today's Times Prevue section.

The correct solution to each week's puzzle is normally received on Wednesday, deadline day for entries. The solution, for security purposes, is sent to the Bank of Nova Scotia's Douglas and Hillside branch and held until after preliminary judging has been completed.

But this week, most likely because of the Christmas mail pile-up, the puzzle solution didn't show up Wednesday, Thursday or today. And since the bank is closed Saturday it will be Monday at the earliest before it is known if there was a winner or winners of last week's contest.

Meanwhile, there are 21 entries which have passed the preliminary judging, which means there could be a nice $400 windfall waiting for some contestant.

Or, on the other hand, maybe this week's puzzle will bring $450 to an entrant.

PRODUCTION BOOST VOWED

Times News Service

DOHA, Quatar — Saudi Arabia broke with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries today and refused to go along with a two-step 15-per-cent price increase decreed by 11 of the 13 OPEC members.

The Saudis said they would hold their price rise to five per cent and increase their production, already OPEC'S largest.

Oil company executives today began trying to work out the implications of the two-tier price increase.

Spokesmen for the major American oil companies said their executives were studying the OPEC communique and reports from the Persian Gulf sheikdom to work out whether they should be happy or sad.

"It's incredible," one oil company executive said. "At first glance, the big question is what it will do to OPEC."

At an American independent oil company antoher executive said: "Our guys are in a state of confusion. They're standing around looking at each other, at a loss to say anything. Probably they won't know the true situation until they get the price lists."

Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi oil minister, claimed the others will be unable to get the higher price and told reporters, "We expect the West to show a sign of appreciation" in its policies toward the Arab-Israeli conflict and the so-called North-South economic conference between the industrialized and underdeveloped countries.

Saudi Arabia and the UAE agreed to increase their oil prices five per cent on Jan. 1 and to maintain those prices for the next year.

The other 11 OPEC members — Iran, Iraq, Venezuela, Kuwait, Nigeria, Libya, Indonesia, Algeria, Qatar, Gabon and Ecuador — insisted on a 15-per-cent increase in two stages: 10 per cent on Jan. 1 and five per cent on July 1.

Much of the oil imported by Canada for use in the eastern part of the country comes from Venezuela.

A communique issued by the 11-country majority at the close of OPEC's ministerial conference said the base price of $11.51 U.S. a barrel of crude oil will be raised by $1.19 on Jan. 1 and by another 60 cents on July 1, bringing it then to a total $13.30 a barrel.

In first reaction to the increase, the nine-country European Common Market declared the oil price rise by the OPEC majority will "add to the already existing factors of uncertainty for economic recovery."

It added: "It will strengthen inflationary tendencies, which are still strong, and will worsen the imbalances in international payments."

Britons, already hard-pressed by inflation, groaned at the prospect of higher gasoline and fuel prices certain to follow the OPEC decision.

Officials in Japan, which is practically entirely dependent on imported oil, expressed concern over the price increase, but said the OPEC split made its impact lighter than the government had expected.. Much of Japan's oil comes from Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

Yamani said Saudi Arabia will turn its vast production capacity loose to meet the market. He said he expects it will be impossible for the other OPEC members to get the prices they agreed on.

"I don't expect the 10 per cent to be enforced in the market," he told a news conference.

The split was the first crack in the solid front of the international oil cartel since it began pushing up prices in 1973. The development promised confusion for the world oil trade, an uncertain future for OPEC and possibly a break for oil consumers.

Mana Saeed Oteiba, UAE oil minister, said OPEC is not broken.

CHRISTMAS LOOKS GREEN

Put any thoughts of a white Christmas or skiing and snowshoeing over the holidays around Victoria out of your mind.

The weatherman says at the present time the odds are 10 to 1 that it won't snow over the holidays — a prediction which should please citizens who prefer balmy weather.

There would have to be a complete change in the weather pattern to bring snow and ice to Victoria and there are no indications yet that this will happen, he says.

"As long as the warm westerly flow of air from the Pacific persists, the weather will remain unchanged," he said.

While there is always a change of weather could occur. Eyen if it did, he said, it's doubtful there would be sufficient snow on the lower mountain slops of Vancouer Island for skiing.

Flu Shots Suspended One Week

British Columbia has suspended its flu immunization program for at least a week, Dr. Kenneth Benson, associate deputy minister of community health services, announced Thursday. It is a precautionary step and there is no evidence of any problem with the provincial program, he said.

The move follows a halt in the U.S. swine flu vaccination program for the second time in two months, this time to investigate reports that some vaccinated people have developed Guillain-Barre syndrome, a disease affecting the nervous system.

American medical spokesmen stressed there is no proven association between the swine flu vaccine and the disease but the suspension is "prudent" until the possibility of such a link is checked.

No cases associated with flu vaccine have been reported in Canada.

In Ottawa, federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde told a news conference Thursday night that he has asked the provinces to suspend immunization of people between 20 and 50 until Jan. 1 by which time he expects to have a detailed report from the U.S.

But B.C., which has only been offering a combination vaccine to older or chronically ill people anyway, decided to suspend its program.

In the Capital district, about 7,000 people over 65 or with a chronic condition which would be aggravated by flu have received shots at clinics last month and this week. Thursday's announcement led to cancellation of the last clinic in Victoria today.

The vaccine given locally is different from the American, protecting against both Swine flu and the Victoria strain, and was not manufactured in the U.S.

Elsewhere in Canada, other provinces and the federal government were also offering monovalent vaccine, providing just Swine flu protection, to all adults. The American move and Lalonde's announcement has resulted in a variety of responses across the country. Manitoba will continue to offer vaccine to the high risk group.

Suspension of the U.S. program followed reports of at least 94 cases of Guillain-Barre syndrome, also known as French polio.

Four of the 94 persons died but health officials stressed there was no evidence of a direct link between swine flu vaccines and the deaths.

All four victims had been given the swine flu vaccine. As many as 50 million U.S. residents have had flu shots.

Symptoms of the syndrome include growing paralysis, loss of limb use and breathing difficulties. The syndrome is first identified by a tingling in the feet. It then works its way up both sides of the body.

6-0 VOTE AGAINST PORT

PORT ANGELES (AP) — Reflecting local criticism of a plan to use this city's port as an oil superport, city council voted 6-0 this week to amend ordinances prohibiting such a development.

Earlier council voted to amend the city's comprehensive land use plan in order to bar an oil terminal. The zoning action makes the earlier move formal.

NDP Will Sit Out

There'll be no dancing for NDP MLAs at the province's state ball this year, caucus chairman Karen Sanford said today.

Sanford (NDP—Comox) said NDP members will not attend the ball set for Jan. 14, three days after the opening of the legislative session.

Premier Bill Bennett last year cancelled the ball saying that because of the state of the economy there was "nothing to dance about."

But this year Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said there is cause for celebration and the ball would go on at Government House.

However, Sanford said the economy is in a depressed condition, because of Socred government policies and:

"In the present circumstances, the last thing the people of B.C. want is a state ball to provide free drink and food to politicians at the expense of services to people."

Tory MP Sees Red

By IAIN HUNTER

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A Conservative MP protested in the House of Commons Thursday the "quiet" appointment of a former active member of the Communist Party to a sensitive" position on the government's commission regulating radio and television broadcasting.

Dan McKenzie (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) stated in the House that Jean-Louis Gagnon, appointed a member of the Canadian Radio and Television Commission this summer, "has a long record of communist affiliation and activity."

Speaker James Jerome cut McKenzie off when he tried to raise the appointment as an emergency issue for debate Thursday, but the MP declared that he will renew his efforts today.

McKenzie said the appointment of Gagnon to the CRTC was made this summer and received little if any publicity.

Plane Rescue Lauded

Quick action by Canadian and U.S. rescuers is credited with averting a tragedy in the forced landing Thursday of an Airwest Airlines Twin Otter in Juan de Fuca Strait. (See also Page 19.)

While praise was coming in for the rescue of all 16 people aboard the plane, the federl Ministry of Transport was launching an investigation into the incident.

So far there has been no explanation for the ditching of the plane in heavy fog about four miles south of Victoria.

Rear Admiral Andrew L. Collier, commander of Canadian Forces in the Pacific, sent a message to rescuers from both countries commending them for the speedy rescue work.

"The continued unselfish cooperation of all agencies, United States and Canadian, only emphasizes the outstanding devotion to duty of those engaged in saving lives," he said.

The admiral conveyed his personal "bravo zulus" to all those involved.

A forces spokesman said the term "bravo zulu" is navalese for "extremely well done."

The investigation is being handled by the MoT's aircraft accident investigation branch.

The 18-passenger, $500,000 Twin Otter was on a scheduled flight from Vancouver to Victoria when the accident occurred.

Pilot Ted Mitchell of Chilliwack radioed a distress signal at 11:20 a.m. after the plane hit the water in heavy fog.

Yule Sales Run At 1975 Levels

By AL FORREST

Times Staff

Victoria's unseasonably mild weather has depressed sales of heavy clothing and ski equipment — but otherwise Christmas sales are about the same as last year.

"You can bet I'm dreaming of a white Chirstmas," one department store manager said.

"I would love to see some snow. It doesn't have to snow right in Victoria as long as it falls somewhere on Vancouver Island where there is some skiing."

In addition, a cold snap would be helpful in moving some of the heavier clothing styles that normally sell briskly at this time of year.

Store managers asked not to be identified by name or by store for competitive reasons but they told a remarkably similar story.

If sales are as good as expected in the final week, receipts will be ahead of last December — which was a banner month — by a modest one or two per cent.

"Most stores would be happy to match the sales of last December," one manager said.

There is still evidence of an economic slowdown. Few people are buying deep freezes, stoves or other major appliances as presents.

But there is boom in less expensive frilly items like perfume, jewelry, new kitchen gadgets and the things designed for those people who have everything.

NEWS BRIEFS

BASFORD SIGNS PELTIER ORDER

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford has signed an order calling for the extradition of American Indian Movement (AIM) activist Leonard Peltier, the minister's office said in a news release todayy.

Peltier, a 32-year-old Sioux from the troubled Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota, is wanted in the U.S. on charges of murdering two FBI agents. He was arrested earlier this year in Alberta and sent to Vancouver where he lost a fight against extradition.

AIB Penalty

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board administrator, Donald Tansley, ordered Nordair Ltd. of Montreal Wednesday to pay the federal government $1,500 for compensation overpayments made to four dispatchers and two assistant dispatchers.

Suspect Arrested

MUNICH (AP) — A 31-year-old underworld figure, Detlef Grashei, was arrested early today as a prime suspect in the $8.3-million kidnapping of Richard Oetker, heir to a West German food processing and shipping fortune, police reported. Oetker, 25, was freed Thursday night after his family paid a ransom of $8.3 million, the largest on record for a kidnapping in West Germany.

Aid Conditional

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Investigators for the house select committee on assassinations believe they have uncovered a lead to whether a second gunman was involved in the assassination of John F. Kennedy. House sources said the investigators also feel there are good grounds to further explore other aspects of the Kennedy slaying.

Face of Hunger

Dr. Lotta Can S-t-r-e-t-c-h a Dollar

What can you buy for a dollar, or even two or three or more?

It's an all-too-familiar complaint, especially at this time of year when the budget never seems to cover all those alluring gift ideas and other Christmas goodies.

Although the dollar's purchasing power may seem pretty feeble in self-indulgent Canadian terms, at least one sensible shopper knows how to make it stretch a long way in helping the undernourished and needy of this world.

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, has th facts and figures at her fingertips. And to read them is to place our own grumbling about the cost of living in a global perspective.

Did you know, for example, that:

—One cent ships two cups of milk to a hungry child in Bangladesh?

—Twent-two cents (a little less than the price of a cup of coffee) will buy a day's barley ration in Korea?

—Or that $6.86 (about the price of a new set of Christmas tree lights) is enough to send a child for one year to a primary school in Bangladesh?

There are numerous other examples from Dr. Lotta's shopping list of basic necessities; items that are far removed from the frills of a Canadian Christmas. But it's the Christmas spirit of giving she wants to tap in USC's annual fund-raising drive in Victoria.

Her message is simple and direct: "Our USC is an effective and loving channel without any red tape, leading directly toward a great variety of far-reaching, excellent projects in the fields of agriculture, education and training, health and family planning. Please help."

This year's goal in Greater Victoria is $30,000.

Residents wishing to help the USC's work spanning 147 projects in 12 countries can mail their donations to the Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, or bring them directly to the business office at 2621 Douglas.

Contributions are also accepted at any branch fo the Bank of Nava Scotia.

Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

U.S. NETWORKS WON'T PAY PRICE

MOSCOW (AP) — Three United States television networks negotiating with the Soviet Union for broadcast rights for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow have decided to withdraw from the talks, a network source said today.

The source said the reason for the breakoff was "excessive demands of the Soviets."

The network executives planned to leave for home later today. "This is not a negotiating position," the source said, "and the Soviets have been so told."

The Soviet Olympic organizing committee and the state committee for radio and television opened the talks Thursday with a surprise demand for $50 million to buy equipment for TV coverage of the Games.

The $50 million would have been added to the price a network would pay for the exclusive U.S. rights. Some estimates of that probable price tag were as high as $100 million.

NBC, CBS and ABC were seeking the broadcast rights.

The Soviets demanded that 40 per cent of the sum be paid in 1977 and the remaining 60 per cent in 1978.

The next step, the source said, would be to seek U.S. justice department permission for an Olympics coverage pool.

Canucks' Manager Starts to Wonder About His Coach

Times News Services

Phil Maloney, general manager of the Vancouver Canucks, is losing patience with his coach. The Canucks lost again Thursday night, absorbing a 7-3 drubbing from the Detroit Red Wings, and Maloney said he may fire himself as coach if things do not improve soon.

The Canucks have won just eight of 33 games this National Hockey League season and share last place with the Minnesota North Stars in the Smythe Division.

"I don't know if it's me or the team. We played badly tonight," said Maloney, who added that his chances of staying on as coach could depend on the club's next game, Saturday at Minnesota. "The next game is critical," he said, "It's a four-point game and it should be very significant."

Elsewhere in the NHL Thursday night, the Philadelphia Flyers downed the Chicago Black Hawks 4-1 in a fight-marred game which got Chicago coach Billy Reay into another verbal battle; the Buffalo Sabres slashed the New York Rangers 7-2; the Boston Bruins scoped the St. Louis Blues 5-2, and the Pittsburgh Penguins trimmed the Cleveland Barons 5-4.

In the World Hockey Association, the Minnesota Fighting Saints beat the Indianapolis Racers 5-3 and the San Diego Mariners blanked the Edmonton Oilers 3-0.

Reay, who recently was involved in a verbal tiff with Coach Scotty Bowman of the Montreal Canadiens, had some fiery comments on the Flyers after the Chicago loss.

"They sent their clowns out to intimidate us and they after the Flyers extended were successful," said Reay their unbeaten string to 13 games.

There were four fights in the third period. A period earlier, defencemen Bob Murray was added to the mounting Chicago injury list when he was checked into the boards by Phildalphia's Mel Bridgman and was hospitalized with possible rib and muscle injuries.

Rick Martin scored three times in the second period and Gil Perreault added two goals as the Sabres outshot New York 40-14 and kept the Rangers winless at Buffalo since Nov. 22, 1973.

Pat Hickey scored both goals for New York.

Terry O'Rielly's first goals in 20 games and three assists by defenseman Brad Park carried Boston past St. Louis and former Bruins goalie Ed Johnston, extending the Blues' winless string to nine games. It was only the Bruins' second victory in nine games.

St. Louis Coach Emile Francis was not pleased with the work of his forwards, excluding Larry Patey, who scored both Blues goals.

"Our forwards should donate some of their pay checks to the defensemen and the goalie. This has been going on for three weeks now. They (the forwards) have been standing and looking, hoping someone else would do it for them. And nobody's doing it."

Pittsburgh's Pierre Larouche scored the winning goal in a fame which featured four ties and a successful penalty shot by Cleveland's Al McAdam. Jean Pronovost scored twice and set up two other Penguins' tallies.

McAdam, who had broken in alone on Pittsburgh goalie Denis Herron, was awarded the penalty shot after being held from behind by defenseman Russ Anderson.

Minnesota's Mike Antonovich scored three goals and assisted on another as the Fighting Saints survived a 27-shot attack by Indianapolis in the first period and went on to victory.

Despite the 27 shots on Minnesota goalie Lou Levasseur, the Fighting Saints came out of the first period with a 2-1 lead on the first two goals by Antonovich.

Joe Noris scored twice, once on a power play and once shorthanded, while Edmonton was held to just 11 shots on San Diego goalie Ernie Wakely in the Mariners' triumph over Edmonton. It was San Diego's 11th straight home victory.

Finlay Lawyer Cites Vendetta

CHICAGO (AP) — Charles O. Finley's $3.5 million lawsuit against baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn opened in federal court Thursday, with Finley's lawyer charging that Kuhn took actions "to punish an old enemy."

Neil Papiano of Los Angeles, the lawyer for the Oakland A's owner, referred to Kuhn's decision to void Finley's sale June 15 of three top players to Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees for $3.5 million.

Kuhn claimed the deals were not in the best interests of baseball. Finley said he needed the money and filed the suit to get it.

Kuhn's lawyer, Peter K. Bleakley of Washington, countered in his opening statement that "the evidence in the plaintiff's own case will belie the charge" of malice on Kuhn's part.

The 58-year-old Finley watched the statements from a table where four members of his trial team sat. Kuhn was not present, but lawyers for him, both major leagues, the Yankees and the Red Sox, were.

Bleakley said evidence would show that Kuhn's action was just like voiding of trades by previous baseball commissioners. Bleakley said the 1930 proposed trade of Fred Bennett of the American League's St. Louis Browns team to a minor league club in Milwaukee was voided by commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. Milwaukee challenged Landis' decision in federal court, which upheld the commissioner, said Bleakley.

Czechs Edge Winnipeg; Soviets Down Sweden

MOSCOW (CP) — The Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia took an early lead in the annual Izvestia international hockey tournament Thursday, the Soviets getting three goals from Valery Kharlamov in a 4-2 win over Sweden and the Czechs edging Winnipeg Jets 3-2.

Kharlamov, who also assisted on a second-period goal by Boris Mikhailov, is making a fast return to international hockey after suffering two broken ankles in an auto accident earlier this year.

Vladimir Veith's goal midway in the third period through a maze of players broke a 2-2 tie and saddled the World Hockey Association Jets with their loss in the opening game of the tournament.

Veith's goal, against Winnipeg goaltender Joe Daley, came only 37 seconds after defenceman Dave Dunn had climaxed a Winnipeg comeback from a 2-0 first period deficit.

Vladimir Martinec and Vincent Lukac had provided the world amateur champion Czechs with an early cushion, but the Jets responded and Anders Hedberg made it 2-1 just 23 seconds into the middle period.

The Soviets, with a number of veterans returning to the lineup after several months absence, opened up a 4-0 lead before the Mikhailov line departed.

The weakened Soviet offence in the third period allowed the less experienced Swedish club to get back in the game, Kent Nilsson and Mats Ahlberg scoring to make the outcome respectable.

RESTRICTIONS PROMPT ANOTHER RESIGNATION

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Poce, citing "uncertainty" for the future, has gone the way of Ken Twigg, Diane Clement and Johanna Kennedy and resigned as distance coach for the Canadian Track and Field Association. The resignation is effective Dec. 31, 1976.

Twigg, the CTFA's executive director, and Clement and Kennedy, president and vice-president of the association respectively, submitted their resignations at a meeting two weeks ago when branch delegates rejected a revamped track program that would have cost them additional funds.

CTFA members subsequently agreed to the new program.

Poce said Thursday he didn't feel he could do the job he was hired to do under the restrictive format imposed by the association.

Selects Defeat Ontario Seniors

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Moscow Selects opened up in the second and third periods to score a 7-2 win over Brantford Alexanders of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League before a crowd of 3342 Thursday night.

It was the fourth win against one loss for the touring Soviet team. They have three games remaining.

Moscow's top line of Viacheslav Anisin, Yuri Lebedev and Sergei Potgortsev, which was kept on the bench in the first period, dominated the final 40 minutes. Anisin scored two goals in the second period and Lebedev one in the third.

Moscow's other goals were scored by Valeri Bragin, with two, and Vladimir Semenov and Vladimir Deviatov with one each.

Lancaster Tops Five Categories

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Lancaster, a veteran of 17 years in the Canadian Football League, was the leader in five passing categories during the 1976 season, league statistics released today show.

The Saskatchewan Roughrider quarterback, named the league's most outstanding player in post-season balloting, topped CFL signal-callers in pass attempts (494), completions (297), completion percentage (.601), passing yardage (3,869) and touchdown passes (25).

Lancaster, 37, who joined the Roughriders in 1963 after three years with Ottawa Rough Riders, holds CFL passing records in five categories — attempts (5,394), completions (2,924), total yardage (44,786), touchdown passes (304) and interceptions (349).

Tom Clements of Ottawa Rough Riders, the top passer in the Eastern Conference, led the CFL in average yardage gained per pass—8.7. Lancaster's average pass completion per passes—? touchdown per-pass radio.

John Hufnagel, a late-season arrival in Calgary, averaged one touchdown for every 12 passes he threw as a Cowboy for the CFL's best touchdownper-pass ratio.

Namdor Shows Way In Volleyball Loop

Namdor picked up four wins Thursday night to take over sole possession of first place in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Volleyball League during play at the CFB Esquimalt gymnasium.

Namdor downed CFB Esquimalt 15-0, 15-7 and topped Bunglers 16-6, 15-12.

In other games, Khalsa defeated Great Pumpkin 15-0, 15-7 and dropped Multi-Grade, 15-2, 16-14; Suke Teechrs topped Allenby Ford of Duncan 15-11 and picked up two 15-0 wins by default over Royal Roads; Allenby downed Suke 15-3 and collected two default wins over Royal Roads: CFB Esquimalt nudged Bunglers 15-12, 15-10 and Great Pumpkin posted a 15-3, 15-6 decision over Multi-Grade.

Namdor leads the league after seven weeks of play with 23 points and is followed by Khalsa (22), Great Pumpkin (21), Bunglers (14), Suke (12), CFB Esquimalt (9), Royal Roads (9), Multi-Grade (9) and Allenby Ford (7).

League games are all on Thursday nights between 7 and 10 p.m. at CFB gymnasium. Spectators are welcome and there is no admission.

Following a break for Christmas, league play resumes Jan. 6.

RUSSELL SIGNS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shortstop Bill Russell, who had his best year in the major leagues in 1977, signed a three-year contract Thursday with Los Angeles Dodgers. Russell, 28, hit .274 with five home runs and 65 runs batted in during last season. He was second to Ron Cey on the club in game-winning hits with 12.

Klammer Wins Downhill Test

VAL GARDENA, Italy (AP) — Franz Klammer of Austria won the men's World Cup downhill in this Italian resort Friday, covering the 3,750-metre course in 2:03.83 minutes.

Herbert Plank of Italy was second in 2:04.91 and Eric Haker of Norway third in 2:05.27.

The warm temperature made the track much slower than in previous days and Klammer was more than two full seconds slower than his record time of 2:01.22 for the course.

Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., and Ken Read of Calgary, both winners of World Cup downhill races last season, were the top Canadian finishers today.

Irwin was 14th in 2:07.53 and Read 17th in 2:08.29. Steve Podborski of Toronto was 18th in 2:08.37, Dave Murray of Abbotsford, B.C., 29th in 2:10.71 and Jim Hunter of Calgary 34th in 2:11.72.

FIVE-YEAR TERM

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Former major league baseball star Orlando Cepeda was sentenced Thursday to five years in jail and fined $5,000 for trying to smuggle 170 pounds of marijuana into Puerto Rico from Colombia.

Herminio Cortez, a former winter league player who was arrested with Cepeda in December of 1975, was sentenced to 30 months in jail and also fined $5,000.

Federal judge Hernan Pesquera ordered both men to serve three years of parole after completion of their prison terms.

Cepeda, 39, who retired from major league baseball two years ago after a 17-year career, was arrested by police at San Juan International Airport with Cortes while they were picking up a shipment of boxes filled with marijuana.

A jury found Cepeda and Cortes guilty last month, but sentencing was delayed until Thursday.

Regina Continues To Struggle Along

WINNIPEG (CP) — Regina Pats showed some signs of recovering from an unprecedented winless streak Thursday night but still came away on the short end of a 6-4 decision in a Western Canada Hockey League game against Winnipeg Monarchs.

The Monarchs jumped into a 2-0 first period lead but the Pats got goals from Ron Parent and Gerald Minor in the second period to move into a brief 2-2 tie before Monarchs regained the lead.

Regina battled back to tie the score twice more in the third period but the Monarchs fired two goals in the last three minutes to earn the victory and extend a Regina winless run to 28 games.

Dave Stekler, Greg McPhee, Eugene O'Sullivan, Daryl Einarson, Tom Roulston and Dave Morrison scored the Winnipeg goals.

Other Regina goals wree scored by Hugh Ellis, on a penalty shot in the third period, and Glen Ing.

Merchants Tie With Athletics

Juan de Fuca Merchants, currently residing in the South Island Big Six Hockey League cellar, came up with a surprise on Thursday night for leading Victoria Athletics at Pearkes Arena.

After entering the final period with a 4-2 deficit, Merchants managed to rally and earn a 5-5 tie with Athletics.

Dennis Head set the pace for Merchants with two goals while singles were contributed by Dave McLachlan, Brian Carbery and Dan Roy. Dale Ewasiuk (2), Mark Purdy, Ross Swanton and Gord Nielson counter for Athletics, who now lead runner-up Western Homes Buckaroos by four points.

NBA's 'Stable Year' Turns Into Hectic One

NEW YORK (AP) — This was supposed to be a year of stability for the National Basketball Association, but two months into the season things are more hectic than ever.

The stunning deal involving Bob McAdoo, the league's top scorer each of the last three seasons, is only the most recent of a series of weekly developments in a sport which was supposed to be maintaining a low profile for a while.

Last year was the big one for off-court developments. The merger was consummated, ending nine years of often-heated conflict between the NBA and the upstart American Basketball Association. What's more, a progressive, long-term agreement was reached with the players' association, erasing the prospect of lengthy litigation.

"I'm looking forward to getting out of my office and watching some basketball this winter," commissioner Larry O'Brien said before the start of the season, echoing the sentiments of fans around the league.

All was peace and harmony as the 22 NBA teams headed for their pre-season training camps in late August. "It didn't last long.

A rapid-fire series of surprises has set the sport on its ear. In just two months, consider the following developments:

● Julius Erving, catalyst to the merger, heart and soul of the New York Nets franchise and perhaps the most magnetic player in the game, refused to report to the Nets in a contract dispute and was finally sold to Philadelphia '76ers for about $3 million.

Philadelphia drew record crowds wherever it went, but Nets' fans reacted angrily and now season ticketholders are being refunded a percentage of the ticket cost because of the loss of Erving. Nets coach Kevin Loughery observed that $3 million is nice, it can't play forward.

● Moses Malone, who should be a junior in college, was traded by Portland Trail-blazers to Buffalo Braves, then one week later was shuffled off to Houston Rockets — his fifth team, at the tender age of 22.

● John Havlicek, the essense of "Celtic Pride," staged a brief pre-season holdout with Boston before signing. Paul Silas, the rugged rebounder and defensive bulwark, staged an extended holdout and was then dealt to Denver.

Red Auerbach reunited UCLA stars Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe in Boston, purchasing Wicks from Portland and obtaining Rowe from Detroit Pistons in the three-way deal involving Silas.

● Just as things began to look up in Boston, Dave Cowens, the Celtics' fiery centre, walked into the club office one day and said his passion for the game has been sapped and requested an indefinite leave of absence. He may be back in uniform later this season, he may be back next season, he may never be back.

● Pete Maravich, the peerless Pistol of New Orleans Jazz, said Cowens did what he was thinking of doing two weeks earlier — packing it all in. Soon thereafter, however, Maravich said he was happy once again and no longer thinking about quitting.

● An NBA single-game attendance record was set Oct. 29 in New Orleans when 27,383 turned out to see Erving and the 76ers play the Jazz in the Superdome. At the other end of the spectrum, only 73 fans braved blizzard conditions to buy tickets at the Buffalo gate for a game in Buffalo, which drew a total crowd of 994.

● Larry Costello, the only coach Milwaukee Bucks have ever had, was forced to resign one month into the season and was replaced by Don Nelson, whose total coaching experience consisted of 18 games as Costello's assistant. Wayne Embry also resigned but agreed to stay on until the end of the season as a lame duck general manager.

And, finally, there is McAdoo, the NBA scoring champion the last three years and the essence of the Buffalo club, who was dealt to New York Knicks for $3 million and reserve John Gianelli.

'Like Hitting the Side of a Building'

By MIKE HUGHES
(Times Staff)

Tirjeet Singh Johl, 3662 Dartmouth, said in an interview today he is certain of one thing, "it was a pretty shaky experience."

"But as for other details about the flight which ditched in the chilly waters of Juan de Fuca Strait, "I'm still trying to straighten it out."

Johl, the owner of Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd. on Admirals Road, said the plane hit the water hard a first time, bounced up and then came down again.

"Everyone just stayed calm," Johl said of the other 13 passengers and two crewmembers.

Johl, who takes the AirWest flight back and forth to Vancouver about once a week, was asked if he's thinking twice about flying in the future.

"Oh, for sure."

The two other Victoria passengers on the flight Thursday morning from Vancouver to Victoria were Gwenneth Saunders, 884 Falkland, and Dr. Peter Coy, 4532 Tiedemann.

Mrs. Saunders, 60, the only woman on the flight, refused to discuss the incident.

Coy, head of the Victoria Cancer Clinic, said it didn't appear the pilot was making a landing at the time the plane hit the water.

He said one of the passengers was watching the altimeter through the cockpit door and noticed it drop from 20 feet to zero and was wondering where the pilot had miscalculated when the plane hit.

He said the 16 people aboard sat inside the plane about 10 minutes discussing what to do.

He said it was interesting how much concern there was for the two dogs, locked in metal cages.

The doors were opened to give the dogs a chance to go into the water. One of the dogs made it, the only casualty of the ordeal.

Coy said the passengers heard a helicopter nearby at one stage and then the sound faded.

About five or 10 minutes alter, the U.S. Navy helicopter returned, landed on the water and picked up the passengers and crew.

They were later transferred to a National Harbors Board pilot boat and brought into Victoria. All were taken to hospital for examination and later released.

Coy said he was "rather embarrassed" that he was the only one who didn't get wet.

He said he was able to jump from the pontoon of the downed plane to the helicopter with only his shoes getting a little damp.

The other people had to jump into the water and swim to the helicopter.

Len Kowalewich, of Port Moody, a cameraman for CTV, was one of he pasengers and was able to shoot film of the rescue effort, shown later on the news Thursday night.

He also took the time to have all those involved autograph his life jacket which he was wearing when he arrived in Victoria.

"It was like hitting the side of a building . . . if we were descending any steeper than that, I think none of us would have been celebrating Christmas this year," he said.

He said the pilot admitted he had made the approach to Victoria too low to the water.

"He admitted himself that he came too low," he said.

Kowalewich said the plane bounced 150 feet after the first impact, then pancaked back into the water.

Norman Sigsworth of North Vancouver, western region manager of the transport ministry's safety branch, said he was "shaken" by the accident.

"I don't think anybody could go through that and not feel something," he said.

"We knew a distress signal had been sent. I knew enough about search and rescue that someone would come. It was just a question of when."

Coy said he offered his dry clothes to the other passengers in the helicopter who were shivering "but no one seemed to want to take their wet clothes off and get colder."

TOWN TALK

By special permission of Santa the Postmaster-General, all the letters are intercepted and opened and replies sent from Vancouver.

Children receive a reply that says "Hi. Your letter really cheered up the gang here in reindeer land.

"The elves, Mrs. Claus and I had a jolly time taking a break from our busy schedule to read your letter."

The reply tells a little story about life at the North Pole and ends with: "Your message is going into my special notebook and we're looking forward to visiting your home on Christmas Eve. Love Santa."

There are ho, ho, ho's and then there are HO! HO! HO'S!

Apparently Hillside's ebullient St. Nick has the patience of a true saint, taking extra time with the kiddies.

Once he was observed on his hands and knees with a youngster going through the toy section of a department store catalogue. Town Talk salutes all Santas and wishes them all a Merry Christmas.

The scales were tilted against them when the town's volunteer fire department wanted to get into the act and receive them too.

The council this week, after a heated debate on what Mayor Peter Malcolm termed "the turkey delight", decided to give neither the staffers nor the firemen the bird with only Malcolm and Ald. Ross Martin voting in favor of handing out vouchers.

Even the environmentalists chuckled Thursday during a public hearing on Saanich's controversial Roy Road housing project when one resident used a play on words to introduce some comic relief into the proceedings.

Joe McRoberts, 5221 Sapphire, tired of hearing concerns voiced about the fate of the birds on Panama Flats blurted: "Environment queer ducks . . . they're the first to go into the bush to shoot them."

The reaction . . . instant applause.

It's with a little smile of sympathy, because spelling bugs us too, that we note president E. E. Moyse of the Vancouver Island Curling Association reporting in a bulletin that in a seniors' tournament there were nine rinks and four births.

Births, berths, we know what you mean, E.E. But will the players' wives understand?

In fact McGeer, who has said some extremely harsh words about local brands in the past, is becoming a downright mellow fellow.

Sipping the Christmas present from the college, McGeer commented that it was the best B.C. wine he'd ever tasted, adding he was pleased the "education system can do something well."

Attorney-General Garde Gardom; "Not bad. Not bad at all." And Premier Bennett; "Pretty good."

'Worst Toy' Candidates Sold in City

At least three of the "worst Christmas toys" listed by an American author are sold in Victoria stores this year.

Lawyer Edward Swartz in his book Toys That Don't Care, says the toys may be harmful, even deadly to youngsters.

Two department stores and a toy specialty store checked by the Times said they carried one or more of the items.

None had been informed of any hazard from these or any other toys by consumer services officials, fire marshall or consumer spokesmen.

Swartz lists 10 of the worst toys of 1976 being sold across the U.S., some of which he claims, are capable of blinding, choking, burning or maiming a child. He blames the toy industry for not warning parents and other shoppers precisely of the risks.

The three toys available here are The Original Holly Hobbie, by Knickerbocker Toy Co., Middlesex, N.J., which allegedly has inflamable clothes and components, the Bumble Bee Pull Toy, an import item carried by Woolworth stores, with wings that come off to reveal a sharp steel rod that can cut or pierce flesh and Ramper Stompers, by Hasboro Industries, Pawtucket, R.I., a walking device that Swartz says may sprain a limb or cause a child to stumble.

A Hudson's Bay spokesman said it had sold out of its stock of Romper Stompers and in the U.S., Woolworth's said it has ordered its stores to withdraw the Bumble Bee toy.

The Holly Hobbie doll is imported to Canada by Ganz Bros., Montreal, and one storekeeper said the consumer's association had used it in a recent demonstration of safe toys at a Victoria mall.

A Sears spokesman said if Holly Hobbie is unsafe, her sister dolls Heather and Amy would likely be in the same category.

Several of the other toys listed by Swartz involve exploding caps and missiles, but none by the trades names given turned up in the Times survey.

Swartz said the toys he listed are by no means the only unsafe ones being marketed but they are examples of the types of hazards threatening children.

He said U.S federal regulations are too lax and leave too much authority in the hands of the toy industry.

He called for the industry to offer realistic and precise warnings to buyers.

TENANTS DOUSE FIRE

The fire started behind a chair in the corner of suite 204 occupied by Susan Biggs causing about $3,000 fire and water damage.

Tenants grabbed one of the building's fire hoses to extinguish the blaze. Some water leaked down to the apartment below.

Officials have not yet determined the cause.

Firemen Mediator At Work

Mediator Clark Gilmour began meeting today with representatives of both sides in the Victoria firefighters' dispute.

Gilmour was appointed this week by Labor Minister Allan Williams after the firemen threatened to strike Jan. 1 if the city failed to pay the full amount granted them in an arbitration award.

The city's position is that to pay the full amount, bringing the firemen to the same level as their Vancouver counterparts, would be over the limit allowed under federal wage guidelines.

United Way Raised $770,000

A total of $770,000 was raised in Greater Victoria in this year's United Way campaign, Stuart Drummond, executive director, said today.

Although this is $30,000 short of the goal, he said it represented an 11 per cent increase over last year's campaign.

"The 11 per cent is new money raised," he said. "It puts Victoria in fifth place in terms of new money raised of 20 major campaigns across Canada."

While United Way didn't reach its $800,000 goal, he said this actually does not mean too much.

"Some cities set low goals and make much of the fact that they topped it," he said. "What really counts is new money raised and whether enough money has been raised to support the various agencies."

City Appeals LRB Decision

The City of Victoria has asked the Labor Relations Board to reconsider a ruling last week which deprived three senior officials, including a department head and a deputy head, of their management status.

But Mayor Mike Young said Thursday it is "ridiculous" to suggest council is appealing the decision because it fears trimmed management ranks would be unable to keep services going in the event of another strike-lockout situation.

(Almost one-third of the city's former 38-strong management structure has been removed and transferred to union jurisdiction under the LRB's two recent rulings).

Young stressed council has no strong feelings about the decision. He said the city is taking the appeal action mainly because the employees concerned don't have any individual recourse to appeal, "and the feeling we received was that they themselves would like the matter reviewed."

The employees affected are land commissioner Kenneth Wilkins, assistant planning director Peter Crisp and data processing supervisor Francis Grealy.

In a letter sent Thursday to the board, asking for their case to be reconsidered, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers challenges the assertion that Crisp cannot be said to be employed for the primary purpose of exercising management functions over other employees, because he acts "on behalf of" his department head.

"By this reasoning, carried to its reduction ad absurdum, only one employee of one employer can ever be a member of management, namely, the person at the pinnacle," says de Villiers.

As far as the city is concerned that person would be the city manager, "for every other employee necessarily reports, either directly or indirectly, to him."

"Apart from its logical absurdity this ruling is inconsistent with the panel's finding, on the same general application, that other deputy department heads in the city are engaged for the primary purpose of exercising management functions, e.g., Mr. John Bate in the department of recreation and Mr. Alan Smith in the parks department."

The city solicitor notes that Grealy, a divisional head within the treasurer's department, is included in the bargaining unit while purchasing agent Harry Robinson, who has similar status, powers and duties, is excluded.

With regard to Wilkins, he says the panel based its decisin on the fact that only one employee reports to him, while the Labor Code refers to "other employees" in the plural.

But he points out that the Labor Code is subject to the provisions of the Interpretation Act, a section of which reads: "In an enactment words in the singular include the plural, and words in the plural include the singular."

De Villiers concludes that for the purposes of the code, it is sufficient to find that there is only one employee over whom management functions are performed.

"Any other construction would result in a member of management becoming a member of the bargaining unit whenever the number of employees subordinate to him falls below two, and re-emerging from it whenever one additional employee is hired," he states.

Bids in January On 'Y' Addition

Tenders will be called in early January for the $1.1 million expansion to the Victoria YM-YWCA building at 880 Courtney St.

The project received a boost when Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf announced in November the "Y" will receive a grant for one-third the amount from the Community Recreation Facilities Fund.

President Henning Norgaard said the expanded facilities will include a teaching pool equipped for use by handicapped, courts for handball, racquetball and squash; a new youth centre, individual exercise area, auxiliary gym and expanded locker room facilities.

More than 2,200 individual contributions were received to bring the expansion fund over the needed $1.1 million mark, Norgaard said.

For $375,000, Satisfaction

David Duncan of Victoria has been a service station operator and a furnace oil salesman — but wht he really wanted to do was own a pub.

"On Jan. 1, I become the owner of the Prairie Inn," he said today.

"I paid $375,000. It's a lot of money but I have always wanted to own a place like that."

On Boxing Day, 1974, it became British Columbia's first neighborhood pub.

There are rooms above the drinking area but they have not been used in recent years.

"I don't plan any immediate changes in the Prairie Inn," Duncan said.

The staff will stay as it is. I want to look things over for awhile and maybe I will begin making renovations in about a year. I would like to do something with the upstairs area — possibly offices or games rooms."

He bought the Prairie Inn from three local partners who were asking $500,000.

Duncan said the sale was completed quickly and he will resign as a salesman for Home Heat Centre at month's end to run the inn.

"I know the area very well. I was born in Brentwood and spent the first 16 years of my life there. This is quite an adventure and I am looking forward to it."

Herman at Newport Jazz Festival

Woody Herman Marks 40 Years With 'Big Bands'

By RODERICK NORDELL

NEW YORK — It's hard to date the beginning of a legend. Almost as hard as it was to keep a big jazz band together after the "big band" era ended around World War II.

But clarinetist Woody Herman started leading his own band on a November night in 1936. What makes him a legend is that he has been doing so just about continuously for the 40 years since then — though he did let Igor Stravinsky take the baton to rehearse the concerto which Stravinsky wrote especially for Herman's superb musicians in the '40s.

His 40th anniversary tributes appropriately have included a 90-minute special on public television and a Carnegie Hall concert in which the current driving young Herman band was joined by some of the celebrated alumni.

But Woody deserves a simple fan letter on behalf of all of us who more or less grew up with his bands — those various Herman "Herds" which, unlike the "nostalgia" bands, kept moving with the musical times, or ahead of them. My children's high school and college generation seems to find something as exciting in Woody's music as I did at their age.

Take the 7½-minute recorded version of "Caldonia" from somewhere in his middle period. It looks backward and forward in jazz, making a whole big band swing with the agility of a small group, using an entire trumpet section with the nimbleness of a single horn, giving a pulsing background to soloists, a fresh sound to familiar riffing, and a kind of biting exuberance to everything.

Equally vivid in my mind's ear is the Woody Herman group before the Herds. It was The Band That Plays the Blues, the first big band I saw in person after years of listening to bands on the radio from their exotic natural habitats in big-city hotels or ballrooms on the Pompton Turnpike or the Steel Pier in Atlantic City.

The slow tom-toms began before the theatre curtain opened. The anticipation was exquisite. The sound of the full band was rich and velvety beyond belief as the heavy textures of "Blue Flame" were sliced through by the bluesy exclamations of Woody's clarinet.

As the band emerged in all its sharply suited splendor, the theme ended on a low-down chord — leading seamlessly to a fast count by Woody setting the beat for "Blues on Parade" or some other violator of the speed limit.

Then there was the band-within-the-band, the Woodchoppers, coming down front for a Dixieland tune. And the still smaller group, the Four Chips, with lefthanded drummer Frankie Carlson doing a roll-off with his wire brushes for "Yardbird Shuffle."

And the finale, of course, was the kinetic "Woodchopper's Ball," a piece known by people who didn't know Woody Herman, and a piece he still has to play today, albeit with variations.

It was a Herman with smooth wavy hair in the fashion of those days. Since then he has been close-cropped, bearded, sideburned, and always nattily dressed. He leads a band with an entertainer's flair and a musician's knowledge.

Though not in the top handful of stars on clarinet or alto sax, he nevertheless plays with warmth and style, fitting impeccably into the business at hand.

In the '60s, among other things, he demonstrated what a jazz band could do to transform Broadway show tunes, given wry imaginative arrangements, expert soloists, and the irresistable Herman beat.

It's good to think that a Woody Herman band is still there waiting for us. He is the first to admit to ups and downs in quality over the years. But only Count Basie, who started his band a year earlier, has managed to reach the bicentennial year with as many big-band-leading years behind him.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

Mrs. McArthur of Mission, B.C., would like to know the value of the book The Inside of the Cup by Winston Churchill.

Churchill's historical writings are all collector's items and some of the first editions are already worth $100 or more but I have no record of any interest by collectors in his novels. They can be picked up in second-hand book stores for a couple of dollars each. I must say I find this odd.

Mr. Waring of London, Ont., asks me to settle a bet — was Angelica Kauffman German or English.

You might well have asked if she even existed, Mr. Waring, since her name is given to a whole style of decoration and, like Mary Gregory, she is an idea more than a person. But it seems that she did exist. Marie Angelique Catherine Kauffmann was an artist who worked for Adam Brother in England towards the end of the 18th century. It was after her death that her designs came into widespread use, particularly with German manufacturers. Your bet, therefore, is still not settled.

Mrs. F. W. Whitman of Sardis, B.C., tells me about a piece of silverware bearing the hallmark of the letters JG, an anchor, a lion and a small letter 'h'.

Hallmarks give very precise information which are easy to check in any good book of silver hallmarks which can be found in most libraries. In this case the letters JG indicate the maker; the anchor tells that it was made in Birmingham, England, the lion confirms that it is sterling and the 'h' denotes that it was made in 1907. Mind you, in my book, the lion should come before the anchor instead of after.

C. T. Williamson of Ottawa has all the Bing and Grondahl Christmas plates from 1960 onwards and wonders what they might now be worth.

This is not my favorite question. The 1960 plate is probably worth at least $100. '61, 2 and 3 about $75 each; '64 and 5 maybe $50 each and so on down. This makes them sound like a first-class investment and yet I still say proceed with extreme caution. Price increases recorded in the past do not necessarily apply to the future. For every manufacturer of so-called limited edition collectibles in 1960 there are 50 now and the moment there are more plates than collectors, the price will come tumbling down. Remember Hearn's Fifth Law of Collecting. Buy it because you like it, not because you are planning to make a profit out of it.

John Hearn will be pleased to hear your comments on collectibles. Mail can be sent to Box 4090, Station A, Toronto M5W 1M9.

Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House (xxx), on 4 at 2:30 p.m. Comedy about a married couple, tired of city life, who buys a run-down country home. Cary Grant, Myrna Loy and Melvyn Douglas. (1947).

Rumpelstiltskin, on 7 at 3:30 p.m. German-made cartoon about a miller's daughter who is ordered by her greedy king to spin gold from straw.

The Front Page (xxx), on 6 at 9 p.m. Drama based on the classic play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, starring Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau. The story is set in 1929 Chicago, with Lemmon as a star reporter and Matthau as his editor. (1974).

Instinct for Survival (Documentary), on 8 at 9 p.m. A study of behavioral parallels between man and wildlife in the struggle for survival. The movie is narrated by Alexander Scourby. (1974).

The Art of Love (xx), on 11 at 10 p.m. Comedy about a painter and his friend, who, deciding that dead artists are the only ones who sell well, fake a suicide. James Garner, Dick Van Dyke and Angie Dickinson. (1965).

Assignment K (xx), on 7 at 11 p.m. British-made drama with an intrepid British intelligence agent once more played for a patsy. Good scenery, but the plot is slow developing. Stephen Boyd and Michael Redgrave. (1968).

You're a Big Boy Now (xx), on 12 at 11 p.m. Comedy in which Peter Kastner plays a teenager who learns about life from some rather bizarre New Yorkers. (1967).

Joe (xxx), on 13 at 11 p.m. Powerful drama starring Peter Boyle and Dennis Patrick. Joe is a reactionary bigot who hates "niggers and hippies" with equal rage. The movie was filmed on location in New York (1970).

White Christmas (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Colorful package of holiday entertainment for the whole family, with dancing, singing and clowning — and Irving Berlin's title tune. Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye, Rosemary Clooney and Vera-Ellen. (1954).

Tight Spot (xxx), on 2 at 12:15 a.m. Crime drama with Ginger Rogers, Edward G. Robinson and Brian Keith. A well acted movie about a girl set up by the police as a trap for a big-time gang leader. (1955).

A Pistol for Ringo (xx), on 13 at 12:30 a.m. Italian-made western with Montgomery Wood playing a gunslinger who fights a bandito and his gang. (1966).

And So They Were Married (xxx), on 5 at 1:15 a.m. Comedy about a girl who gives out too many keys to her apartment during the Second World War, and about the romantic implications that ensue. Simone Simon and James Ellison. (1944).

Stories of Love, on 8 at 2:30 a.m. Trilogy made for television, introduced by Rex Harrison: Kurt Vonnegut's Epicac; Daphne Du Maurier's Kiss Me Again, Stranger; and Somerset Maughan's The Fortunate Painter. Bill Bixby, Leonard Nimoy and Lorne Greene. (1974).

By Vernon SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Christmas provides an annual bonanza of specials for television, most of which aren't very special at all.

Inevitably video's Yuletide falls into three categories: the wholesome family musical hour, animated cartoons of traditional tales and religious services.

This year NBC, thanks to producer Lee Mendelson and the nation's best-known hamburger chain, has an original idea going for it, Christmas Around the World, a 90-minute special beaming Dec. 19, on Channel 5 at 8 p.m.

Mendelson, who has produced some 50 specials, including 17 of Charles Schulz's "Charlie Brown" cartoons, lives and works in San Francisco.

"Other producers have had the idea for Christmas Around The World," Mendelson said. "But they waited until it was too late. No one thought of shooting the show a year ahead of time."

Mendelson began production more than a year ago, dispatching five crews to 19 countries to capture the panoply of Christmas in various cultures.

In the course of production he discovered each country had contributed its own bit of lore.

"It all fell into place," Mendelson said. "We had intended just to shoot chorales and pageants. Then we found our story in what individual nations gave to Christmas the way it is celebrated in The United States.

"The Christmas tree tradition began in Germany with its Tannenbaums. It was the first country to bring evergreens into the home for decoration."

"One of our crews filmed at St. Francis of Assisi's Monastery in Grecchio, Italy," he said. "St. Francis put St. Luke's words to music for the first carol. And St. Francis, back in the 13th century, originated the first creche and manger scene of Christ's birth.

"Although St. Nicholas came from Asia minor, it was the Dutch who made Saint Nick a Christmas symbol and called him Sinterklaas.

"Norway contributed the idea of reindeer instead of horses to pull Santa's sleigh. The Yule log came from the Old Norse traditional feasts in huge halls warmed by the biggest logs to be found."

England provided the mistletoe tradition and, in the 19th century, the Christmas card, to the tradition of Christmas celebration.

Mendelson said the United States' contribution was The Night Before Christmas," by Clement Moore, and other seasonal stories.

America's greatest contribution to Christmas, of course, is merchandising but that will play no part in Christmas Around The World except for commercial breaks to sell hamburgers.

"We were able to shoot the various national celebrations because Dec. 25 is not the only Christmas," Mendelson said. "The holiday is actually spread out from mid-November to January.

"Saint Nick arrives in Holland Nov. 15 aboard a boat in Amsterdam and 200,000 people turn out to greet him.

"In early December there is Santa Lucia in Sweden, The Festival of Lights. And throughout the month there are various religious ceremonies celebrating Christmas.

"Finally there is Jan. 6 which is the epiphany in Italy and Greece when many children open their gifts."

The producer wound up with 30 hours of footage. For insurance, he added an impressive list of celebrities to tie it all together.

Liv Ullman represents the Scandinavian countries. Marcel Marceau appears for France. Then there's Gene Kelly, Ireland; Vikki Carr, Mexico; Dick Van Dyke, Holland.

THE SPINNERS, top soul group, give a performance of Could It Be I'm Falling in Love and other hits on Soundstage, Saturday, Dec. 18, on Channel 9 at 10 p.m.

Kelly In Animated Show

In a rare mixture of colorful fantasy, original music, myth and family fun, Gene Kelly stars in this hour-long special, as Jack And The Beanstalk comes to television in a musical-animated-live action version of this long-popular classic, telecasting Saturday, Dec. 18, at 7 p.m. on Channel 8.

One of Kelly's few and much-awaited television appearances, he is joined by seven-year-old Bobby Riha, a promising young performer who duets with Kelly and partners him in dance as the wide-eyed and adventurous Jack.

Marni Nixon is heard as the animated Princess Serena, kidnaped by the Giant and turned into a harp. Ted Cassidy provides the deep and terrible voice of the fearsome Giant.

Eight original songs created by Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen are sung by the players and performed by the orchestra under the direction of Lennie Hayton.

Gene Kelly portrays Jeremy Keen, an 1890 Yankee peddler who trades his magic beans for Jack's cow. Jeremy satisfies the boy's scepticism over the promise of the magic properties of the beans when they find themselves at the top of the beanstalk in the Giant's castle, high in the clouds.

The live actors blend in animated action with the cartoon characters as they are pursued by the Giant, get lost in the castle, meet a pair of Woggle Bird guards, a band of friendly Minute Mice, the Golden Goose, and the lovely captive, Princess Serena

A QUICK REVIEW LESSON FOR CHRISTMAS PHOTOGRAPHERS

• Make sure that all batteries are fresh and correctly installed. Wipe terminals of alkaline batteries, even if new, and contacts in the camera with a rough cloth or eraser tip of a pencil. Replacement batteries must be the type specified or equivalent. Don't overlook electric-eye batteries.

• See that the camera's lens is clean.

• If a photo lamp is mounted on the camera and is aimed directly at the subject, avoid shooting squarely at a window or mirror behind the subject, or at a varnished or other shiny surface. And try to have the farthest part of the scene no farther than approximately twice the distance from the camera to the closest part.

• If a camera is new or you haven't used it for a long time, shoot a practice film before the holiday or at least read, or re-read the instruction book.

Spotlight on Movies

Jeremiah Johnson (xxxx), on 4 at 9 p.m. Adventure movie starring Robert Redford, Will Geer and Stefan Gierasch. This is an offbeat, well filmed western about a loner in the mountain country of Utah, shortly after the Mexican-American War. Redford hunts bear, fishes and acquires an Indian wife during the course of his absorbing, picturesque adventures. (1972).

Pride and Prejudice (xxx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Faithful adaptation of the Jane Austen novel about five sisters in search of a husband in England at the turn of the century. Laurence Olivier, and Greer Garson. (1940).

The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie (xxxx), on 5 at 11:30 p.m. British-made comedy-drama with Maggie Smith's Academy-winning performance as the irresistible, melodramatic and thoroughly mad teacher at an exclusive girl school in the late 1930s. Also in the cast are Robert Stephens, Pamela Franklin and Celia Johnson. (1969).

Who's Minding the Store? (x), on 7 at 11:30 p.m. A Jerry Lewis comedy about an eccentric poodle-sitter creating havoc in a department store. (1963).

Jeanne Eagels (xx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. Biographical movie about the rise and fall of actress Jeanne Eagels, played by miscast Kim Novak. (1957).

The Chapman Report (xx), on 12 at 11:45 p.m. Drama starring Jane Fonda, Efrem Zimbalist, Claire Bloom, Glynis Jones and Shelley Winters. The best-selling novel inspired by the Kinsey Report on the sexual escapades of suburban women is brought to the screen as a glossy soap opera. (1962).

White Christmas, on 6 at 11:50 p.m. For details see Saturday's listing on Channel 8 at midnight.

The Lemon Drop Kid (xxx), on 4 at midnight. Comedy starring Bob Hope and Marilyn Maxwell. Hope plays a fast-talking race-track bum who has to come up with a bundle he owes a syndicate — or else. (1951).

A Dream of Christmas, on 8 at midnight. Drama made for television about an Arkansas minister who moves his family to a challenging Los Angeles parish. Hari Rhodes and Beah Richards.

Tunes of Glory (xxxx), on 13 at midnight. English-made drama starring Alec Guinness and John Mills. An excellent movie with great performances by Guinness and Mills. The story concerns the bitter struggle between the vicious, careless, goldbricking colonel (Guinness) and the intelligent, disciplined young officer (Mills), who supersedes him in command. (1960).

Winchester for Hire, on 7 at 1:20 a.m. Italian-made western, a violent story about outlaws after buried treasure in post-Civil War Texas. (1967).

A Story of David (xx), on 8 at 2 a.m. Biblical drama starring Jeff Chandler, Basil Sydney and Barbara Shelley. (1960).

Stories of Love, on 6 at 2:20 a.m. For details see Saturday's listing on Channel 8 at 2:30 a.m.

Highlights

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 9 p.m. Five Red Herrings, Dorothy L. Sayers' mystery, is set in a picturesque Scottish town of the 1930s. In the first of a four-part serial, Lord Peter discovers a corpse.

Visions Airs Two Plays

Under the title Scenes from the Middle Class, Visions presents two one-hour plays — one about a black family that has reached some social position, the other about a white family on the way down the economic ladder — Monday, December 20 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9.

In the first play, Betty Patrick's Monkey in the Middle, a fortyish black woman (Mary Alice) tries to save her marriage to a successful physician (Thalmus Rasulala). But when she discovers that her husband is having an affair with a vulgar, silly white woman (Lan Bradbury), she leaves him and returns to work as a teacher. The husband is awed to find out that his wife refuses to compromise anymore.

Monkey in the Middle, Ms. Patrick's first full-length drama for television, is based, in part, on her own experiences, growing up in Detroit. Ms. Patrick also has written over 100 episodes of a black radio soap opera — Sounds of the City.

David Trainer — also a newcomer to TV drama — is the author of the second Visions offering. In Winter Tour, a young girl (Jean Rasey) finds she must depend on her own resources when her father loses his executive position. With her father becoming inert and her mother struggling to maintain a prosperous front, the girl grows up on her own. She is forced to acknowledge that she cannot count on her parents for either emotional or financial support.

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sometimes I wish I could walk out the door and leave Star Trek behind," says Gene Roddenberry, the man who created the television series and steered it through 79 episodes.

The last episode of Star Trek was made in Hollywood eight years ago.

It is not that he has any less affection for his creation. He simply worries that the Starship Enterprise and its voyagers will take over his life.

"I'm not a guru and I don't want to be," he says. "It frightens me when I learn of 10,000 people treating a Star Trek script as if it were scripture."

There is no escape for him from the cult that continues to follow the series, although it was taken off a television network for a decade. He does enjoy some of the responses, particularly letters from college professors, space scientists, physics students and others.

As to the Star Trek conventions: "I have to limit myself to one in the East and one in the West each year. I'm not a performer and frankly those conventions scare the hell out of me.

"It is scary to be surrounded by a thousand people asking questions as if the events in the series actually happened. I'm just afraid that if it goes too far and it appears that I have created a philosophy to answer all human ills that someone will stand up and cry, 'Fraud!' and with good reason."

Roddenberry has lately been involved in fashioning a feature movie version of Star Trek. Like the television series — which was cancelled after three years of lacklustre ratings — the new project has not had smooth sailing.

"I wrote a screen treatment which Paramount rejected," Roddenberry said. "The reasons were not quite clear, but they may have concerned a religious theme in my treatment. Now we are in the process of finding another writer, but I expect to be able to maintain creative control."

Paramount expects to spend $5 million on the feature and hopes to sign the original crew members as well as top cameo stars.

"I expect that if the feature turns out well, Paramount will try to bring Star Trek back to television. I would hope that it would take the form of occasional films in the long form. I don't think I could face the insanity of another weekly Star Trek.

Meanwhile, the Star Trek reruns continue. They are still playing in 49 domestic markets and 52 foreign countries. Roddenberry reports that the followings in Germany, Japan and England are just as loyal as in the United States. There are more than 100 Star Trek clubs in the U.S., including one just formed by a group of grandmothers.

Roddenberry says the series faded from NBC because "it started before the United States was well into space."

He added: "If the network had considered the quality of the audience and not merely the size, Star Trek might have continued for 10 years and I would be the millionaire that some people think I am."

Mormons Perform

A half-hour holiday concert featuring the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus — airs Monday, December 20 at 8:30 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Appearing in the Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City, the groups perform "The Hellelujah Chorus," "The Twelve Days of Christmas," "Do You Hear What I Hear?" and "Once in Royal David's City."

Composed of 400 young adults ranging in age from 18 to 29, the Mormon Youth Symphony and Chorus was honored last year by the Freedom Foundation at Valley Forge for its contribution to the spiritual heritage of America.

Giving Birth Filmed

As medical technology in the last twenty years has revolutionized the safety of childbirth, the philosophy of childbirth has changed — with man and woman wanting to more fully understand, share, and experience the birth of their children.

Experiences and methods vary. Giving Birth, a graphic video documentary airing Tuesday, Dec. 21 at 10 p.m., focuses on four couples and four different types of childbirth — from the standard hospital delivery with high technology and anesthesia to a Leboyer "birth without violence," from a Caesarian to a midwife-assisted natural birth. Interlaced with the stories of the four couples are interviews with experts on childbirth and its sociological significance, including Dr. Margaret Mead and Dr. Frederic Leboyer.

Giving Birth illustrates the joys and pains of childbirth, and explores the issues and questions surrounding new ideas and techniques. "Something has been interfering with the naturalness of childbirth, possibly for several hundred thousand years, maybe longer," anthropologist Margaret Mead said. "There are cases when childbirth is surgery. But there's no reason why we should take a life process and treat it always like a disease."

For the first time on television, Giving Birth shows the childbirth process in its entirely. It will be preceded by an announcement that the program contains language and subject matter of an adult nature.

Giving Birth, produced by Global Village in Association with WNET's Television Laboratory, was produced, directed, written and edited by husband-and-wife team John Reilly and Julie Gustafson.

Natalie Cole

Natalie Cole Stars In Christmas Dream

"How do you turn your dreams into miracles? How do you handle your impossibilities so they not only become possibilities, but realities in your life . . . realities that enable you to commit yourself to a NEW possibility? Well, that's what the Christmas story is all about," says Oral Roberts in his latest one-hour Special, titled Christmas Dream. The Special is scheduled on CHEK-TV, Ch. 6, Tues., Dec. 21, 8 p.m.

True to the program's dream concept, the show opens with a weary parade of animals, symbolic of those who were at Bethlehem on the first Christmas. They find themselves in a dream, following a star, unaware of their destination, knowing only that they are supposed to follow. Tired from their trek, weighed down with their burdens, they trudge on to find that indefinable something that lies at the end of their dream.

Performing during the show will be singer Natalie Cole and the Krofft puppets.

CUSTOMS TRACED THROUGH MUSIC

The traditions and customs of the holiday season are traced through music and historical narrative on A Christmas Celebration, airing Monday, Dec. 20 at 8 p.m. and Tuesday, Dec. 21 at 3:30 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Host Richard Kiley takes the humbug out of several fanciful Christmas legends including the story of the Three Wise Men, the choice of Dec. 25 for the celebration, and the derivation of Christmas presents and feasting.

He also points out that 400 years ago it was illegal to be jolly" on Christmas. In fact, the Puritans in several colonies strictly forbade the celebration of Christmas, levying a fine on anyone caught so much as baking a mince-meat pie.

Flying Santa Visits Alaska

Santa Claus reverses his traditional route and heads north, bringing Christmas joy to youngsters in Alaska's remote Yukon settlements, in a holiday story told by KOMO-TV's Exploration Northwest, Tuesday, Dec. 21, 7:30-8 p.m., on Channel 4.

Members of Alaska's Air National Guard play Santa's helpers, collecting loads of toys and goodies from the people of Anchorage for the children of St. Mary's Mission. An Air National Guard cargo plane serves as a sleigh for the "Flying Santa."

NFB Films Fly High

As a result of a recent contract between the National Film Board and Air Canada, NFB short films will now be presented on the airline's flights in both Canada and the United States.

Air Canada has purchased 30 prints each of six films and is presently negotiating for the acquisition of others.

The films will be presented bilingually and include some of the Board's most successful award-winning productions.

The Judy Collins Career Survives

By JOYCE MAYNARD

NEW YORK — The young man with the long red hair and a large orange cat purring on his shoulder, sitting on an orange velvet couch, brought to mind faint recollections of a record jacket one had seen somewhere before.

He is 17 years old — just a few years younger than his mother was when she started playing her guitar and singing folk songs in Chicago coffee houses, back in the 1960s.

It is curious, what has happened to the folk singers of the 60s. Some of them plugged in their guitars. Some just retired, making way for the rock singers of the 70s, who were more likely to smash their instruments at the end of a performance than to wind flowers around the tuning pegs.

And some of these flower children have children of their own now, and some of those guitar players' children are playing guitars themselves these days, as the young man on the velvet couch does on weekends, with a supper club rock band.

As for his mother, who is Judy Collins, her own career has not only survived the passage of the folk era but, unlike those of many other folk performers, it has also flourished. At the age of 38, and far from retiring, she is simply retiring her guitar.

Judy Collins no longer calls herself a folksinger. And while her audiences today may be young veterans of the folk era, it is unlikely they will find themselves singing along with the music, or humming simple, compact tunes on their way out the doors, as her audiences used to. "Those were good days," Judy Collins says, of her folk period. "But I don't mourn their passing. A musician has to grow and evolve."

Perhaps the one large area of social activism remaining for Judy Collins is the feminist movement. She voices her most militant sentiments to date in the title song of her new album, where — backed by an arrangement and singers that reach close to Hallelujah-chorus proportions, she chants, "Our lives will not be sweated from birth until life closes; hearts starve as well as bodies, bread and roses, bread and roses."

"I still don't understand it," she said, speaking of her own lack of raised consciousness in her younger years. "I had a father who was a professional man, and he was nothing if not supportive.

"Still, the minute I got married and was settled down — and was a mother — I put it all aside. I never thought 'career.' I worked in clubs, and I was the one who brought home the money while my husband went to school. But the idea was always for me to follow him . . ."

When she was asked if it was her singing career that broke up her marriage when she was 25, Judy Collins said no. She paused for a minute and smiled. "Perhaps it was his career that ended it. Maybe it would have worked if he had been available to travel with me."

In the divorce, Judy Collins lost custody of her son, who was then 4½. "Getting the marriage untangled was messy and terrible in every way," she said. "I can't imagine ever getting married again. Marriage is no longer a symbol of security for me."

The constant elements in Judy Collins' life now, she said, are her son, who lives with her now, a few close friendships — and her music.

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

ROBERT HORTON
. . . a 'heavy' now

HOLLYWOOD — When in 1962 Robert Horton figuratively rode off into the television sunset leaving "Wagon Train" in custody of a new scout, Bob Fuller, he literally rode into the sunrise.

Because he went East to continue his work as an actor on new terrain.

"I've been based in New York for the last 13 years," he explains. "But now I'm back in Hollywood, because last summer I saw a house in the Los Angeles area which I loved on sight and bought over the telephone while I was traveling with a play."

During his long absence from California which, incidentally, is his native state, Hollywood almost lost touch with Horton.

After ending his five-year ride with "Wagon Train," he did a television special the following year. Then, so far as Hollywood was concerned, he didn't resurface again until 1971, when he appeared in a segment of "Longstreet."

Yet despite his long absences from the West Coast, Horton says he's never quit working as an actor. And, having moved back to Los Angeles, he's being seen on network television in an episode of "Police Woman" called "Lifeline Agency."

It sounds like a show about a suicide prevention center, but that's not the case, Bob says.

"This has to do with merchandising babies," Horton reveals, "and I play the merchandiser.

"I've always played heroes, but I find it's more interesting to play a 'heavy.'

Born in Los Angeles, Horton was educated at Miami University and UCLA.

His first movie was "The Tanks Are Coming," which gave him a chance to be heroic all right but had little relationship to his real-life military experience which he'd gained in the Coast Guard.

Among other pictures in which he was heroic were "Apache War Smoke," "Return of the Texan," "Prisoner of War," "Men of the Fighting Lady" and "Pony Soldier," none of which brought him enormous acclaim.

However, when he became the scout on "Wagon Train," riding at first with the late Ward Bond and later with John McIntyre, Horton became a television superstar right in the class with Hugh O'Brian, John Russell, Ty Hardin and other sage-and-saddle types whose heroics were keeping viewers glued to their sets.

Why he pulled away from "Wagon Train" to head for New York is still a mystery, since Horton explains it only by saying he wanted a change.

The shift didn't bring him the fame "Wagon Train" had, but it did give him a new form in which to stretch his talents: musical comedy.

"I've appeared in virtually every great musical comedy except 'My Fair Lady,'" Horton claims. "Yes, I've played in 'Oklahoma' and 'Carousel' and all the other big names.

"But I've never played Prof. Higgins, and that's something I'd like to do sometime."

As a star of many musicals, Horton regretfully notes that recent shows of the genre haven't featured toe-tapping melodies like the ones in "My Fair Lady," "South Pacific," "Roberta" or "Good News."

"The average person can't remember anything from 'A Little Night Music' except 'Bring On the Clowns,' and he can't sing that," Horton holds. "We don't have memorable tunes in shows anymore, because the focus has gone to the lyrics.

"However, there are a couple of nice songs in 'Chorus Line.'

"Though I haven't been in Hollywood," he continues, "I've been doing nothing but performing. I've never sold insurance or cars."

See Pictures in Black and White

By JERRY WINDLE

The leaves have fallen, leaving behind only the barren stark forms of a tree, giving some good opportunities for pictures using effective composition and contrasts with shadow and highlight areas.

One trick for the primary color photographer is to learn to see in black-and-white. If you can teach yourself to see in black-and-white first, it will be a lot easier to create pictures which are properly composed and arranged.

As we know, when working with black-and-white we have to rely more heavily on composition and varying areas of light and dark to create good pictures. When using color, it is easier to get away with bad composition and lighting since the sheer colors of the subject will often overpower bad technique. Thinking black-and-white, the photographer should keep an eye open for such things as leading lines, repetition and varying areas of light and dark that will add interest to the finished pictures. A leading line might be a prominent tree or a fence, tree branch or country road. The purpose of the leading line is to take the eye of the viewer into the picture and to the centre of interest.

Repetition of the same objects such as a row of pumpkins or several fences or fence stakes can add strength to your composition. At the same time contrasts in color and texture, such as weathered barn wood or an old stone wall, will offer greater contrast with the bright colors of the scene.

Those cold winter mornings, or cool ones, may find the ground covered with a low mist or even fog. This also makes for interesting effects. It not only tends to soften colors to more subtle tones, but also offers a simple way to cover up those "busy" backgrounds that might detract from your picture. The winter months also provide good picture possibilities at the local resort areas that were clogged with vacationers during the summer Now is a good time to get those shots of the lonely sandpipers who have the whole beach to themselves or the lonely jogger making tracks across vast expanses of vacant shores. Overcast skies and bleak days provide some soft lighting for outdoor portraits of family and friends, and remember: Pictures make inexpensive gifts for loved ones on your Christmas list.

It's a Family Affair

By MEL GUSSOW

NEW YORK — Bing Crosby is, by his own description, "older and slower," and his voice is "lower — I can't make those high notes," but he has no intention of retiring.

A healthy, vigorous 72, he opened last week at the Uris Theatre in "Bing Crosby on Broadway." This is almost three hours at home on stage with the Crosby family — Bing and Kathryn Grant Crosby and their three children, Harry Lillis III, Mary Frances and Nathaniel, with help from such family friends as Rosemary Clooney and Joe Buskin.

It is basically the same show that the Crosbys performed in other U.S. cities and, triumphantly, last summer, at the Palladium in London, in Dublin and Edinburgh — with at least one addition: In honor of the holiday season, Crosby will sing "White Christmas."

Over breakfast recently before the show's opening, Crosby said: "I'd like to be part of this," meaning show business, "as long as I can. It's all I know."

And then he conceded that the show was cutting into his duck-hunting season a little, but that, more important, he would be home in San Francisco in time for "a tremendous family Christmas," a gathering of the Crosby family along with his four older sons by his first marriage and his 12 grandchildren.

Crosby said that the reasons for the current tour were charitable (each engagement benefits a different organization of his choice) and familial. "I wanted to give the children an opportunity to get on stage, to give them noise and experience," he said.

Asked if they had any talent, he answered: "Not much. They haven't demonstrated it yet." But, while appearing in the show, they have become stagestruck. Nathaniel, who is 15, told his father that he wanted to sing a duet with Miss Clooney. Crosby had a better idea: "You're going to sing a round, "Row, Row, Row Your Boat."

Harry, who is 18, "wants to play and sing like Barry Manilow." He talked about Harry's other activities — training dogs, cooking, real estate, mechanics, flying. "He's the busiest young man. I've never seen anyone with such ambition. When I was 18, I was just singing."

Remembering 18 sent him back on a long trail of reminiscence. He indicated that, for him, his current engagement of three hours a night for two weeks on Broadway was child's play next to his demanding apprenticeship.

"In the old days, I did five shows a day," he said. "One week I doubled at the New York and Brooklyn Paramounts. I went by subway from Times Square — eight shows a day and a nightly radio broadcast."

His first home was in vaudeville. "I worked on the same bill with Benny, Burns and Allen, Jim Barton, Bill Robinson, Ukelele Ike, Clayton, Jackson and Durante." The names tumbled out like towns on a road map. "I used to stand in the wings and watch comedians."

Soon he found himself doing comedy. "We'd steal material from every comedy act. In St. Louis, we were on the bill with the Marx Brothers. We wanted to show them how funny we were. The manager said, 'We bought you as a singing act.' I remember our last gag: 'Do you know how to stop a horse from frothing at the mouth?' 'Teach him how to spit.' The curtain came down!" Crosby slammed his hand against the table to demonstrate the suddenness with which the manager ended the act.

"Singers want to be comedians," he explained. "Comedians want to be singers." But not Crosby. "I like to sing," he said. "Singing in a band was my ultimate goal. The greatest thing that happened to me was two years with Paul Whiteman. In the band were the Dorsey Brothers, Venuti and Lang, Bix Beiderbecke. Being 'round those guys, sitting in dressing rooms — that was heaven to me. I learned an awful lot. They taught me how to sing.

He became America's most popular singer on records and on radio in the early 1930s. "I think I was entrepreneured into success. I was talked into a lot of stuff." On his "Kraft Music Hall" on radio, he sang with everyone from Al Jolson to Yehudi Menuhin. "I sang with Chaliapin," he recalled. "I was at the high point of my life and he didn't know who I was. He just wanted to know where the vodka was."

Singing led naturally to acting, at first in movie shorts, for Mack Sennett, Hal Roach and others. His long-run movie "feud" with Bob Hope began in 1940 with "The Road to Singapore," a well-furrowed comic highway that also took them from Morocco to Utopia.

He talked about the "Road" method: "There was a script, but we had a gagman on the set, Barney Dean, an old vaudevillian. He'd call me aside and say, 'try this.' We'd fool around. If it played well before the camera, we'd keep it in the picture. We'd louse up a lot of scenes, put in a lot of dirty stuff on purpose, mainly for Buddy Da Sylva, who was head of the studio. He'd come running out of the screening room! The scriptwriter also didn't think it was very funny." But Crosby laughs at the memory.

His third — or was it fourth? — career was as a dramatic actor in movies such as "Going My Way" and "The Country Girl." When Leo McCarey first asked him to play a priest in "Going My Way," his answer was "No way!" He didn't think "a crooner could play a priest."

Though he won an Academy Award in 1944 for his performance, and was for five consecutive years named the top money-making movie star, Crosby said, "I never believe myself when I see me on screen. I'm playing the same role: Bing Crosby."

"He said that he felt comfortable in character parts, such as the drunk he played in his last movie, the remake of "Stagecoach." "But to do dramatic scenes with any power, I couldn't handle it. I think Sinatra is a better actor than I am."

And is he a better singer than Sinatra? "No! But the greatest singer I ever heard is Tony Bennett. There are so many that are close: Sinatra, Como, Andy Williams, Nat Cole, John Gary, Neil Diamond, Neil Sedaka. I'm a fella that people can listen to and think if they had tried a little, they could have done just as well. They don't see anything pretentious about me."

Nancy Anderson's

Hollywood Hotline

HOLLYWOOD — Gary and Mary Ann Mobley Collins are as proud as punch of their 8-year-old daughter, Clancy, who appeared with them on the road during the summer in "Irene," when, incidentally, Clancy was only seven.

Gary was on the phone for the announced purpose of talking about an episode of "The Quest" in which he'd just guest-starred. But he was getting a lot more pleasure from talking about his little girl.

"Mary Ann and I were doing 'Cabaret' and 'Irene,' " he said, "and the director put Clancy into one of the dance numbers in 'Irene.'

"Mary Ann and I were nervous wrecks, but she acquitted herself like a seasoned performer.

"She says she wants to be a professional dancer."

"I'm so proud of that child!" Mary Ann whooped, coming in on the extension phone.

As for his appearance in "The Quest," Gary described his role as that of a "tough but decent lawman."

"I don't have to wear a moustache for a role like that anymore.

"I've aged sufficiently that my own wrinkles give me credibility."

Gary's also done an episode of "Roots," a multipart television drama about slavery, in which he was cast against type as a thoroughly nasty slaver.

"I jumped at the chance to play this," said the good looking Collins who is usually the essence of amiability.

"I wore a six-day growth of beard and blackened teeth and got to cut John Amos' foot off. I loved it!"

Returning to something more like this usual stage and screen self, Gary's just portrayed an investigative reporter in "Most Wanted" and has starred in a production of "Send Me No Flowers" at Delta State College in Mississippi.

"I've always been able to make a living," he noted. "I try to work as much as I do, because I like to keep polishing my skills.

"You have to keep up the polish, because sooner or later that great part is going to come along."

BO SVENSON

Bo Svenson was in his trailer dressing room serving margaritas in paper cups without ice, because the only ice on the premises was packed around the foot he'd just broken.

Bo was by the railroad track in Jackson, Tenn., once again portraying the late Tennessee lawman Buford Pusser who was celebrated in "Walking Tall," memorialized in "Part Two Walking Tall," and who's being memorialized further in "Final Chapter — Walking Tall," just finishing production.

It was well that the movie was nearing completion, because earlier in the day Svenson had stepped on a cable, tripped and broken his foot.

The script called for the star to do one more fight scene, but producer Charles Pratt said that wouldn't be necessary. A double could fill in.

Meanwhile a wardrobe man was wondering whether he should die a tennis shoe to match the leather boot Bo was wearing on his good foot or just what he should do about costuming.

"I don't want to wear the tennis shoe," Bo said. "The more support I can get for this foot, the better."

So the wardrobe man split the back of a leather boot and hoped it could be crammed over the broken bone and bandages.

"The last time I broke a foot," Svenson mused, "it was the other one. I was playing ice hockey with the Los Angeles Vikings."

Did he go on with the game?

"Sure," he said.

Rudolph Made Millions

By JEAN M. WHITE

NEW YORK — Songwriter Johnny Marks was having supper in a London restaurant, and a diner at a nearby table, overhearing that this stranger was responsible for a certain song, stalked over to the juke box and pulled out a record.

That song was Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer, and Marks cheerfully acknowledges that there possibly are many others who feel the same way along about Christmas Eve. But then he doesn't have to be that sensitive about Rudolph, the song that has made him a millionaire several times over (more than 113 million records sold) and helps support a 100-year-old Greenwich Village town house and a home in Westport, Conn., both with grand pianos, and a Manhattan office, with an upright piano.

Johnny Marks

Marks, a jaunty 67 with his elegantly groomed goatee and a white turtleneck, lights a dark, mellow cigar and leans back to savor it with satisfaction. He can tell stories on himself and the phenomenon of world-wide Rudolphmania with the self-confident security of a man who has made many trips to the bank.

"I have people come back from Japan and complain bitterly that they couldn't escape even there," he says.

But Marks does point out wistfully that he also would like to be known as the composer of several lovely ballads like To Love and Be Loved and Anyone Can Move a Mountain. His songs, he hastens to add, have been performed by such big names as Glen Miller, Frank Sinatra, Sammy Kaye, Bing Crosby, the Ink Spots and Harry Belafonte.

PLAN No. 74-3106

Traditional Tudor Splendor

A massive stone chimney, gabled entry, a pair of dormers, and leaded-glass windows, combine to create traditional Tudor splendor. This spacious four-bedroom home is well suited to a large family who enjoy the character of old-country styling with the convenience of a truly modern home.

The double-door entry opens to a gracious foyer. Located to the right, is a guest closet and powder room. The central hallway leads to a handy pantry and to the additional entry from the garage.

From the inner hall, leading to the kitchen, stairs give access to the basement. The spacious kitchen offers a U-shaped work centre, adjacent to a large family room with the added bonus of sliding doors to a deck or patio, at the rear.

The kitchen also affords access to the dining room. Presently shown as a closed area, the dining room may be altered to open directly into the living room, by removing a section of the dividing wall between.

The spacious living room is flooded with light from bay windows situated at the front and rear. Cosy warmth comes from a fireplace that may be constructed of either brick or stone.

Equally well-appointed, the second storey is reached by a graceful stairway from the foyer. Storage space is provided in the large linen closet and all four bedrooms feature ample closet space. The master bedroom has a three-piece ensuite, large wardrobe area and the added charm of a dormer alcove — a perfect spot for a writing desk or sewing table!

The main bathroom has been cleverly designed so that the twin vanities can be put to continual use while the bath area is occupied.

Plans for design No. 74-3106 may be obtained at the cost of $65 for the first set and $8 for each additional set, plus $3 postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7 per cent sales tax.

To view more than 300 quality homes of every type send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series No. 32, available for $2. ($1.75 plus 25 cents postage and handling.)

ROLLING STONE

Record Reviews

By DAVE MARSH

THE BEE-GEES
. . . Robin, Barry and Morris Gibb

VARIOUS ARTISTS: "All This and World War Two" (Twentieth Century 2T-522).

What do 28 Beatles songs and World War Two have in common? The movie isn't out yet, but we can guess that they share at least as much as Rod Stewart and Frankie Laine. Stars abound on this soundtrack album — Elton John, Leo Sayer, the Bee Gees, even Helen Reddy — and the songs are all first-rate. How can Lennon-McCartney selections miss? But the London Symphony Orchestra arrangements are often syrupy. Rod Stewart circumvents this brilliantly by adding slide quitar to a remarkable version of "Get Back"; Elton John manages to make his "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds" superior to his earlier version; and Roy Wood, Leo Sayer and Bryan Ferry turn in creditable efforts. The big disappointment is Henry Gross, who tames "Help," a chance to prove that he's the rocker he might be rather than the throw-pillow he sometimes seems. Still, there's no reason to this project, and no way to summarize it. But remember: the Christmas season is the biggest record-selling period of the year.

This album is more than 10 years old, this is its third release and it remains one of the greatest rock albums of all time. All the great Spector artists, including the Ronettes, Crystals and Darlene Love, make appearances, and the sound is utterly fabulous. Spector has always been one of the greatest sentimentalists, in the universe, and he reached his peak on "Silent Night." But the real treats are the Crystals' storming "Santa Claus Is Coming' to Town" and Darlene Love's shattering reading of the original "Christmas (Baby Please Come Home)." This is a necessity for almost anyone who loves rock and roll, particularly those old enough to have children.

LOU REED: "Rock and Roll Heart" (Arista AL 4100).

What would Christmas be without Scrooge? Reed is as weird as ever, and if he really does have what the title claims, it's well hidden. This may rank as the most cynical album ever made, eclipsing even the earlier "Metal Machine Music," if only because Reed bluffs trying on this one. Well, it's like John Lennon said, "One thing you can't hide/Is when you're crippled inside."

WILLIE NELSON: "The Troublemaker" (Columbia-Lone Star KC 34112).

His masterpiece, "Red Headed Stranger," is dark and gloomy — Easter music. This is more joyous, a set of hymns that ranges from "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder" to the original parable, "The Troublemaker," in which Jesus is portrayed as a hippie. A little naive, but the singing is wonderful, and the emotions are real.

Pat Barclay

I still remember the mixture of surprise, pride and dismay with which I realized, one night in 1960, that I had just guessed "whodunit" halfway through a performance of The Mousetrap. Surprise, because I had never divined a Christie solution before Agatha herself had pointed it out. Pride, however foolish, for the same reason. And dismay, because did this mean the pleasures of reading or seeing a Christie product for the first time were over?

Like nearly everybody, I'd been a loyal Christie fan since adolescence. I'd read enough to know that when The Mousetrap solution dawned on me, it was correct. (The hallmark of the Christie solution is its utter obviousness, which only goes to show that the more obvious something is, the harder it is to see.)

I didn't exactly give up reading Agatha Christie after that, but I Proceeded with Caution. Then last week her final book, written in the early 1940's and sealed in her publisher's vault until 1976, arrived at my door. Like the earlier Curtain, this novel was intended as a famous detective's farewell. It's titled Sleeping Murder, Miss Marple's Last Case. And I very much regret to report that, dammit, I guessed whodunit again.

This turn of events means that I'm left unsure of Sleeping Murder's rightful place in the Christie canon. I only know that I enjoyed it anyway, and that you probably will too. It contains at least one cold shiver, a couple of pleasant amateur sleuths, several nicely planted red herring, and plenty of low-key comedy in Miss Marple's inimitable methods of detection. (Here's the opening of a typical Christie-Marple interrogation scene: " 'Down Henry,' said Mrs. Fane to an asthmatic spaniel whose liquid eyes burned with greed. 'Another scone, Miss Marple, while they're hot?' ")

Unlike Poirot in Curtain, Miss Marple closes her last case in the pink of condition. In the considered judgment of Derrick Murdoch, however, both of them are likely to live forever.

Derrick Murdoch reviews mystery and crime fiction for The Globe and Mail. In The Agatha Christie Mystery he makes capable use of the expertise he has garnered over the years to produce a biography that is also a capsule history of detective fiction. Murdoch's enthusiasm for his subject is clearly evident and should endear him to mystery fans everywhere.

"Everywhere" covers a lot of ground, but then so did Agatha Christie. Murdoch declares that "it will probably never be possible even to estimate how much money Agatha Christie earned, directly and indirectly, from her writing. or the total number of books sold. In hardcover and paperback in English and translation, the figure has been guessed as possibly 400 million". Christie books were read from Japan to the Soviet Union. The first film based on Christie's work was made in Germany in 1928. There have been 18 more.

Some sour notes were sounded over the years, notably Raymond Chandler's famous attack in 1944. (He described the typical setting of the classic English detective story as "Cheesecake Manor".) A few of her plays were failures and one, Verdict, was booed from the gallery and closed after 36 performances.

But the success of the film version of Murder on the Orient Express brought a "mighty new surge" of interest in her books and The Mousetrap, as all the world knows, is still running. (Agatha Christie made over all rights to The Mousetrap to her grandson Matthew in 1952, when he was eight years old. Now Matthew lives on a 300-acre estate and administers a family trust.)

Agatha Christie was a shy, musical child educated at home by her mother. A first marriage ended in divorce. On her second marriage, to archaeologist Max Mallowan, 14 years her junior, Murdoch comments: "they were to live happily together for a nearer equivalent of forever-afterwards than the vast majority of humanity can hope for."

The Agatha Christie Mystery describes books by other authors which many of its readers will want to pursue; it evaluates the vast Christie output and provides lists of books, plays and films; it contains numerous photographs, including one by Lord Snowdon which is outstanding, but primarily it seeks to explain the secret of Christie's survival and her overwhelming success.

She was solitary, says Murdoch. And "schoolgirlish". She was a non-literary "lowbrow". She had "exquisite timing." In short, says he, "Agatha Christie was as rare a natural phenomenon as a soprano with command of a flawless basso profundo register", and she wrote "an entrancing collection of 20th century fairy tales of which the world may never tire."

It Brings Dreams of Spring

By HUMPHRY DAVY

"When winter comes, can Spring be far behind?"

Anyone who gets their hands on the new and revised edition of Lewis J. Clark's popular Wild Flowers of British Columbia will pine for spring. At least this is what it did to me as I thumbed through this magnificent volume.

Visions of red bearberries carpeting woodland trails, fairy bells clustered at the foot of tall fir trees and sheets of blue lupines on alpine meadows flashed through my mind.

Some of the superb photographs conjured up boating excursions to wild, windwept islands off the coast of Vancouver Island where my wife and I hunted for rare plants. It's a book which will bring pleasure to anyone who has discovered the wonders of the plant world.

The new book replaces the first edition of which 10,000 copies were snapped up by British Columbians in 1972.

Gray's Publishing has printed 15,000 copies of this edition of which 5,000 are expected to be sold in B.C. and the remainder in the United States.

There have been some changes to give the book greater scope. The title has been changed to Wild FLowers of the Pacific Northwest and 130 additional plants found mainly in Alaska, Washington, Oregon and northern California, have been included.

Some of these plants which now exist only south of the border may some day be colonized in parts of B.C. This happens from time to time. One example is a species of buttercup which thrives on a grassy islet off Oak Bay. It is found nowhere else but in northern California.

Many of the additional plants included in the book are found in the dry and desert areas of Washington, Oregon and occasionally in southern British Columbia. The colored photographs illustrating the flowers mostly come from Clark's collection.

John G. Trelawny, of the University of Victoria, a well known botanist and editor of Clark's popular field guide series, Wild Flowers at the Pacific Northwest, edited the new publication.

It wasn't an easy job. He had to hold the book to the same size as the first edition and add 90 color plates, raising the total to 660.

To find the additional space he had to cut down the size of some of the color plates and omit some of the poetic quotations which were included in the first edition.

I couldn't help thinking, as I studied this book, that Dr. Clark, if he were living today, would also be pleased with this new edition. Regrettably, he died six months after the publication of his lifetime work.

For Everybody Who Loves Hockey

By DON VIPOND

Scott Young is like Team Canada, the best we've got when it comes to writing on hockey, taking pulses in the dressing room, extracting what's in the hearts and minds of the men at the centre of the game.

So this may be the first time you've ever been entertained by Canadian history, by reading an old story which somehow has so much fresh and new about it. This is a soft-cover book which deserves a hard cover and a place in the home of anyone who loves the game because it connects and focuses in a believable way one of two developments which have turned the hockey world around.

Something wonderful has happened in the space occupied by hockey freaks: the bad guys are being routed by the good guys, just like it was always supposed to happen in our old simplistic national dream. But not all of us have figured out who the good guys are. They're the Russians, the Czechs, the Swedes and of course our guys, Team Canada.

Who then are the bad guys? Who else but the gluttonous pro franchise owners who have spawned so shamelessly, trying to make 30 out of 6 and turning our Saturday evenings into restless times indeed.

We were in mortal danger of forgetting what hockey was about until the Reds came along five years ago to remind us. Now we have the Canada Cup, which is maybe only a handful of games every year or two but we couldn't stand anything that good much more often.

What Young has done is gather the words from many of those who were there as to what happened between 1954 and 1974 when Canada sent off her hockey troops to foreign wars.

What happened of course is we started to get beaten and so we began to absorb one of our longest and most painful history lessons: we are no longer alone at the top. Makes you wonder in retrospect what sort of people could have nurtured such an arrogant notion and held it so dear for so long. We're certainly the wiser and hopefully the richer for having it beaten out of us.

WAR ON ICE: Canada in International Hockey, by Scott Young. McClelland and Stewart. $5.95.

Reading Young's book is like sitting over a beer at the pub while he brings you one after another people like Greg Currie (so soon you forget?), Wren Blair, the Warwicks, Seth Martin, Father Bauer, Eagleson and Billy Harris to tell you how they saw it.

They don't bleat and they don't brag but their words remind us of the incredible pressures Canadians put on the undergunned teams we sent to these contests. God knows they weren't angels but many of them showed great courage and endured much torment, some from their own ignorance, much from absurd officiating and more from a Russian specialty, psychological warfare.

And year after year they came home and were unable to convince us it wasn't a case of them forgetting their divine edict to win; it was a matter of the accelerating Europeans remaining unconvinced.

A happy feature of this book is it ends with the WHA-Soviet series in 1974. That leaves the Canada Cup for another day.

A Disappointing Trio

A new novel by A. J. Cronin, Kingsley Amis or Iris Murdoch would normally rate a full-length review. To group new novels by all three may seem like cavalier treatment of these well-known British writers, but I make no apology for doing so for, in my opinion, only one of the three novels is worth more than a passing mention.

Dr. Cronin, like his contemporary J. B. Priestley, who still occasionally bursts into print, is a novice from the past; sadly, what we now hear is the merest echo.

Two of his early novels, The Stars Look Down, and The Citadel, made a terrific impact on my social consciousness when I read them at an impressionable age. Shortly after publication of the latter novel Cronin embraced Roman Catholicism with the customary zeal of the convert, and although he continued to produce novels he never recaptured the power and intensity displayed in his earlier work.

Religionism necessarily inhibits a novelist, but in Cronin's case one fondly hoped that craftsmanship would triumph over dogma. Regretfully, his latest effort, the just-published Lady with Carnations, finally puts paid to that hope.

This is a contrived love story in which every move is telegraphed to the reader well ahead of its happening. The characters are sympathetic and, certainly, the novel has the old-fashioned virtue of a well-worked-out little plot. But it's a snack rather then a meal, a lightweight performance by a writer who still has the gift but can seemingly no longer use it to advantage.

It seems unlikely that religionism will ever be a problem for Kingsley Amis, he's far too irreverent for that. In fact, poor Cronin will be most distressed if he should read The Alteration, in which Amis ridicules the Roman Church.

The year is 1976, but there is a marked difference. Due to an alteration in history, England, like most of the world, is virtually ruled by a Machiavellian Pope. Piety is rampant, science is a forbidden word and New England is a wild place of exile for Schismatics and common criminals. In the Amis Catholic setting dress is a mixture of Tudor rural and Vatican Swiss guard, speech is 17th century, and thinking is discouraged.

The story centres on a 10-year-old chorister, poor Hubert Anvil, the best boy singer in living memory. The abbot proposes he undergo a simple operation to preserve his heavenly voice at the cost of his earthly pleasure. Hubert's pious father agrees to the "alteration", reassuring the boy that his voice is a gift from God and that, as he will never experience manhood, he won't miss it.

Hubert's wayward mother and her priest-confessor, with whom she is having a torrid affair, disagree. They maintain that the glory of God is not much compensation for missing out on the joy of sex, and Hubert's experienced brother heartily agrees. Convinced, Hubert tries to escape — only to find himself in a world where to be a runaway is a dangerous crime and a deadly sin.

Amis is a clever writer; that is to say he makes of cleverness a virtue. In The Alteration this cleverness is carried to an extreme length and fails to produce the effect Amis clearly strove for.

The rearrangement of past and present in order to tilt at Catholicism tends to be heavy-handed, whereas it calls for subtlety.

I don't know, maybe the fault is mine. Perhaps one has to be very clever, or at least as convoluted in one's thinking as Amis, in order to savor the full flavor, and I think I could have managed by working hard at it, but, frankly, I didn't feel that this novel justified the effort involved.

A considerable effort is also called for if one is fully to understand the last, and best, of this trio of novels, Henry and Cato, by the indefatigable Iris Murdoch, who has now written 18 novels, three plays, and two philosophical works.

MURDOCH . . . inner war

Henry and Cato is a story of two prodigal sons. Henry returns from a self-imposed exile in America to an unforseen inheritance of wealth and land in England. He is also returning to his mother. His friend Cato is struggling with two ambiguous intermingled passions, one for a God who may or may not exist, the other for a petty criminal who may or may not be capable of salvation.

»As Cato's father and sister wait to welcome him back to sanity after his dubious escapades, Henry, meanwhile, confronts his mother, the unappeased furies of childish resentment, and various possibilities of revenge. He also wants to save his soul, and to save Stephanie, a tragic adventuress and an unexpected part of his inheritance.

Henry's cool mother watches; Cato's impetuous sister intervenes. The question is, can love become a saving force, or is it condemned to be possessive and demonic? After vicissitudes that include blackmail, violence, and homicide, sanity prevails and Henry and Cato return home at last.

Like all Miss Murdoch's novels this one can be read on two levels, either as a well-paced, undemanding story, or as yet another experiment in philosophy, always remembering that with this writer the philosophy don is constantly at war with the novelist.

Technically, Miss Murdoch's experiments in fiction bear a superficial resemblance to T. S. Eliot's experiments in drama. Beginning with The Cocktail Party, Eliot sought, by means of poetic ritual, to give expression to the ultimate themes of man's search for truth and of the conflict between forces of good and evil.

Miss Murdoch has consistently tried to combine ritualistic actions and the conventions of undemanding popular fiction. Despite their sophisticated veneer, few of her novels — and the newest one is no exception — rise far above the level of this popular mode.

Henry and Cato is not outstanding fiction, by any means, but read purely and simply as a light novel it is satisfying enough. Should one look deeper and find there is little of consequence one runs the risk of repeating the betises of art gallery curators who read greatness into nondescript abstract paintings in order to cover up their own considerable confusion.

Science Fiction: Ticket Back to Childhood

By JULIAN REID

Not long ago, an acquaintance demanded that I explain just why I am addicted to science-fiction.

Why, indeed? I can think of many reasons; and not the least is the genre's capacity to reawaken the wide-eyed vision of childhood: that breathless sense that anything is possible — anything at all — and that wherever you go, the horizon always spreads endlessly outwards to infinity.

Certainly this innocent openness is the essence of Ray Bradbury's vision. Someone once called him "America's oldest professional boy" — and at his worst, he writes exactly like the wizened, self-conscious child-impersonator that gibe suggests. But Bradbury in his best moments remains supremely capable of recapturing the innocent vision of youth, in all its golden luminousity and its sometimes overpowering consciousness of the dark realities of terror and unfeeling betrayal.

That is why I am both pleased and disappointed by his new collection, Long After Midnight — disappointed because most of the 22 stories here are failures or only qualified successes, pleased because a half-dozen are vintage Bradbury. One in particular has long been one of my favorites: Forever and the Earth, first published in 1948, which tells how Thomas Wolfe is resurrected to write the saga of the coming Age of Space.

Even better — one of the best Bradburys ever — is The Messiah, in which a young priest on Mars hungers for a visitation by the risen Christ. Then there is One Timeless Spring, a vivid evocation of the terrors of growing up and knowing you are slowly and unwillingly being transformed from a carefree child into a member of that alien species, adults. Interval in Sunlight, despite some obtrusive symbolism, is a powerful portrayal of the hell a marriage can be. And an all-renewing draught of childish innocence is prescribed as the only specific against the horrors of urban life in Drink Entire: Against the Madness of Crowds.

These stories have a lingering resonance: like childhood memories, they return to haunt me. It is precisely this that is lacking in most of the nine Soviet SF stories Mirra Ginsburg has collected in The Air of Mars. Yet here, too, the dominant theme is innocence.

Victor Kolyupayev's A Ticket to Childhood even shares a common motif with Bradbury's The Utterly Perfect Murder — that of a railroad trip back to one's vanished youth. But Bradbury's story, though not one of his best, comes to a meaningful point; whereas Kolyupayev's hinges on an unconvincing gimmick. The majority of Ginsburg's other selections are similarly thin: theirs is a cotton-candy innocence, sweet but insubstantial.

Only two are first-rate. My favorite is The White Pilot, by Mikhail Yemtsev and Yeremey Parnov, in which a lone castaway on the Galapagos is befriended by a dolphin. But more significant, perhaps, is Gennady Gor's The Garden, a sad-funny parable about a young graduate of the Institute of Sorcery and Fairy-Tales who can transform himself at will into a flower-garden — until the forces of stolid convention and unimaginative officialdom wear him down.

The world, as most of us know to our pain, is not yet ready to tolerate such innocently nonconformist behavior; that is why we waking dreamers are forced to turn to books for spiritual sustenance. Will it ever be otherwise? Perhaps in that distant era, some millions of years hence, to which Michael Moorcock transportus in The End of All Songs — an era when "the cycle of Earth is nearing its close, and the human race has at last ceased to take itself seriously."

Actually, that quotation comes from Moorcock's prologue to An Alien Heat, the first volume of the trilogy which was continued in The Hollow Lands, and which The End of All Songs now brings to a close. The three demand to be read together, in sequence, since none is complete in itself, despite the publisher's claims to the contrary. Together they constitute one long novel, The Dancers at the End of Time, which to my taste is one of the most rewarding pieces of SF to appear in the last decade. Not so incidentally, it is also one of the funniest.

The setting is a madhouse utopia of uninhibited aestheticism — a kind of "fin de siecle" daydream produced by cross-breeding the jaded fancies of an Aubrey Beardsley with the perfervid preoccupations of the youthful H. G. Wells. Its inhabitants are a motley assortment of immortal hedonists, all of them virtually omnipotent and absolutely amoral.

But one, Jherek Carnelian, is a natural-born innocent. One day, on a whim, he determines to learn the long-lost "secret of 'virtue.'" As the universe disintegrates around him, Jherek embarks on his "moral education" by falling in love with Mrs. Amelia Underwood, a staunchly pious housewife who has been forcibly snatched into this madcap future from her husband's house in the staidly respectable suburb of Bromley, Kent, in the year 1896. The ensuing comedy of morals, in which Mrs. Underwood proves herself a worthy match for the swooning Jherek, is insanely inventive throughout, lurching inexorably towards the splendid serio-comic Apocalypse which stands at the trilogy's climax.

All this, Moorcock assures us with tongue only partly in cheek, "is probably the last story in the annals of the human race; and, as it happens, it is not dissimilar to that which many believe is the first." Innocence lost and innocence regained — the cycle makes a fitting entry into the endless "multivers" of SF, in which imagination knows no bounds and consequently all things are (more or less) possible.

Why am I addicted to SF? Perhaps because, for me, its magic pages are truly a ticket to childhood, and to all that boundless infinity of potentialities on which it opens.

LONG AFTER MIDNIGHT, by Ray Bradbury. Random House. $8.95.

THE AIR OF MARS, edited and translated by Mirra Ginsburg. Collier-Macmillan. $6.95.

Lawren Harris: The Quest Of The Artist

By HELEN ROBERTS

Northrop Frye, in his substantial introduction to "Lawren Harris" says, "This remarkable book presents a fine selection of Lawren Harris' paintings in the context of the various speeches, essays, poems, letters, notebook jottings, and drafts of books by which he tried to express his conception of art as an activity of life, and not something separable from it. What he says forms the context of the paintings, and the paintings from the context of what he says."

The color photos of Harris's paintings are gorgeous, and the size of the pages (8½-11 inches) is large enough to do them justice. The lay-out features enough white space for the eye to be undistracted by print or two paintings on the same page. Nor does the book suffer from having one painting spread over two pages, a common flaw in even the most expensive of art books.

The selection of paintings is good, too, achieving a representative sample of Harris' work from 1910 to 1969. The paintings are illuminated by excerpts from Harris's writings which are interesting in themselves and take on a further dimension when related to paintings with similar themes.

Both Harris' notes and paintings show a constant striving for definition not only of those questions which preoccupy the artist (What is expressionism? symbolism? art?) but also of the self. Or, as Harris puts it, "Art . . . embodies the experience of the search for enduring values."

This quest is reflected in the four phases of the artist's work. Harris' early paintings (1910-1920) are mostly street scenes and houses. In these, the canvas is boldly covered with red, gold, and earth tones. These paintings are so warm and vibrant, the street so crowded with trees and houses, one scarcely notices the absence of human figures in most of them. In those that do contain people, the figures tend to be dwarfed, or to be absorbed into a patch of shade or color.

From 1918 to 1930, Harris made frequent trips into the Canadian wilderness. Such well-known paintings as "Above Lake Superior," "Pic Island", and "Mt. Robson," date from this period. The palette in this phase is more subdued, with stark contrasts between, white, blue, black and earth tones. The color range is appropriate to the barrenness Harris chooses to depict. The harshness of strong, simple shapes, dramatic contrasts, and a limited palette is mitigated somewhat by undulating lines and organic forms.

It is perhaps revealing that it is this group of paintings are what many people regard as typical of "The Group of Seven" and Canadian art. Could it be that the paradox implicit in these works, the tension between light and dark, cold and warmth, isolation yet presence, reflects our insecurity as Canadians?

After this period, Harris' work becomes increasingly abstract. Such paintings as "Mountain Experience" (1954) and "The Bridge" (1938) are pregnant with symbolism. Both Northrop Frye and Harris see this change as a move towards universality of experience and expression because it is a move away from the representational and particular.

It seems to me, however, that these paintings reflect a movement away from the universal because they are symbolic and because their iconography is personal and arbitrary. Discord of both line and color in "Migratory Flight" and "Mountain Experience" suggest personal conflict, or the vision of a hostile universe.

The paintings "Abstraction" (1945) and "Composition No. 1" (1940) with their circles, triangles and geometric planes are reminiscent of a mechanistic, uncaring cosmos, not mountains and horizons as Frye suggests. The progression of Harris' work here does not conjure intimations of immortality, but rather a flight from all that is human.

A sort of balance is achieved in the paintings dated after 1954. The lines are softer, the colors more harmonious, though less vibrant than in Harris' early works. Red and yellow are prominent again, but in pastel, not primary colors. Harris returns to undulating curves, but they too are softer, more indefinite. The spiritual plane that Harris has reached is not the peak of universal experience, but a retreat into an all-too personal Nirvana.

Still, this book has something for everyone, whether it be enjoying the paintings, reading, stretching the mind and senses, or just findinding an adornment for the coffee-table.

All About Poppets And Widow's Men

Ancient mariners, modern mariners, professional and amateur seamen are bound to be interested in this impressive publication from the Oxford University Press. Bookish people have long relied upon the Oxford Companion series of volumes for factual reference and succinct information relating to literary subjects, music, the theatre, etc. Now we have the Oxford Companion to Ships and the Sea.

This encyclopaedic volume is alive with all manner of nautical facts, anecdotes and history. Biographies of great seamen, accounts of naval battles, many aspects of navigation and seamanship, histories of famous ships and even specimens of marine vernacular are included.

The main articles are written by specialists in their subject. These are interspersed with fascinating entries for the eclectic reader. The editor, Peter Kemp, educated at Royal Navy colleges and later invalided from the navy, has published widely on yachting and naval subjects, so, not surprisingly, he has produced an informative, well-illustrated book.

Have you ever wondered who widows' men were, what a poppet is, or when a gellywatte was used? This book will give you the answers. It is a strongly recommended possession for all who go down to the sea in ships, landlubbers who do not — but are curious — and all those fantasy-ridden car drivers who would rather be sailing — A.M.H.
